Our history

Over two centuries ago, the foundations of the company were laid in pioneering fashion when in 1798 Richard Taylor launched the Philosophical Magazine, one of the first scientific journals produced by an independent company. It was the start of much close collaboration with scholarly societies. Dr William Francis, a chemist, joined Richard Taylor in 1852 and continued the tradition of the close links between the academic community and the company.

Today, we continue to be fully committed to the publication of academic and scholarly information of the highest quality and this remains our primary goal.

Taylor & Francis has grown rapidly to become a leading international, academic publisher. With offices across the globe, the Taylor & Francis Group now publishes more than 2,200 journals and over 5,200 new books each year; with a books backlist in excess of 110,000 specialist titles.

Prices featured are correct at time of going to press but are subject to change without notice.

Book orders should be addressed to the Taylor & Francis Customer Services Department at Hachette, or the appropriate overseas agent.

Aesthetic Ethics

Towards A Moral Imagination

Edited by M. Mookie C. Manalili , David Goodman Woods College of Advancing Studies, Boston College; Director, Psychology and the Other Institute; Harvard Medical School, Diana Boros

Series: Psychology and the Other

The book seeks to challenge and expand the boundaries of how we conceive ethics and morality, proposing that beauty, sublimity and emotional resonances found in the realm of the arts are essential for re-imagining a more just and compassionate world. Aesthetic Ethics hosts the voices and scholarship of significant figures across disciplines, addressing questions at the intersections of aesthetic theory, ethical psychotherapy, and the social order. Practitioners, as well as students and researchers of the humanities, the arts, politics, philosophy, psychology, psychosocial studies, sociology and social work alike will find this an illuminating and revivifying read.

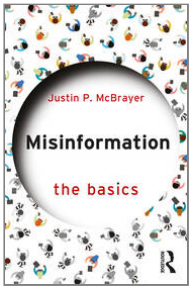
Misinformation: The Basics



Justin P. McBrayer Fort Lewis College, USA

Series: The Basics

This book introduces readers to the topic of misinformation. In recent years, many people have become worried about fake news, misinformation, disinformation, and the like. Is this concern justified or a moral panic over nothing? Misinformation: The Basics provides readers with a short, accessible introduction to the topic. With a glossary of key terms, suggestions for further reading, and lesson plans for teachers and reading groups, Misinformation: The Basics is an ideal starting point for audiences interested in the study of news and information.

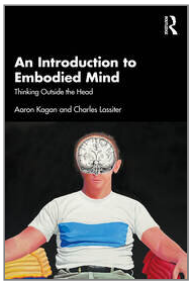
An Introduction to Embodied Mind

Thinking Outside the Head



Aaron Kagan , Charles Lassiter

An Introduction to Embodied Mind: Thinking Outside the Head offers readers a valuable gateway to understanding one of the most exciting ideas in philosophy and cognitive science: that minds are not confined to the brain but extend into the body and environment. Written in a clear, engaging style, the book guides readers through competing views of embodiment and shows how they matter for everyday life.

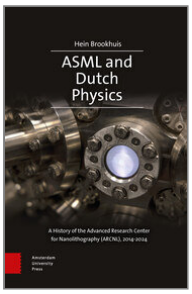
ASML and Dutch Physics

A History of the Advanced Research Center for Nanolithography (ARCNL), 2014-2024



Hein Brookhuis

ASML and Dutch Physics draws on archival research and interviews to offer insight into how science and industry interact, the motivations that drive such partnerships, and how scientific and technological perspectives are balanced. It reveals how the political and societal context of the twenty-first century imposes new demands on contemporary scientists.

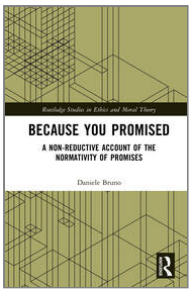
Because You Promised

A Non-Reductive Account of the Normativity of Promises



Daniele Bruno Humboldt University of Berlin, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

As a moral phenomenon, promises have long received attention in debates within both normative ethics and metaethics. This book defends a novel trust-based form of non-reductivism about promises and promissory normativity. This view retains the intuitive plausibility of a non-reductive account of promissory normativity, according to which the mere fact that one has validly promised is sufficient to render a breach of promise morally wrong. At the same time, it also provides a powerful and theoretically appealing value-based explanation of our promissory power, a type of explanation traditionally thought to be limited only to reductive accounts of promissory normativity.

British Philosophy in the Long Eighteenth Century

Themes from Kenneth P. Winkler

Edited by Bridger Ehli Indiana University Bloomington, USA, Matthew A. Leisinger York University, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

No one has done more to deepen our appreciation of eighteenth-century British philosophy than Kenneth P. Winkler. Winkler's work has had a decisive influence on our understanding of virtually all the period's major figures and has also helped to bring light to the enduring philosophical significance of less well-known figures. The chapters in this volume extend our understanding of themes that have been illuminated by Winkler's work, covering a wide range of topics and figures in eighteenth-century British philosophy.

Friendship: Philosophical Explorations

Edited by R. Lanier Anderson Stanford University, USA, Andrew Huddleston University of Warwick, UK, Jessica Moss New York University, USA

Friendship has been a central topic for philosophical reflection ever since philosophy itself was born in the circle of friends who gathered around Socrates to follow his probing examinations of how we should live. In this collection, which takes it lead from the work of Alexander Nehamas, a roster of distinguished philosophers examine the many dimensions of the philosophy of friendship. Friendship: Philosophical Explorations will be of interest to those in philosophy studying and researching ethics and aesthetics, as well as for those in related disciplines such as literature and film.

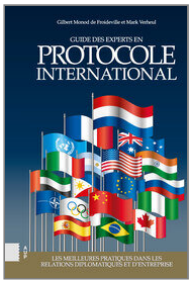
Guide des experts en protocole international

Les meilleures pratiques dans les relations diplomatiques et d'entreprise



Gilbert Monod de Froideville , Mark Verheul

Bien que la vie moderne soit de plus en plus décontractée, dans de nombreux secteurs, le protocole règne toujours en maître. Le guide propose un aperçu des pratiques qui lui sont associées, notamment dans le cadre des relations diplomatiques et du monde des affaires. Se concentrant sur un large éventail de pays, le livre aborde des sujets tels que la préséance, la disposition des sièges, les drapeaux, les cérémonies, les invitations, les codes vestimentaires, les cadeaux et les honneurs, ainsi que les rôles du responsable du protocole, de l'invité et de l'hôte.

Human Rights and East Asian Philosophy

Traditional and Recent Approaches

Edited by Benedict S. B. Chan , Baldwin Wong

Series: East Asian Philosophy and Political Thought

Human rights, viewed as universal moral rights since the 1948 Universal Declaration, are increasingly examined in relation to non-Western traditions. This edited volume explores the intersection of East Asian philosophies - Confucianism, Buddhism, and Daoism - with human rights discourse, examining whether these ancient traditions can accommodate universal values while preserving their core philosophical foundations. The collection features scholarly analyses of how traditional East Asian thought engages with contemporary human rights, including privacy rights, environmental rights, and epistemic rights.

Kant's Legacy for the 21st Century

Knowledge, Culture, Beauty

Edited by Jessica Leech King's College London, UK, Andrija Šoć University of Belgrade, Serbia

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

The question of just how exactly and to what extent Kant is important in today's philosophical landscape bears repeated exploration. This volume explores the significance of Kant's philosophy for metaphysics, epistemology, metaphilosophy and metaontology, philosophy of action, ethics, aesthetics, and political philosophy. The chapters address topics that range from the concept of corporate agency, language and culture within the context of Kant's philosophy, gustatory aesthetics, the unexplored connections between the contemporary political category of communitarianism with central ideas in Kant's aesthetics, and more.

Karl Popper and the Open Future of the Philosophy of Science

Edited by Yafeng Shan

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Science

This volume revisits and explores Popper's legacy for contemporary philosophy of science. It develops Popper's important insights on the methodology and nature of science and investigates new directions in philosophy of science inspired by Popper's work. The chapters examine the problem of induction, the demarcation problem, the notion of verisimilitude, critical rationalism, methodological individualism, as well as the relevance and implications of Popper's ideas for the philosophy of the natural and social sciences from new perspectives.

Late Peirce

The Life and Thought of Charles S. Peirce from 1900-1914

Edited by Jeffrey R. Di Leo University of Houston-Victoria, USA, Dinda L. Gorlée University of Bergen, Norway

Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

This volume explores the later life and thought of Charles S. Peirce, a period that spans from 1900 until his death in 1914. It is the first volume devoted to this period of Peirce's philosophical work. Peirce developed a modern logic that was influenced by changes he saw in the interdisciplinary study of science and technology, transforming his Pragmatism into his Pragmaticism. He also situated the "new" mathematics as a labyrinth of semiotic signs through which the quasi-mind of the logician could find a specialized sense to intuit the evolutionary semiosis of reality. The chapters in this volume examine all major dimensions of his thought during this period.

Many Ways to Think About Harvest

Communicating Across Disciplines

Ilona Kater

Effective and creative solutions to complex global problems often need teams with diverse knowledge and experience. Yet, rising polarisation and confrontational attitudes can make meaningful dialogue across differences feel daunting. This book explores how to make collaborations possible, through focusing on what people really mean rather than just the words they say, using a case study of the deceptively simple word "harvest".

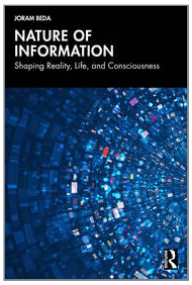
Nature of Information

Shaping Reality, Life, and Consciousness



Joram Beda

This book redefines information as reality's fundamental fabric, not mere data. Drawing from quantum physics, biology, AI & metaphysics, it explores how information shapes cosmos, consciousness & civilization. Examines how evolution is driven by information processing, neural complexity creates consciousness & tech mirrors thought architecture. Connects classical theories like entropy & natural selection to modern advances: integrated information theory, quantum computation & recursive AI. Invaluable for students/researchers in information theory, physics, biology, computer science, neuroscience & philosophy of mind.

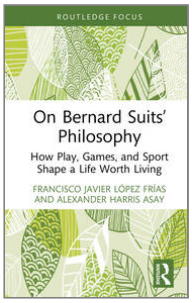
On Bernard Suits' Philosophy

How Play, Games, and Sport Shape a Life Worth Living



Francisco Javier López Frías , Alexander H. Asay

Series: Ethics and Sport

On Bernard Suits' Philosophy situates Suits' work within philosophy, play and leisure studies, as well as the philosophy of sport. It introduces his core ideas and offers a comprehensive interpretation, presenting Suits as a thinker who explores gameplay to ask how one can live well. This book is intended for scholars, graduate students, and advanced undergraduates in philosophy, sport studies, and leisure or game studies. It also appeals to readers in related fields—such as political theory, work studies, and existential philosophy—and to general readers interested in perennial philosophical questions, especially those concerning how to live well.

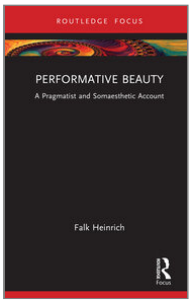
Performative Beauty

A Pragmatist and Somaesthetic Account



Falk Heinrich Aalborg University, Denmark

Series: Routledge Focus on Philosophy

This book develops an original theory of performative beauty by reconsidering and reworking Deweyan pragmatic aesthetics through the lens of somaesthetics, contemporary embodiment theories, and philosophies of play. It challenges conventional Western epistemological distinctions between subject and object, agency and patiency, and artist and audience. Through an exploration of concepts such as somaesthetic awareness, unity, aesthetic presence, objectivization, transaction, playfulness, and consummation, the author constructs a comprehensive framework for understanding beauty as a sentient enactment of playful transactions between the human being and their environment.

Power, Knowledge, and Covid-19

The Making of a Scientific Orthodoxy

Alex Broadbent Durham University, Pieter Streicher University of Johannesburg and Durham University

Power, Knowledge, and Covid-19: The Making of a Scientific Orthodoxy shows, step by step, how a dominant scientific line on Covid-19 was built and defended—and what it left out. Pairing clear conceptual analysis with accessible evidence reviews, the authors probe where models misled, where uncertainty was overstated or understated, and where costs, context, and equity were neglected—especially in low-resource settings. For readers in philosophy, public health, policy, and beyond, this is a concise, non-polemical account of what went wrong, what went right, and how to do better next time.

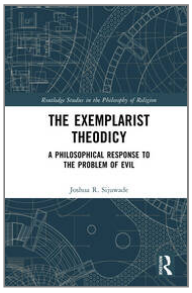
The Exemplarist Theodicy

A Philosophical Response to the Problem of Evil



Joshua R. Sijuwade London School of Theology, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Religion

This book presents a novel approach to the problem of evil. Drawing upon insights from moral philosophy, cognitive science, and religious thought, it develops a framework for understanding how suffering serves as a necessary condition for the highest forms of human and animal flourishing. The book demonstrates that God allows suffering because it is necessary for three dimensions of flourishing: personal flourishing through participation in basic goods, creative flourishing through self-formation, and moral flourishing through transformation into exemplars who ground morality through virtues like wisdom, courage, and charity.

Virtue Theory and Video Games

Level Up Your Character

Edited by Sarah C. Malanowski Florida Atlantic University, USA, Nicholas R. Baima Florida Atlantic University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Applied Ethics

This volume explores the intersection of virtue theory and video games. By bringing together emerging and established scholars who analyze video game ethics from a virtue-theoretical perspective, this volume both fills gaps in the literature and provides a foundation for advancing discussions in the emerging field of video game ethics. It covers a wide range of topics, offering both abstract analyses of the application of virtue theory to video game ethics and practical insights into the impact of gaming on our relationships, communities, and individual self-conception.

Writing for Third Parties. Commercial Manuscript Production

Queeste, volume 2025, volume 32-1

Edited by Patricia Stoop

To advance current debates on manuscript production and introduce new perspectives to the field Writing for Third Parties: Commercial Manuscript Production in the Late Middle Ages brings together eight articles that delve into the material, financial, and social dimensions of manuscript production in the late medieval Low Countries and the neighbouring regions of Hainaut and Alsace. The contributors illuminate the commercial viability of manuscript-making, the individuals and workshops involved, and the complex networks of labour, trade, and patronage that shaped medieval text culture.

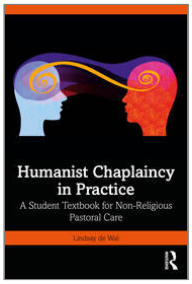
Humanist Chaplaincy in Practice

A Student Textbook for Non-Religious Pastoral Care



Lindsay de Wal

Humanist Chaplaincy in Practice is the first dedicated textbook on secular chaplaincy. This accessible and timely book equips students, professionals, and institutions to deliver inclusive emotional and spiritual support across belief systems. It draws on the author's doctoral research into the lived experience of non-religious chaplains working in faith-based teams, as well as her leadership in shaping national policy and EU-wide training standards. This is an essential guide for the next generation of chaplains and care professionals seeking to offer compassionate, ethical and human-centred support in today's pluralist societies.

Native American Religions

Teaching and Learning on Stolen Land

Edited by Dana Lloyd

Native American Religions: Teaching and Learning on Stolen Land is an introduction to the religious life of Native American people in North America. Weaving together historical, ethnographic, theoretical, and legal materials, the book focuses on how religion is politicized in North America in the Native American context. This book introduces students to the histories of Native American peoples, including discussion of Indigenous intellectual traditions, Indigenous sovereignty movements, and practices such as cultural appropriation and land acknowledgement to make the case that Native American religions are a political phenomenon.

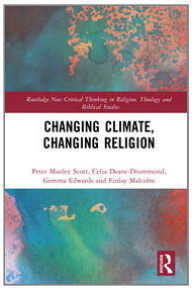
Changing Climate, Changing Religion



Peter Manley Scott , Celia Deane-Drummond , Gemma Edwards University of Manchester, UK, Finlay Malcolm

Series: Routledge New Critical Thinking in Religion, Theology and Biblical Studies

This book analyses the wide-ranging changes occurring across Christian theology as religious environmental activists and advocates understand their part in 'saving the planet'. As the planet's climate changes, so are the theologies of the Christians working to address it. Amongst the Christian organisations taking action to tackle the climate crisis, creative theological ideas are emerging that motivate their environmentalist work. Changing Climate, Changing Religion is valuable reading for those across the humanities and social sciences interested in the role that religions occupy in addressing environmental crises.

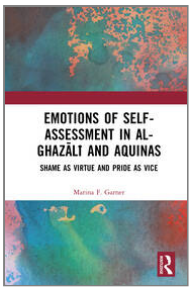
Emotions of Self-Assessment in Al-Ghazālī and Aquinas

Shame as Virtue and Pride as Vice



Marina F. Garner

This book offers a comparative study of two central yet often neglected moral emotions—shame and pride—in the ethical writings of Abū Ḥāmid al-Ghazālī and Thomas Aquinas. Moving beyond conventional accounts of medieval philosophy focused on metaphysics or law, it reveals how each thinker reinterprets Aristotelian virtue ethics through the lens of religious commitment. It offers not only a fresh reading of key figures but also a new framework for understanding how religious beliefs and practices can shape the valence of emotions.

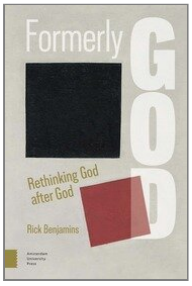
Formerly God

Rethinking God after God



Rick Benjamins

This book begins with the controversial work of Dutch theologian Harry Kuitert, who bid farewell to old representations of God but got stuck finding new ones. It turns back to the important and indispensable insights of Hegel and Heidegger. It presents contemporary post-theistic thinking about God, using German, French, and American thinkers, distinguishing interpretive theologians, deconstructionists, and constructive theologians, finally formulating a new position.

Philosophical Engagements with N.T. Wright

History and Epistemology

Edited by Joshua Cockayne , Mitchell Mallary

Series: Routledge Studies in Analytic and Systematic Theology

N.T. Wright has had a significant influence on Christian thought in the past half century, covering an impressive array of topics throughout his career and engaging with philosophical thinkers and subject matter. This volume brings leading figures in analytic theology and philosophy of religion into conversation with Wright's corpus. The chapters focus, in particular, on issues concerning the epistemology of religious belief and the role of history in forming such beliefs.Together they offer a critical assessment of Wright's scholarship and a valuable perspective on many of the issues that he has devoted his career to addressing.

Seven Classical Perspectives for Islam and Science

Edited by Shoaib Ahmed Malik

Series: Routledge Science and Religion Series

This book examines how seven major classical Islamic thinkers, from Abū Manṣūr al-Māturīdī to Taqī al-Dīn Ibn Taymiyya, developed distinctive metaphysical and theological worldviews that continue to shape how Muslims might engage questions of science and religion today. This volume is written for researchers, educators, and students of theology, philosophy, and science and religion, and for anyone seeking to understand how classical Islamic thought can offer fresh resources for engaging contemporary science.

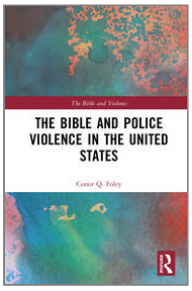
The Bible and Police Violence in the United States



Conor Q. Foley

Series: The Bible and Violence

This book traces the dynamics of biblical influence on police violence in the United States. As new escalations of state violence are inflected by an ascendent Christian nationalism, the Bible has been reasserted as a source of legitimacy, a cosmological blueprint, and a narrative force. While critically examining the use of the Bible to justify police violence, the volume also presents alternative interpretive possibilities that find reparative, redemptive, and anti-carceral lines of thought in the Bible, offering a liberative and irenic counter-reading of Scripture.

The Book of the Light of the Great Magistery of John of Rupescissa (Liber lucis magisterii magni)

Sources of Alchemy and Chemistry: Sir Robert Mond Studies in the History of Early Chemistry

Lawrence M. Principe

This is the first critical edition, modern English translation, and focussed study of John of Rupescissa's Book of Light of the Great Magistery. Based on over 100 surviving manuscripts, this critical edition restores substantial original text that was omitted from the printed editions and corrects longstanding textual errors. Principe explores John's sources and ideas, and follows the transmission, reception, vernacularization, and modifications of the text. Modern laboratory reworkings accompany the textual analyses, providing a vivid picture of the friar's practices and observational skills and deeper understanding of his text.

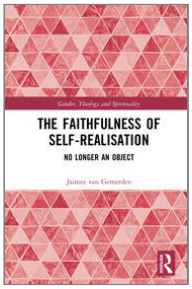
The Faithfulness of Self-Realisation

No Longer an Object



Jaimee van Gemerden

Series: Gender, Theology and Spirituality

This book focuses on self-realisation as a faithful way to pursue relationship with God. It considers the issue of objectification faced by women within Christian religion and makes a theological case for the pursuit of selfhood, as understood in an existentialist ontology, which is not selfish or individualistic. Ultimately, this volume shows that the self is no longer something to lose or hide in dependence on an Other, there is no longer an imperative to be objectified but, rather, there is an encouragement to self-realisation as part of a faithful relationship with God. The book will be of particular interest to scholars of feminist theology.

Food and Gender

Making the Modern World

Candice Goucher

Food and Gender: Making the Modern World places food and gender at the center of the human experience and through this creates a new periodization for modern world history. In focusing on food and gender, and the connections between them, the books shows that a shift in the markers of modernity is needed, away from the traditional perspectives organizing this history that emphasize war, political states, and the global economy which often exclude and marginalize women and trivialize the study of foodways.

An Environmental History of Knowledge and Politics

Forestry in Nineteenth- and Twentieth-Century Hungary

Róbert Balogh

The history of forestry is a particularly promising subject to study. Environmental concerns and the large-scale commodification of forests, often with state participation, have been walking hand-in-hand since at least the mid-eighteenth century. Moreover, the history of the development of forestry's standardised methodology is a global history. This book describes the efforts and experiences of trained foresters driven by competing priorities, as well as their impact on the society, landscape and politics of Hungary between about 1860 and 1975.

Charity and Community in Montpellier, 13th - 16th Centuries

The Multiplication of Loaves

Lucie Laumonier

This book tells the story of the 'Charity' of Montpellier, a city-wide distribution of alms held once a year from the thirteenth to the sixteenth century. Through the investigation of the emergence, history and disappearance of the Montpellier Charity, the book argues that these city-wide annual distributions of alms, while merely symbolic, served a defining purpose: unifying the community around the shared value of charity, and celebrating the community's civic identity. It addresses graduates, postgraduates and scholars interested in medieval history, charity, urban history, poverty relief, and the pivot towards the Renaissance.

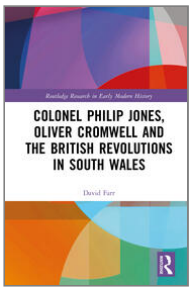
Colonel Philip Jones, Oliver Cromwell and the British Revolutions in South Wales



David Farr

Series: Routledge Research in Early Modern History

This volume centres on Colonel Philip Jones but touches on others – most notably, Griffith Lloyd and Rowland Dawkins – who were part of his political network. These three men, all from Glamorgan and linked as kin, emerged from lives on the fringes of Welsh gentry status to imprint themselves on the wider world and historical record as part of the military struggle against Charles I and then as agents in Cromwell's British state.

Cultural Perceptions of Health, Illness and the Body in Medieval and Early Modern Europe

Edited by Anni Hella , Anu Korhonen

Series: Premodern Health, Disease, and Disability

Cultural Perceptions of Health, Illness and Medicine in Medieval and Early Modern Europe explores the rich cultural history of bodily experience through diverse case studies spanning from Italy to Sweden and from England to the Levant. Covering a broad temporal span from the fourteenth to the nineteenth century, this collection of essays reimagines the role of material bodies and their social and emotional significance in medieval and early modern cultural history. The work offers fresh insights into the intersection of medicine, culture, and society across five centuries of European experience.

Early Modern Overseas Careers

East-Central Europeans as Jesuit Missionaries and Dutch East India Employees

Edited by Igor Iwo Chabrowski , Natalia Królikowska-Jedlińska

The book examines the complexities of this early modern globalization: its scope, limits, importance, social, ethnic, and political ramifications. It researches how these networks reached out to the region of Central and Eastern Europe. The authors argue that the region was hardly considered peripheral from the perspective of Rome (and the Jesuits) or the Netherlands (and the colonial traders). They do, however, explore whether there were "glass ceilings," or limits of reach within the two networks for individuals from the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth or the Kingdom of Hungary.

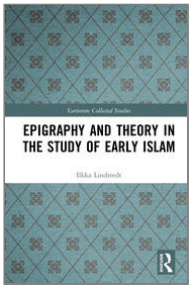
Epigraphy and Theory in the Study of Early Islam



Ilkka Lindstedt

Series: Variorum Collected Studies

The studies of this book deal with religious groups and notions in late antique Arabia (ca. 150–750 CE), drawing especially on inscriptions and other contemporary sources. They explore the religious and societal dynamics of Arabia during this pivotal period in world history. Islam did not emerge in a vacuum, nor was it completely sui generis; rather, the book emphasizes the existence of shared aspects and dynamic interactions with the existing faith communities in the Near East and, more specifically, the Arabian Peninsula. The studies of the book also highlight the importance of theory, which is still underutilized in the field.

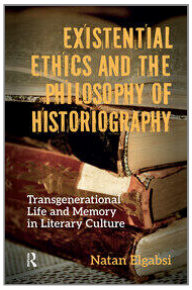
Existential Ethics and the Philosophy of Historiography

Transgenerational Life and Memory in Literary Culture



Natan Elgabsi

Scrutinizing responsibility in various exhortations to historicize, this book delves into the archaeological idea of prehistory, the anthropology of literacy, the ethics of memory and testimony, the hermeneutics and aesthetics of historical narration, Holocaust histories and the afterlife of evil deeds, the distinction between responsibility and guilt, and the morality of the human sciences. The aim is to clarify a personal and transgenerational responsibility toward absent others. The perspective is an existential ethics inspired by Emmanuel Levinas's "ethics as first philosophy."

Fat Bodies in Early Modern Europe

Edited by Holly Fletcher , Christine Ott , Jill Burke

Series: Studies for the International Society for Cultural History

This book is the first to examine understandings and experiences of fatness in early modern Europe (c. 1450-1700), uncovering attitudes towards fat bodies across England, France, Germany, Italy and Spain through interdisciplinary analysis. Readers will gain comprehensive understanding of how early modern Europeans perceived and experienced fat bodies through historically specific contexts rather than modern assumptions.This book is written for students and scholars of the early modern period, particularly those studying European history, cultural history, and body studies. It will also appeal to researchers in fat studies seeking historical perspectives.

Food Production and Gender across the Early Modern World

Edited by Melissa Calaresu , Marta Manzanares Mileo

Series: Food Culture, Food History before 1900

This collection of nine essays presents new research exploring the significance and forms of labour involved in food production across the early modern world from c. 1500 to 1800. Ranging from the Netherlands to the Mediterranean basin and from the Pacific and Atlantic worlds, the volume opens up new directions in research on various activities which have received little attention such as preserving, grinding, curing, and frying. These essays uncover historical actors engaged in the processing of different foodstuffs, whose embodied knowledge and work are often obscured in the historical record, and rendered even less accessible when performed by women.

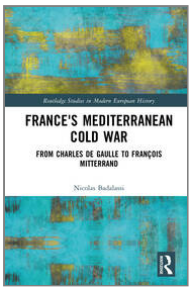
France's Mediterranean Cold War

From Charles de Gaulle to François Mitterrand



Nicolas Badalassi

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

This book explores how the Mediterranean emerged as a key battleground of the Cold War for France. France positioned itself as the United States' most reliable ally in countering the Soviet Union's attempts to establish a presence in Southern Europe, North Africa, and the Middle East. To achieve this, France implemented a comprehensive containment strategy that allowed France to preserve its influence amidst the Soviet Union's southward expansion during the global Cold War. France's Mediterranean Cold War will appeal to researchers, postgraduate students in history and international relations, professionals in international relations, and diplomats.

From Samurai to Engineer-Manager

The Case Study of Ō'hara Junnosuke (1859–96), Mining Specialist in Meiji Japan

Erich Pauer

From Samurai to Engineer-Manager reconstructs the life and work of the Japanese mining engineer Ōhara Junnosuke in the early decades of Japan's industrialization.While Japan's political and socio-economic development during the Meiji period has been extensively researched, the technological/technical foundations that were crucial to its success have remained largely obscure. Drawing on unique, mostly handwritten sources including lecture notes, internship and work experience reports, travelogues and diaries, the example of Ōhara Junnosuke illustrates the beginnings of engineering education in Japan and its intertwining with the subsequent professional career of the protagonist.

Gender and the Glove in Early Modern England

James Daybell Plymouth University, UK, Susan Broomhall

Series: Visual and Material Culture, 1300-1700

This book explores how gloves shaped and reflected gender relations in early modern society. By examining the cultural, economic, and political significance of gloves, it reveals how these everyday objects both reinforced and challenged gender ideologies of the time. This work contributes to our understanding of how gender operated in early modern contexts, demonstrating that power relations were constructed through everyday interactions with material objects like gloves.

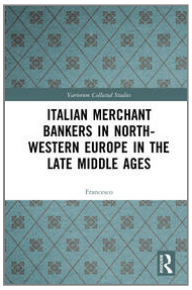
Italian Merchant Bankers in North-Western Europe in the Late Middle Ages



Francesco Guidi-Bruscoli

Series: Variorum Collected Studies

The ten studies in this volume (two published in English for the first time) reveal previously unknown sources. These are used to examine the role and activity of Italians in London and Bruges. Most of the volume is devoted to the Italian communities in England, many of whom were merchants. They are discussed not only for the role they played in English foreign trade, but also for their model of settlement, their relationship with the local population and for the institutions they established.

Material Culture in the Swedish Navy, c. 1450-1850

Edited by Simon Ekström , Niklas Eriksson , Anna Maria Forssberg , Leos Müller

Series: Maritime Humanities, 1400-1800

This volume focuses on and examines these forgotten or hidden ships as material culture, broadly defined to encompass all remains of the navy, from shipwrecks on the seabed to museum objects, archives, cannons, and even coffins made from ship timbers. The book highlights how new methods, techniques, and materials can challenge and enrich naval studies. It is the result of an interdisciplinary collaboration between underwater archaeology, history, ethnology, and cultural heritage studies from both Sweden and Finland.

Medieval Chivalry and the Making of Anabaptist Identity, 1525-1560

Jacob Randolph

Using sermons, theological treatises, polemical pamphlets, allegories, hymns, and studies of material culture, Jacob Randolph sheds light on how and why the popularity of knightly culture of the Late Middle Ages permeated early modern Anabaptist texts and animated the imaginations of Anabaptist communities. This book reveals how the rituals of baptism and martyrdom, the political realities of persecution, the narrative power of song, and the eschatological ambiguities of a world nearing its end, were all infused with chivalric energy, revealing a religious landscape that echoed the instability, resiliency, and creativity of the Middle Ages.

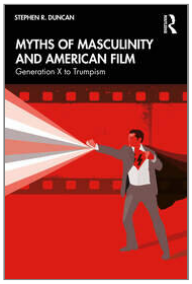
Myths of Masculinity and American Film

From Generation X to Trumpism



Stephen R. Duncan

Myths of Masculinity and American Film examines ideologies of white American manhood that permeated U.S. culture between 1974 and 2016. Duncan argues that the mass media of movies and television, along with some popular novels, music, and certain newsworthy events, can help reveal these ideologies. Tracing how 'presidential patriarchy' and cinematic representations of white manhood evolved in these decades, the book explores the resulting reinforced ethos of masculine individualism that underpinned popular support for Trumpism. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of U.S. media and cultural history, American Studies, and gender studies.

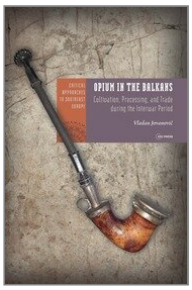
Opium in the Balkans

Cultivation, Processing, and Trade during the Interwar Period



Vladan Jovanović

Series: Critical Approaches to Southeast Europe: A Cross-Disciplinary Series - CEU Press

This book focuses on the cultivation, production, and trafficking of Macedonian raw opium, tracing and contextualizing both the licit and the illicit processing and trade of opium alkaloids from the Western Balkans through Turkey, and to the rest of the world between the two World Wars. The author explores this both from the angle of the League of Nations and politicians and diplomats, and by analyzing of the activities of smugglers, police, and ordinary people who participated in its production and distribution. He describes the process of relocating the illegal processing industry from Turkey and Bulgaria to Yugoslavia.

Paired Lives in Latin America's Cold War

Andrew J. Kirkendall

Series: Seminar Studies

Paired Lives in Latin America's Cold War takes an approachable biographical approach to teaching the history of the Cold War in Latin America and provides a unique overview to a period that is steeped in reform, revolution, and repression. The chosen pairs from major countries represent the vast number of leaders, intellectuals, and "ordinary people" who all hoped for significant socioeconomic transformation of one kind or another. Such figures include presidents, revolutionary leaders, army generals, a founder of the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo, democracy and union activists from countries such as Chile, the Dominican Republic, Brazil, Argentina, and Nicaragua.

Piracy Mythmaking in the Eighteenth Century

Criminality, Human Nature, and Civil Government

Richard Frohock

Pirate Mythmaking in the Eighteenth Century focuses on the figure of the pirate as a literary phenomenon in the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. Taking a cultural studies approach, it offers new insights into piracy literature by analyzing ways in which the pirate served as a contested figure of conversation in relation to imperialist violence, gender, race, as well as human nature and the formation and governance of civil societies. Piracy Mythmaking emphasizes and illustrates the wide range of viewpoints found in pirate literature, from militant nationalism to satirical critique of domestic politics and British imperialism, particularly in the Americas.

Public History, Gender, and Power in Latin American Museums

Women Curators and Cultural Leaders

Edited by María Elena Bedoya , Jimena Perry

Series: Global Perspectives on Public History

Through first-hand testimonies and critical essays, this book examines how feminist approaches and public history practices are reshaping the politics of heritage, memory, and representation from the 1980s to the present. From Bolivia's Museo Nacional de Etnografía y Folklore to Colombia's Museo Itinerante de la Memoria and Guatemala's Museo Ixkik,' this book promotes reflections that highlight collective efforts and diverse ways of narrating stories in public spaces. The book analyzes the local contexts where curatorial practices and cultural policies emerge, giving prominence to the women who lead museological projects and their transnational impact.

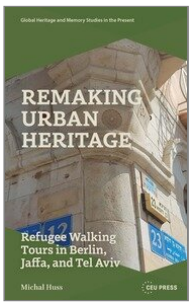
Remaking Urban Heritage

Refugee Walking Tours in Berlin, Jaffa, and Tel Aviv



Michal Huss

Moving beyond the edge of the state to the heritage sites of the urban sphere, this book explores refugee-led walking tours in Berlin, Jaffa, and Tel Aviv, tracing the entangled geographies of the Middle East, Africa, and Europe. Through a participatory 'walk-along' ethnography grounded in artistic practice, the book reconceptualizes heritage-making as a dynamic, contested, and transcultural process. By centring refugee storytelling, performance, and spatial knowledge, it offers a critical intervention into memory, urban, and migration studies – urging scholars and practitioners to rethink the politics of belonging amid ongoing displacement and to attend to the fluidity of urban heritage.

Replaying Communism

Trauma and Nostalgia in European Cultural Production

Edited by Lucy Jeffery , Anna Váradi

Series: Memory, Heritage and Public History in Central and Eastern Europe - CEU Press

The volume adopts an interdisciplinary approach to extend debates on the lasting impact of the communist era across Central and Eastern Europe with chapters thematically threaded through concepts including curation, immersion, interaction, humor and authenticity. A 'trauma/nostalgia paradigm' emerges as the tissue connecting the plurality of post-communist efforts employed to address the region's contested pasts. Twelve original essays by contributors from both 'inside' and 'outside' the region detail how twenty-first-century cultural productions reengage the communist past.

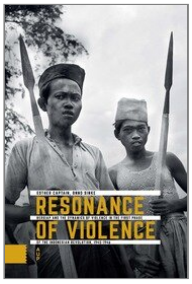
Resonance of Violence

Bersiap and the Dynamics of Violence in the First Phase of the Indonesian Revolution, 1945-1946



Esther Captain , Onno Sinke

Series: Onafhankelijkheid, Dekolonisatie, Geweld en Oorlog in Indonesi 1945-1950

Examines the extreme violence that erupted across Indonesia following the August 17, 1945 declaration of independence, when the battle cry Bersiap! (stand by) marked the start of the Indonesian national revolution and a period of violence primarily aimed against civilians including Indo-Europeans, Moluccans, Dutch, Chinese, Japanese civilians, and British/British Indian soldiers. The authors situate this terrifying period within the broader context of mutual Indonesian violence and violence used by Japanese, British, and Dutch forces against Indonesian citizens, discussing Java, Sumatra, and other islands.

Routledge Handbook on Antiracism in Global Historical Perspective

Edited by Alison Holland , Christopher Lee

This Handbook is the first multidisciplinary anthology of research on antiracism in global historical perspective. It demonstrates the importance of a historical lens for understanding the deep lineages of antiracism and reveals the myriad ways—transracial, transnational, and transhistorical—that antiracism has shaped world history. A vital resource for students, teachers and activists alike, it presents a synthesis of some of the best work on antiracism to date by leading scholars, both emerging and internationally recognized, across the humanities and social sciences.

Settler Colonial Culture and Thought in the Northeastern United States

Christoph Strobel

This book provides the first comprehensive work that examines the intellectual impact of New English narratives about Indigenous peoples, colonization, and the cultural influence they had in the northeastern United States. By examining works that aided in the rationalization of colonialization, Indigenous dispossession, and genocide, this book demonstrates the pervasive impact that these popular narratives played in New England culture, and how they still influence representations of Indigenous peoples in the region.

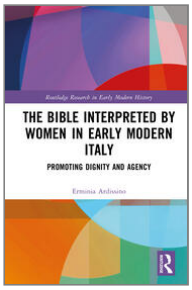
The Bible Interpreted by Women in Early Modern Italy

Promoting Dignity and Agency



Erminia Ardissino

Series: Routledge Research in Early Modern History

This volume studies initial attempts by Italian women of the early modern period to assert their dignity and gender equality through skillful interpretation of the Bible. It shows how the holy text represented a means to self-awareness and self-valorization, both through the role models of female figures in the New and Old Testaments, and because of the authoritativeness of the divine dictate that sanctioned equality of the genders.

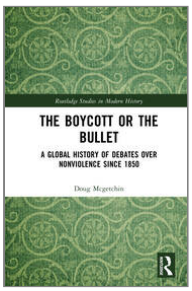
The Boycott or the Bullet

A Global History of Debates over Nonviolence since 1850



Doug McGetchin

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

The Boycott or the Bullet: A Global History of Debates over Nonviolence since 1850 examines debates within nonviolent movements, including labor movements in Europe, Gandhi's Indian independence struggle, and Martin Luther King's U.S. civil rights campaigns. Behind the scenes, nonviolent activists pressured those on their own side to maintain discipline and not to escalate to violence. Resolving these internal tensions are part of a wider worldwide dynamic debate between proponents of nonviolent direct action and those of violent revolt.

The Cistercian Cult of Saints as a Treasury of the Living Past in the Later Middle Ages

Emilia Jamroziak University of Leeds, UK

Series: Hagiography Beyond Tradition

This book explains how the late medieval Cistercian order and its communities in Central Europe engaged with, adopted and supported a broad range of saints' cults as an element of their relationship with the outside world, within their network and as an important element of their identity. An analysis of the complex connection between Cistercian communities and the Order itself and a study of the monastic practice of "living with the past", this book is a valuable contribution to the historiography of medieval monasticism and medieval religious culture.

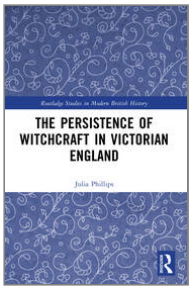
The Persistence of Witchcraft in Victorian England



Julia Phillips

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern British History

The idea that witchcraft disappeared from society is partially based on a historical emphasis upon legal action concerning alleged witches. This book presents an examination of nineteenth century newspapers and periodicals demonstrates that witches featured extensively in the Victorian press, appearing in articles, commentaries, reports of lectures and meetings, advertisements, book and theatrical reviews. As a result, witches were not simply participants in a court room drama (although they also continued to appear in that way), they had a vibrant and visible presence across a broad range of activities and were thoroughly entangled with everyday life in Victorian Britain.

Series: Slavery and Emancipation

This book examines the emergence of private Dutch slave trading in the 18th century. Focusing on the enterprise of Matthijs and Smitt – whose slave ships transported an estimated 11,000–13,000 enslaved West Africans to Suriname, it reconstructs the experiences of crew and captives, and uncovers the inner workings of the private slave trade. Drawing upon newly uncovered archival materials, the authors demonstrate how the West India Company's abandonment of its monopoly in the 1730s precipitated a flourishing private trade.

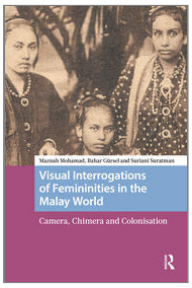
Visual Interrogations of Femininities in the Malay World

Camera, Chimera and Colonisation



Maznah Mohamad , Bahar Gürsel , Suriani Suratman

Series: Transforming Asia

This book curates and examines colonial-era photographs from the late nineteenth to early twentieth centuries sourced from photo-archives of former British and Dutch colonies in Southeast Asia, uncovering how femininities in the Malay world are represented through visual imagery and their role in shaping colonial social relations. Through seven thematic chapters ranging from colonial exhibitions to women's work, fashion, postcard representation, and girls' schooling, the book demonstrates how photographs contain dialogic potential to question colonial power structures.

What is European?

On Overcoming Colonial and Romantic Modes of Thought

Dag Nikolaus Hasse

Argues that traditional definitions of Europe based on democratic, scientific, religious, and cultural traditions are culturally one-sided and historically distorted, calling for a decolonization and deromanticization of European discourse to create a more inclusive vision that reflects the continent's multiethnic history and extends respect to other continents. Hasse demonstrates that overcoming colonial thinking doesn't require anti-Europeanism, as one can critique European arrogance while still feeling culturally connected to European traditions, regardless of whether they reside on the continent, since there is no privileged access to any continental culture.

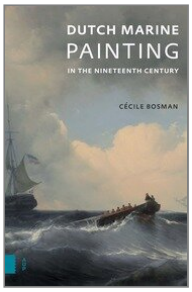
Dutch Marine Painting in the Nineteenth Century



Cécile Bosman

Marine painting is a four hundred year old specialism of the traditional Dutch school of painting. Painting ships and the sea requires both nautical knowledge and great artistic talent. Cécile Bosman examines the background, training and subject matter of nineteenth-century marine painters. She also describes how marine paintings were viewed by the marine painters themselves, by their peers in the artists' associations, by art theorists and by art critics. This beautifully illustrated book fills a gap in art and cultural-historical knowledge of marine painting, while offering an insightful look at the still influential nineteenth century.

Artistic Practice, Materiality, and Ideology in the Medieval East Roman Empire and Neighboring Eastern Polities

Edited by Mariana Bodnaruk

Series: Routledge Research in Byzantine Studies

This anthology foregrounds the complex interplay of artistic production, material conditions, and political conjuncture in East Roman Empire and the wider Orthodox Commonwealth. While art-historical research has long been shaped by the "visual" and "spatial" turns, this volume insists that a decisive advance lies in engaging the "material turn" through a perspective that grounds artworks in their historically specific material conditions rather than as autonomous agents.

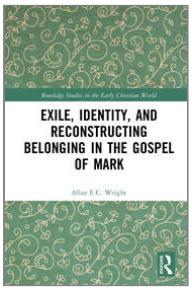
Exile, Identity, and Reconstructing Belonging in the Gospel of Mark



Allan E.C. Wright

Series: Routledge Studies in the Early Christian World

This volume adds to the scholarly interpretive discourses surrounding the Gospel of Mark and argues that the author of Mark attempts to re-construct social identity after the Second Temple's demise. Readers gain a new understanding of the Gospel of Mark and a new way of dissecting it within a theoretical lens of exilic literature. Of interest to students and scholars of Mark and the Gospels, as well as those working on exilic literature and post-colonial theories in the Bible more broadly.

Gender, Status, and Space in Athenian Oratory and Society

Edited by Hilary J. C. Lehmann , Christine Plastow

Intellectual shifts in the late 20th century led to profound change in the questions that could be asked about the ancient world; the chapters in this volume are inspired by the way these shifts have affected scholars' attitude towards and use of Athenian oratory in the study of social history. Case studies from across the corpus of the orators explore themes in gender, status, and space as well as their intersections. Suitable for students and scholars of the Athenian orators and of Athenian social history, and is designed to be accessible to readers without extensive knowledge of ancient Greek.

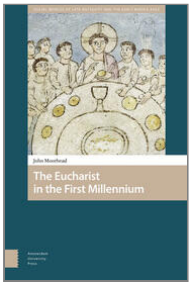
The Eucharist in the First Millennium



John Moorhead

Series: Social Worlds of Late Antiquity and the Early Middle Ages

Whether measured by the period during which it has been celebrated, the frequency with which it has been held, or the cumulatively vast numbers of people who have participated in it, the Eucharist has been central to Western life. The book explains how it developed during the first thousand years, from the time of its inauguration by Christ at the Last Supper to the beginning of the great schism between the Orthodox and Catholic Churches. The Eucharist was a central part of society in late antiquity and the Middle Ages, and it throws unexpected light on the lives and attitudes of the countless men and women who attended it and took communion.

The Fundamentals of Documentary

Julie Casper Roth

Series: The Fundamentals of Filmmaking

This book, inspired by workshop and classroom settings, focuses on process. It frees readers from the weight of technical jargon that may overwhelm first-time filmmakers. It assists readers in pulling together the necessary information required to apply for funding, find collaborators, and ultimately create a film. The book itself is a user-friendly toolkit designed for both students and beginning filmmakers, complete with exercises, interviews with filmmakers, and checklists to keep burgeoning filmmakers on track with their projects. Ease of use is aided by a symbol system that allows the reader to select information that's most relevant to the scope and context of their project.

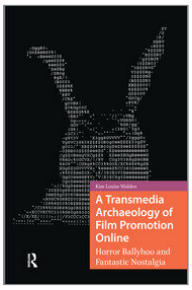
A Transmedia Archaeology of Film Promotion Online

Horror Ballyhoo and Fantastic Nostalgia



Kim Walden

Series: Transmedia

At a time when more films are released annually than there are days in the year, films must compete for audience attention. As a result, promotional budgets have risen exponentially with online becoming the fastest growing sector. Film websites don't just promote films, they chronicle backstories, map storyworlds, introduce characters and provide spaces for audiences to congregate. Yet as a hybrid of promotion, storytelling and community hub, these sites are ephemeral, and when the promotional work is done, they are often locked, taken down and disappear without trace. This book considers this emerging form: Where have film websites been collected and archived? What forms do these websites take? And how do audiences engage with film websites? Drawing on media archaeological methods as well as developing new strategies to investigate these intriguing media objects, this book suggests that film websites are worthy of consideration as cultural artefacts in their own right.

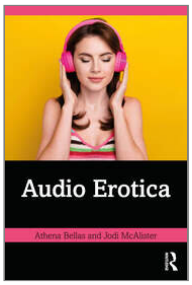
Audio Erotica



Athena Bellas , Jodi McAlister

Audio erotica is sexually explicit audio-only content, designed to arouse the listener and bring them fulfilment. While it has existed for a long time, it has achieved significant popularity in recent years, driven by apps like Quinn, Dipsea, Emjoy and Ferly. Notably, these apps – and many like them – were founded by women and are predominantly targeted to female audiences, making audio erotica a fascinating form of "porn for women". This is the first book-length study of audio erotica, making it a foundational resource for anyone doing research in the area.

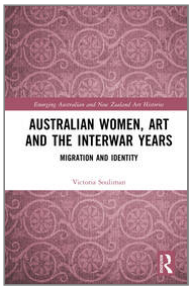
Australian Women, Art and the Interwar Years

Migration and Identity



Victoria Souliman

Series: Emerging Australian and New Zealand Art Histories

Australian Women, Art and the Interwar Years: Migration and Identity offers fresh perspectives on the challenges emerging from past nationalistic narratives of Australian art, particularly regarding the ways they have overlooked women's agency in shaping Australian art and identity. Through a transnational theoretical framework, this book examines the experience of migration of strong-minded Australian women, who were influential cultural agents from the years directly following the end of World War I until 1941. The book's interdisciplinary approach will attract a diverse range of scholars and researchers in art history and women's migration.

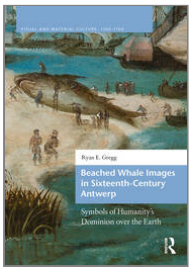
Beached Whale Images in Sixteenth-Century Antwerp

Symbols of Humanity's Dominion over the Earth



Ryan E. Gregg

Series: Visual and Material Culture, 1300-1700

This book examines a small group of sixteenth-century Antwerp artworks depicting the butchering of beached whales, revealing how these images represent a pivotal moment in European attitudes toward nature. It argues that iconographic compounds showing humans dominating marine mammals served as powerful symbols of humanity's relationship with the ocean and the natural world more broadly, marking a transition from medieval moralizing approaches to early modern empirical investigation. It offers valuable insights for researchers interested in human-animal relationships, maritime history, and the intersection of art with scientific inquiry during the Renaissance period.

Chinese Independent Cinema

Past, Present, and a Questionable Future

Edited by Chris Berry Goldsmiths University, University of London, UK, Luke Robinson , Sabrina Qiong Yu , Lydia Wu

Series: Critical Asian Cinemas

Independent cinema in China is not only made outside the commercial system but also without being submitted for censorship. We know that for several decades it has been the crucible out of which China's most exciting new films have flowed. The essays in this volume interrogate what else we think we know. Did it really start with Wu Wenguang and Bumming in Beijing in 1990, or can its roots be traced back much earlier? What are its aesthetics? And its ethics, including of gender and class? Where do audiences watch these films in China and how do they circulate? And, since the 2017 Film Law defined uncensored films as illegal, is independent Chinese cinema still alive? What does it mean today? And does it have a future? The essays in this anthology—many by exciting new scholars—explore these urgent questions.

Chinese Labour Migration in the Digital Media Context

Hong Chen

Series: Media, Culture and Communication in Migrant Societies

What does it mean to a family when parents go abroad for economic gains while leaving their children behind? How do they maintain a family when living in different areas, separated for years? How do emerging digital media like instant messaging, social media, and webcam calls impact the everyday lives of today's transnational families? Drawing on immersive ethnography conducted among UK-based Chinese labour migrants, their left-behind children and caregivers, this book explores how they employ digital media to negotiate family roles and maintain kinship ties. While virtual connections are indispensable, they are not a panacea for physical separation; rather, they introduce complexity to family dynamics. Probing the bittersweet experiences of various family members, it portrays how mediated familial communications intertwine with transnational socio-economic asymmetries and intra-familial dynamics. This book offers an interdisciplinary perspective for general publics and academics inter

Collecting Cinema, Rewriting Film History

Between the Visible and the Invisible

Edited by André Habib , Louis Pelletier , Jean-Pierre Sirois-Trahan

Series: Framing Film

The writing of cinema history would not be possible without the contribution of collectors. Whether through their pioneering excavation work or their passionate defence of forgotten productions and artifacts, collectors have had a lasting influence on both the field and the methods of moving image history. Proceeding from a renewed dialogue between international film scholars, collectors, filmmakers, curators, and archivists, this book aims to reveal the extent to which collectors and collections have contributed to both the history and the epistemology of moving images. It showcases specific studies of collecting practices, as well as in-depth interviews with collectors and artists bringing to light the innumerable articulations between collecting cinema and the rewriting of film history.

Coming of Age in Chinese Literature and Cinema

Sinophone Variations of the Bildungsroman

Edited by Andrea Riemenschnitter , Kiu-wai Chu , Mung Ting Chung

With the inclusion of twelve original articles by established and emerging international scholars, this volume offers critical reading of literary and cinematic texts produced in China and Sinophone communities between the 1950s and 2010s. The articles portray the lineage and mutations of the Chinese Bildungsroman, providing insights into the tensions between individual and society; nation and the world; and the multiple social, ecological, and virtual realities of recent decades. Concerned with how coming-of-age narratives have persistently returned and evolved over time, the book addresses themes such as family and social change; gender, class, and generational divides, local/global politics, and the ecological and posthuman turns in Chinese/Sinophone culture. It offers a fresh look on how the transnational and transgenerational journeys of Bildungsroman and coming-of-age narratives continuously transform and reinvigorate generic conventions, to explore adolescence as a formative soc

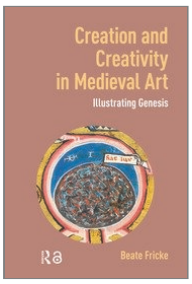
Creation and Creativity in Medieval Art

Illustrating Genesis



Beate Fricke

Creation imagery in manuscripts made in the Middle Ages became a locus for visual experimentation as well as the expression of ideas about creativity. By examining representations of divine creation and illustrations of the creation stories in Genesis, this book links medieval ideas about creation, the characteristic of the Divine Creator, and the act of creation with themes in medieval thought about the work of medieval artists., Case studies from manuscripts illuminating the creation dating from the eleventh to the fourteenth century (Junius 11/The Cædmon Manuscript, Roda Bible & Ripoll Bible, Bible moralisées, Hamburg Bible, Holkhalm Bible) reveal self-reflective moments; where medieval artists relate artistic invention and theological debates about creation. This book traces the artists' thinking in their own work and then contextualizes those visual cues within the context of philosophical arguments about the creation of the world. It also considers how Western medieval a

Critical Social Science Perspectives on Indian Cinema

Edited by Franson Manjali , Anagha Kamble

This book analyzes Indian cinema's social and cultural dimensions, examining how films reflect nationalist movements, gender dynamics, communal tensions, and political ideologies and traces cinema's evolution from early censorship battles to contemporary diaspora narratives. Contributors apply film theory to understand cinema's role in shaping cultural identity and social discourse. This title has been co-published with Aakar Books. Developing the Editor's Eye

Michael R. Miller

In this accessible and informative text, Michael R. Miller draws on his extensive experience working on award-winning films, to help readers develop their 'eye' for editing. The book begins by emphasizing the need for editors to pay attention to the emotional and aesthetic tone of a project and scene, before it explores what makes great editing in a feature film. This includes editing approaches founded on deep appreciation for actors' performances and directors' philosophies, trimming or even deleting footage that weighs down the narrative, refining character point of view, the importance of opening scenes, the role of sound, and much more.

Digital Modernity

Why We Need to Think Historically About the Digital Age

James Smithies

This is the first systematic theorization of digital modernity, arguing that the digital age cannot be understood apart from the long historical arc of modernity. Bridging digital humanities, critical theory, sociology, philosophy, and global history, Digital Modernity demonstrates that contemporary digital systems are continuations rather than ruptures of the modernist project. This book is intended for scholars and students across digital humanities, media and communication studies, science and technology studies, sociology, the philosophy of technology, and modern history.

Games and Sports in Renaissance Italy

The Art of Play

Kelli Wood

Series: Cultures of Play

This book offers a cultural, visual, and material history of games in Renaissance Italy. Games in the Renaissance offered an inventive and imaginative understanding of the world for their players, one founded not only on iterative performances, but also through a visual and material culture imbricated in early modern Italy's ideologically inflected artistic, scientific, and social systems. This book will resonate with scholars and students of Renaissance studies, art history, and cultural history, offering fresh perspectives on the material and visual cultures of games.

Geertgen tot Sint Jans and the Art of Longing

Henry Luttikhuizen

Series: Visual and Material Culture, 1300-1700

Considering the output of the Dutch painter Geertgen tot Sint Jans (ca. 1465–95) in relationship to the religious and social desires of his primary patrons, the Haarlem Hospitallers, this book offers a comprehensive analysis of the artist's oeuvre. Throughout, Geertgen's paintings are compared with mystical writings and devotional tracts, making this book compelling reading for scholars of late medieval literature and religion, as well as scholars of early Netherlandish painting and late medieval art.

Habsburg Encounters with Native America

Familiar Strangers

Edited by Jonathan Singerton , Marketa Krizova , Michael Burri

Examines the previously understudied historical connections between the central European lands of the Habsburg monarchy and Indigenous peoples of the Americas, focusing on centuries of cultural encounters that produced varied dialogues, perspectives, and understandings. By breaking away from the broader narrative of Germanic fascination with Indigenous cultures, the work recovers a more distinct historical connection and uncovers the particular dynamics of both direct and indirect contact between Indigenous worlds and the Habsburg monarchy.

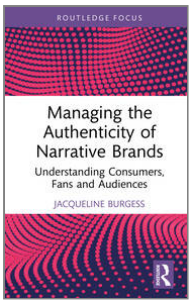
Managing the Authenticity of Narrative Brands

Understanding Consumers, Fans and Audiences



Jacqueline Burgess

This book investigates the concept of brand authenticity within narrative media, focusing on how audience expectations and reactions shape perceptions of brand endings and plot developments. By examining case studies of popular series like Game of Thrones, Mass Effect, and How I Met Your Mother, it argues that fan backlash often stems from a perceived loss of authenticity. This book bridges the gap between Brand Management and Media Studies, offering a unique interdisciplinary perspective on audience-brand dynamics. It adds to the growing field of brand authenticity by applying its principles to narrative media, a rarely explored area.

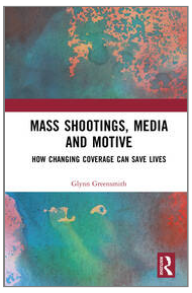
Mass Shootings, Media and Motive

How changing coverage can save lives



Glynn Greensmith

This book uses major cultural events in Australia (Port Arthur), Scotland (Dunblane), Norway (Oslo), New Zealand (Christchurch), and the US to synthesise 60 years of mass shooting research into the journalism perspective, outlining: the script of coverage; the nature of copycat vs contagion; the typology and lessons from the amok phenomenon; and the relevance of the rise of single actor terrorism. It outlines the history of mass murder, details the turning points, and brings first-hand accounts from those who have been directly impacted by it, and those who have reported it.

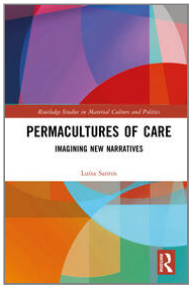
Permacultures of Care

Imagining New Narratives



Luisa Santos Catholic University of Portugal

Series: Routledge Studies in Material Culture and Politics

This book reimagines what art institutions might become through the lens of three permaculture design principles—observe and interact, obtain a yield, and use and value diversity. Rather than providing conclusions, this book invites readers to imagine and co-create the art institutions of the future—fluid, diverse, and deeply intertwined with the ecosystems in which they exist. It will appeal to scholars and upper-level students of cultural studies; social change; cultural management and policy; gender studies; race and racism; and ecology and environment studies.

Place in the Liberal Arts

An Interdisciplinary Introduction to Text and Topos

Edited by Randall Fowler Abilene Christian University, USA, J. Scott Lee University of Chicago, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Rhetoric and Communication

This book explains the enduring significance of topos, an Aristotelian translation of the concept of Place, by exploring how place shapes the kinds of arguments we make, texts we produce, the arts and technology we use. This work takes a unique, artful and interdisciplinary approach linking classical philosophical and rhetorical frameworks to contemporary educational and cultural challenges. It will appeal to a broad set of diverse academic audiences across the humanities and social sciences, including rhetoric, philosophy, history, literature, and religious studies, place studies, legal studies, and public intellectuals interested in discourse and argumentation.

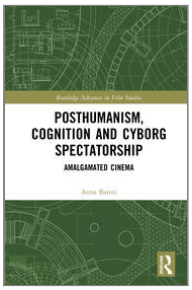
Posthumanism, Cognition and Cyborg Spectatorship

Amalgamated Cinema



Anna Batori University of Glasgow, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This book argues that contemporary digital blockbusters function as laboratories for posthuman cognition that transform spectatorship into a cyborg mode in which perception, memory, and agency are distributed across the cinematic canvas, the diegetic bodies of characters, the formal operations of film style, and the embodied cognition of the spectator. The book is aimed at film and media scholars, cognitive scientists exploring neurocinematics and enactive approaches, advanced students, and filmmakers who seek guidance on visual design.

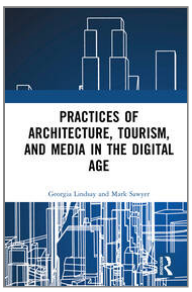
Practices of architecture, tourism, and media in the digital age



Georgia Lindsay University of Tasmania, Australia, Mark Sawyer University of Tasmania, Australia

Architecture, tourism, and media intersect in profound ways, shaping our perception and experience of places. This book delves into how iconic buildings transform into cultural symbols through the images we create, share, and consume – whether online or in person. This original research offers a fresh lens on how architecture operates as both medium and message in the digital age. It is essential reading for scholars and practitioners interested in architecture, tourism, media, and urban culture—and for anyone curious about how buildings become icons in the collective imagination.

Researchers as Tourists

Fieldwork, Contingency and Autoethnography

Edited by Lauren Dyll , Keyan G. Tomaselli University of Johannesburg, South Africa

Academics are often tourists—curious, observant, and ethically entangled in the worlds they move through, blurring the lines between research and leisure, between consumption and contemplation in contemporary cultural studies. Through reflexive and often autoethnographic accounts, these scholar-tourists expose the tensions between authenticity and performance, ethics and enjoyment, distance and immersion across diverse geographical and cultural contexts. From fieldwork contingency and positional reflexivity to tourism as consumption, the chapters examine ethical dilemmas across Africa, Antarctica, Asia, and beyond.

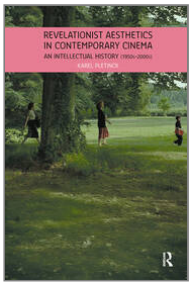
Revelationist Aesthetics in Contemporary Cinema

An Intellectual History (1950s–2000s)



Karel Pletinck

On the cusp of the twenty-first century, the notion of art as revelation of reality held sway in film aesthetics and criticism. Where did this seemingly naive belief in the vocation of art originate, what sustained it, and how did it shape the work of filmmakers, as diverse as Jean-Luc Godard, Jean-Marie Straub and Danièle Huillet, and Abbas Kiarostami? These questions launch this book's exploration of the revelationist tradition from the 1950s to the early 2000s, revisiting a formative period in film history – from Italian Neorealism and the Nouvelle Vague to political modernism – and assessing its lasting impact on contemporary cinema.

The Cultural Work of the Early Modern Dutch Portrait

Amalia van Solms and the Shape of the Self in European Art

Saskia Beranek

Series: Visual and Material Culture, 1300-1700

The Cultural Work of the Early Modern Portrait examines how portraits of Amalia van Solms, Princess of Orange (1602-1675), functioned as active cultural agents that connected people across time and space, participating in domestic, national, and international politics throughout the 17th century. This book will appeal to scholars and students in art history, Dutch Golden Age studies, gender studies, and early modern European history. The Documentary Cinema of Haneda Sumiko

Japan in Transition through Gender, Arts, Nature and Society

Edited by Marcos Centeno-Martin , Irene González-López , Alejandra Armendariz-Hernandez

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia

This is the first academic book to provide a comprehensive survey of the work of Haneda Sumiko (1926-), the first woman to regularly direct documentaries in postwar Japan, by examining her major documentaries amongst the extensive filmography she developed over sixty years. Collectively, the chapters in this book make a case for Haneda to be recognised as a key figure in Japan's postwar documentary scene. Bridging gaps in research on both documentary studies and women filmmakers, this will be a valuable resource to scholars and students of film studies, Japanese studies, gender studies and art history, as well as to film curators and programmers.

The Situationist International and the Social Space of Cinema

With and Against Cinema

Jennifer Stob

Series: Film Culture in Transition

This book explores the Situationist International's paradoxical relationship with cinema from 1957 to 1972. It traces the SI's attempts throughout the nineteen sixties to work with cinema's associative power and against its passivity. It follows this project from early encounters with Lettrist cinema to 1968 and beyond, all the while contextualizing Situationist theory with the work of friends and foes like Henri Lefebvre, Marcel Mariën, Alain Resnais, Jean-Luc Godard and Agnès Varda. Meticulously researched and thoughtfully argued, Stob's book offers timely lessons for today's media artists, scholars and activists.

Unsung Mavericks in Intercultural Communication, Education and Research

Edited by Fred Dervin University of Helsinki, Finland, Stella Anne Achieng

Series: New Perspectives on Teaching Interculturality

Stepping into the vibrant and uncharted margins of Intercultural Communication, Education and Research (ICER), this edited volume challenges the field's established narratives by actively listening to the thinkers, educators and practitioners whose transformative work has previously been overlooked. For anyone ready to move past the usual references and discover the fertile and creative potential at the edges of ICER, this edited volume urges us to listen, learn and help shape the conversation about interculturality today.

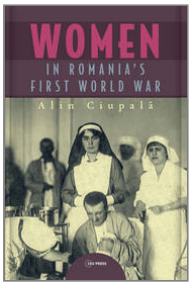
Women in Romania's First World War



Alin Ciupalã

Examines the contribution of Romanian women to the national project during World War I (1916-1918), including the roles of bourgeois and middle-class women, rural women, and notable figures like Queen Mary (who organized campaign hospitals and aided civil populations) and Ecaterina Teodoroiu (the only woman to serve as an officer, who died leading soldiers in battle). While feminist leaders expected that women's wartime service would lead to full citizenship rights, Alin Ciupala demonstrates that after the war the situation returned to normal and women were largely excluded from the public sphere despite their significant contributions to Romania's union with Transylvania and Bessarabia.

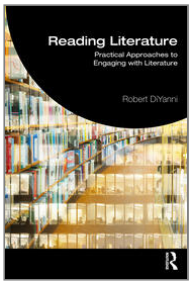
Reading Literature

Practical Approaches to Engaging with Literature



Robert DiYanni

Why do we read literature? Literature enables us to develop our judgment through observation and reflection. We read literature for the many pleasures it offers. These pleasures range widely across genres, with those reading fiction and drama differing from what readers experience in their encounters with poems and essays. Helping readers read closely and critically, this is an essential guide to find "ways in" to reading literature to result in valuable encounters and rewarding literary experiences for general readers or those beginning literary studies courses.

(In)Dependent Selves

Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Life Writing, Slavery and Dependency

Edited by Pia Wiegmink , Jennifer Leetsch

Series: Life Writing

This book brings into conversation perspectives from the disciplines of history, literary studies, archival studies and religious studies, and explores the entanglements of life writing and dependency studies. It demonstrates how life writing offers a vital entry point into the lived realities of dependency across time and space. Personal testimonies, autobiographies and archival traces serve here as contested sites of self-representation, revealing as much about the structures of dependency – such as slavery, serfdom, indenture, captivity, debt bondage and coerced labour – as about strategies of resistance, agency and relational and communal self-fashioning.

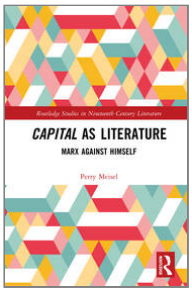
Capital as Literature

Marx Against Himself



Perry Meisel

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

Studies of Marx, particularly of his masterwork Capital (1867), are as a rule tutelary—they attempt to explain him. Marx's chiasmatic style turns Capital into a mise en abyme and Marx's enterprise into an example of what it describes rather than its foil or antidote: the structure of capital itself. Capital, like capital, is a self-begetting production machine whose fungibility as a form is one and the same with the money economy it unravels. 'Capital' as Literature: Marx Against Himself shows how this irony unfolds and what the implications are for epistemology, cultural studies, and literary criticism.

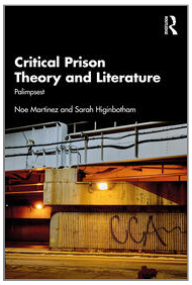
Critical Prison Theory and Literature

Palimpsest



Noe Martinez , Sarah Higinbotham

Critical Prison Theory and Literature: Palimpsest puts stories and theory about prison in conversation, following five metaphors through mass incarceration: retribution as code, isolation as cell, trauma as wound, creativity as graffiti tag, restorative justice as kitchen table. Pairing texts across centuries—Moby Dick with Batman comics, Hamlet with The House on Mango Street—this book represents their part of that larger conversation.

Daisaku Ikeda, Transnationalism, and American Literature

Dialogues of the Heart

Edited by Anita Patterson

Series: Routledge Research in American Literature and Culture

This book examines the writings of Nichiren Buddhist philosopher, poet, and peacebuilder Daisaku Ikeda (1928-2023), focusing on how American literature and transnationalism are integral to the development of his Buddhist philosophy and practices in peacebuilding, religion, and education.Throughout, contributors demonstrate the transformative power of literature and philosophy, including their capacities to inspire dialogue and shape Ikeda's global peacebuilding and human rights agenda. Topics addressed will include how poetry enables a pragmatist call to action and how Buddhism inspired avant-gardism in American literature and Black literature in the US as well as Africa.

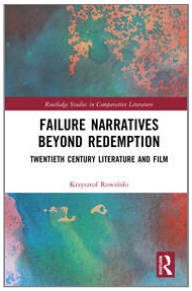
Failure Narratives Beyond Redemption

Twentieth Century Literature and Film



Krzysztof Rowiński

Series: Routledge Studies in Comparative Literature

The book focuses on the concept of non-redemptive failure, a type of failure that is not part of a larger narrative of success or narrative redemption, with attention to how the concept functions between literature, critical theory, and other fields. Examining literature and film from mid-twentieth century Poland, Italy, and the United States, it traces productive effects of failure which cannot survive into the future, yet have an important, transformative impact in the moment in which they occur.

Human Rights and Indian Literary Communities

Edited by Swatie

Series: Routledge Literary Studies in Social Justice

Human Rights and Indian Literary Communities explores the relation between literature, the public sphere and the notion of personhood as understood through the concept of human rights in India. While discussing the challenges of social equality, the universal notion that everyone is a rights-bearing person, and rule of law in a postcolonial society like India, it outlines the historical trajectories, geographies and social processes that go into the making of human rights. By demonstrating how a rights-bearing person is written, not simply constructed, into being, this comprehensive text is an ideal resource for researchers of literary, legal, and postcolonial studies.

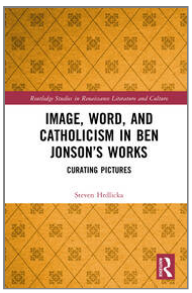
Image, Word, and Catholicism in Ben Jonson's Works

Curating Pictures



Steven Hrdlicka

Series: Routledge Studies in Renaissance Literature and Culture

The first monograph to address Ben Jonson's thought on the visual arts, Image, Word, and Catholicism in Ben Jonson's Works: Curating Pictures shows how Jonson placed a high value on the visual arts and the extent to which he designed his poetics around visual frames. Examining Jonson's works alongside the writings of Catholic writers such as Thomas Palmer, Thomas Wright, Robert Southwell, and Ignatius of Loyola, this work proposes a fresh sketch of Jonson's nuanced visual imagination, as well as suggests ways to situate his poetry within this important context.

Practices and Narratives of Early Modern Piracy

Connecting the Seas, 1550–1800

Edited by Susanne Gruss , Marcus Hartner

Series: Maritime Humanities, 1400-1800

Rather than looking at different manifestations of early modern piracy as geographically and temporally isolated cultural phenomena, Practices and Narratives of Early Modern Piracy: Connecting the Seas (1550–1800) pursues a comprehensive approach to this field of study. This volume investigates the spatial, temporal, and economic connections between pirates and other seafarers who navigated the North Sea, the Mediterranean Sea, the Atlantic, and the Indian Oceans in the early modern period, and the cultural products they inspired.

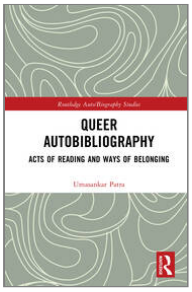
Queer Autobibliography

Acts of Reading and Ways of Belonging



Umasankar Patra

Series: Routledge Auto/Biography Studies

Christopher Isherwood and Edmund White engage with autobiographical genres and negotiate their queer subjectivity in radical ways. Queer Autobibliography: Acts of Reading and Ways of Belonging argues that this negotiation takes place in and through books: books they write, publish, help to publish, read, borrow, lend, gift, and learn from. This volume undertakes a novel mode of analysis by coupling queer theory and autobiography studies by mobilizing current scholarship on queer relationality, queer time and narrative theory that will delimit the precincts of autobiography studies and queer theory.

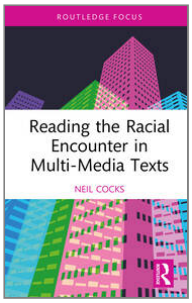
Reading the Racial Encounter in Multi-Media Texts



Neil Cocks

Series: Routledge Focus on Literature

Reading the Racial Encounter engages constructions of race through the analysis of scenes of meeting or encounter in three multimedia texts. Such scenes are rarely, if ever, subject to book-length analysis, yet such a project can arguably allow race to be understood in new and challenging ways. This work will be of particular interest to scholars and advanced students of race theory, literary studies, media studies, and cultural analysis who seek fresh methodological approaches to understanding how race is constructed, performed, and contested across different media landscapes.

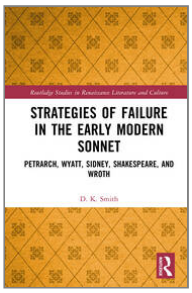
Strategies of Failure in the Early Modern Sonnet

Petrarch, Wyatt, Sidney, Shakespeare, and Wroth



D. K. Smith

Series: Routledge Studies in Renaissance Literature and Culture

This book offers an ambitious reassessment of the post-Petrarchan tradition. Elegantly and lucidly written, it examines the uses of failure as a poetic strategy in the Petrarchan sonnet sequence—a strategy that originated with Petrarch and was then imitated and developed in the English Renaissance lyric. Written for advanced undergraduates, graduate students, and experts in the field, it provides a new means of understanding the dynamic of the Renaissance sonnet sequence, offering a new methodological approach that allows us to read these traditional texts in unexpected and illuminating ways.

Leen Bou Nassereddine

Series: Routledge Studies in Comparative Literature

This book aims to explore the history and evolution of the bildungsroman genre by moving beyond its traditional Eurocentric foundations, often associated with Goethe as the archetype of the genre. Its main purpose is to broaden the reach of this genre beyond its Western origins, demonstrating its worldwide relevance and evolution—particularly within postcolonial contexts, and from the perspective of Arab female postcolonial subjects. In doing so, it examines how the genre adapts as it travels across different cultural, historical, and geographical settings.

The Politics of Text and Image in Children's Culture

Contemporary Eastern Europe and Beyond

Edited by Svetlana Efimova , Marina Balina

Series: Children's Literature and Culture

This edited volume proposes a new perspective on how children's literature interacts with politics: its chapters focus not only on politics and literature or politics in literature, but primarily on the politics of text and image. Following Jacques Rancière's philosophy, the collection understands The Politics of Text and Image in Children's Culture as an aesthetic (re)configuration of world perception that shapes both the individual subjectivity of young readers/viewers and their sense of belonging to different communities.

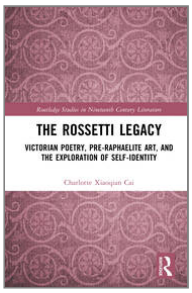
The Rossetti Legacy

Victorian Poetry, Pre-Raphaelite Art, and the Exploration of Self-Identity



Charlotte Xiaoqian Cai

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

This groundbreaking study reveals how the Rossetti siblings revolutionized Victorian conceptions of selfhood through a sophisticated dialectic that transcends conventional binaries.This comprehensive investigation penetrates the siblings' dialectical philosophies to expose unexpected affinities and crucial differences, establishing vital connections between their poetic principles and artistic innovations across all creative phases. The result is not merely a reinterpretation of the Rossettis, but a fundamental reconsideration of Victorian intellectual history and its enduring influence on modern consciousness.

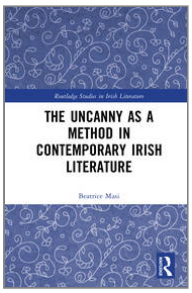
The Uncanny as a Method in Contemporary Irish Literature



Beatrice Masi

Series: Routledge Studies in Irish Literature

This volume examines how post-Celtic Tiger Irish literature responds to overlapping economic and environmental crises through an innovative blending of realism, speculative, and gothic modes. Focusing on seven texts published between 2004 and 2022, it introduces Uncanny Realism—a critical framework that explores how fractured, hybrid narratives destabilize familiar worldviews, drawing out latent histories and spectral traces of crisis. It offers a new way to read literature in times of systemic rupture, contributing to Irish studies, ecocriticism, and world literature by reimagining how fiction can articulate the strange familiarities of global crisis.

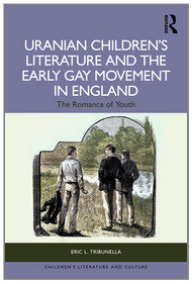
Uranian Children's Literature and the Early Gay Movement in England

The Romance of Youth



Eric L. Tribunella

Series: Children's Literature and Culture

Uranian Children's Literature and the Early Gay Movement in England: The Romance of Youth considers how writers associated with the Uranian poets, Order of Chaeronea, and British Society for the Study of Sex Psychology (BSSSP)—among the earliest efforts to organize on behalf of same-sex love in England beginning in the mid-1890s—used boys' fiction to imagine a world in which same-sex romantic bonds could be possible. This volume provides the first book-length account of the role of children's literature in the early gay movement in England, including works by E.E. Bradford, George Cecil Ives, J.M Barrie, Laurence Housman, Kenneth Ingram, and Beverley Nichols.

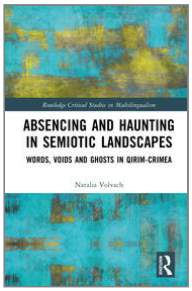
Absencing and Haunting in Semiotic Landscapes

Words, Voids and Ghosts in Qırım-Crimea



Natalia Volvach

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Multilingualism

This book offers a profound interdisciplinary exploration of haunting, absencing, and the violent transformation of words into voids. It argues that the erasure of language is never simple: when words are replaced by silence, not only messages but also entire worlds and histories disappear. Focusing on the Russian occupation of Qırım–Crimea and the ongoing war against Ukraine, the book reveals how linguistic, epistemic, and physical violence intertwine, urging scholars to look beyond words when studying violence in its many guises.

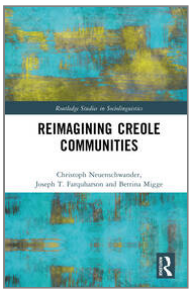
Reimagining Creole Communities



Christoph Neuenschwander , Joseph T. Farquharson , Bettina Migge

Series: Routledge Studies in Sociolinguistics

This volume undertakes a reimagination of Creole communities in the Caribbean and beyond by addressing the persistent disconnect between contemporary research on Creole communities and Sociolinguistics. While it acknowledges that early interactions between these fields have been fruitful, especially in understanding variation, Creole grammars and their relationship to their input languages, research on Creole communities subsequently prioritised typological and genealogical research, neglecting social meaning, speaker agency, and stylistic variation.

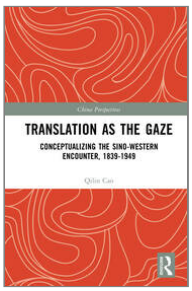
Translation as the Gaze

Conceptualizing the Sino-Western Encounter, 1839-1949



Qilin Cao

Series: China Perspectives

This book centers on how translation is key to understanding the encounter between China and the West from 1839 to 1949. It explores the ambivalence, anxiety, and narcissism that China manifested when facing the foreign other and conceptualizes this intercultural interaction as a gaze. In the interlocking of gazes between the self and the other, translation emerges not as a neutral medium, but as a dynamic, multilayered structure that simultaneously reveals and conceals, mediates, and transforms. The book will appeal to scholars and students of translation studies, Asian studies, and comparative literature.

Minority Languages and Audio-Visual Content in Africa

Edited by Limukani Mathe , Oswelled Ureke , Dumisani Moyo

Series: Routledge African Media, Culture and Communication Studies

This book examines audio-visual content production in Africa, highlighting how the rise of social networking platforms has combatted the marginalisation of minority languages across the continent. Colonial languages have tended to dominate audio-visual narratives in Africa, and although postcolonial film and video production initiatives have tried to counter this, in practice they perpetuate the marginalisation of minority language groups by favouring major indigenous languages. This timely investigation into the political economy of contemporary audio-visual production in minority languages in Africa will interest researchers of media studies and sociolinguistics in Africa.

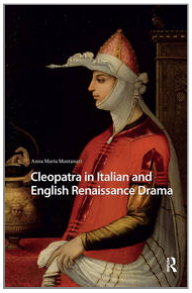
Cleopatra in Italian and English Renaissance Drama



Anna Maria Montanari

Series: Renaissance History, Art and Culture

This book considers some of the main adaptations of the character of Cleopatra for the Renaissance stage, travelling from Italy to England to arrive finally to Shakespeare. It shows how each reading of the story of Cleopatra is unique to and expressive of the culture which produced it, even as writers drew from the same sources from Antiquity. For the first time texts belonging to different cultures, rigorously presented, are brought into dialogue on such questions as moral standpoint, gender and the representation of the exotic. Moreover, through the fascinating figure of Cleopatra, the reader is able to explore the development of Renaissance tragedy, in its commercial and non-commercial versions. Ultimately both questions at the heart of this study - concerning Cleopatra's identity and her translation into theatre - converge to be (dis)solved by Shakespeare.|This book analyses the earliest representations of Cleopatra in drama produced across Italy and England over the sixteenth and

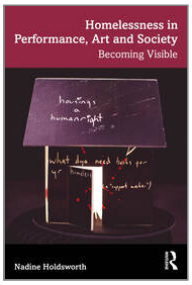
Homelessness in Performance, Art and Society

Becoming Visible



Nadine Holdsworth

Homelessness in Performance, Art and Society investigates the contemporary context of homelessness in England and how performance and the arts can engage with this complex issue to advocate for, value and foster the lives, creative identities and artistic ambitions of people who are or have been affected by homelessness. This book is ideal for students and scholars of applied theatre, socially engaged theatre, and broader humanities studies that interrogate the intersections between homelessness and the arts, as well as artists and community activists with an interest in this field.

Intimate Commentaries on Tadeusz Kantor's Theatre

Michal Kobialka

This collection of Michal Kobialka's essays, written between 1986 and 2025, provides a comprehensive understanding of Tadeusz Kantor's theatre practice. The book is divided into three parts, each focusing on a specific area of Kantor's theatre practice and elucidating the central argument of this book, that Kantor's theatre is an example of refractory art as a negation of the status quo and as a deviation from the dominant artistic conventions in service to any official cultural system and its culture industry. This book will be of interest to scholars and students of theatre and performance, performance theory, theatre history, Polish theatre, and avant-garde art in the 20th century.

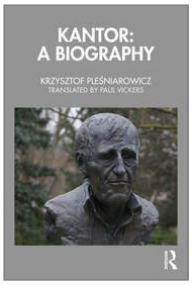
Kantor: A Biography



Krzysztof Pleśniarowicz

Kantor: A Biography offers the first comprehensive English-language artistic biography of the Polish visual artist, avant-garde innovator and theatre practitioner Tadeusz Kantor (1915–1990). The book traces Kantor's creative trajectory from clandestine wartime performances to the international acclaim of the Cricot 2 theatre, examining his achievements across painting, performance, happenings and experimental theatre. Integrating biography, art history, and performance studies, this book will appeal to scholars and students of theatre, visual art, and cultural history, as well as readers around the world interested in twentieth-century artistic pioneers.

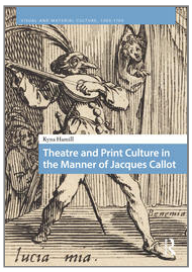
Theatre and Print Culture in the Manner of Jacques Callot



Kyna Hamill

Series: Visual and Material Culture, 1300-1700

This book aims to shuffle some long-standing attitudes about the relationship between theatre and print culture. Examining the influential print series Balli di Sfessania di Jacomo Callot, a suite of 24 prints designed and etched by Jacques Callot in 1621-22, this book highlights the influence of visual culture on commedia dell'arte historiography and its performance traditions since the early seventeenth century. Callot's ability to captivate viewers through scale, dynamic figures, and innovative spatial schemes has manifested an impassioned gaze by many admirers.

A Philosophy of Music Education for the Era of AI

Jiaxing Xie , David G. Hebert

Series: ISME Series in Music Education

This book outlines a philosophy of music education that is responsive to the age of artificial intelligence. Against the background of AI's challenges to human modes of production, the authors demonstrate how music education can become a tool for self-discovery in this transformative era. Bringing together philosophical perspectives from Chinese and Western scholars, this book shows how integrating these perspectives can clarify the values that shape music education practices, and enable scholars and educators to better address contemporary issues in the teaching of music.

Amateuring and Belonging in Music Education

Local Voices, Global Resonances

Edited by Imogen Morris , Nancy November

This book investigates how education and participation shape musical identity across the amateur–professional spectrum, reframing amateurism as a space of passion, dedication, and authenticity rather than deficiency. It is intended for scholars and advanced students in music education, pedagogy, sociology, and cultural studies. It will also resonate with music teachers, conductors, and arts policymakers interested in supporting inclusive and meaningful musical engagement. The volume contributes to underexplored scholarship on amateur musicianship and advocates for a more equitable and expansive view of musical life.

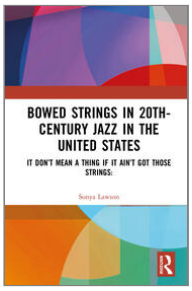
Bowed Strings in 20th-Century Jazz in the United States

It Don't Mean a Thing if It Ain't Got Those Strings:



Sonya Lawson

Bowed Strings in 20th-Century Jazz in the United States serves as a historical examination of the roles of bowed strings (violin, viola, and cello) in jazz. The subject of bowed strings in jazz has garnered considerable interest, evident in the swell of pedagogical materials published in the last decade, the proliferation of college programs incorporating alternative styles for strings, the increasing number of jazz groups featuring improvising string players, and the abundance of articles, both biographical and historical, on bowed strings in jazz.

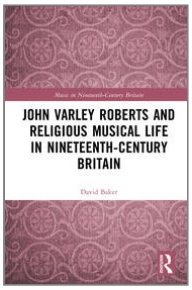
John Varley Roberts and Religious Musical Life in Nineteenth-Century Britain



David Baker

Series: Music in Nineteenth-Century Britain

David Baker chronicles the extraordinary life and achievements of John Varley Roberts (1841-1920), a working-class Yorkshireman who became a popular composer and one of Victorian England's most celebrated choral trainers as well as Organist of Magdalen College, Oxford. His compositions form a valuable indicator of taste and fashion, music making and publishing of the time. Roberts's life, work and achievements are considered in the context of changes in Anglican Church music, and especially the rise of cathedral-type services, alongside educational and societal developments in Victorian and Edwardian Britain.

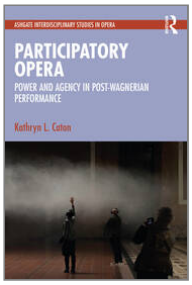
Participatory Opera

Power and Agency in Post-Wagnerian Performance



Kathryn L. Caton

Series: Ashgate Interdisciplinary Studies in Opera

Through the examination of participatory elements, theories, and practices, this book defines participatory opera, explores ways it challenges traditional roles of "audience," "performer," and "author," and situates Euro-American participatory opera within the context of participatory philosophy, theory, and art of the 20th century. This book is primarily intended for scholars and graduate students, although professionals and practitioners may also find it appealing. Opera scholars and scholars of participatory art will find it reveals that opera, too, engages with participatory practices and histories and should be incorporated into discourses surrounding participatory art.

Protest Music in Latin America

Politics, Faith, and Social Justice

Edited by Nestor Quiroa

Protest Music in Latin America: Politics, Faith, and Social Justice addresses the impact of protest music in Latin America between the late 1950s and the 2000s. This was a time of continental fervor for revolutionary change and social transformation. This book analyzes the interplay between faith and politics in the music of social protest across the region. It places these songs in historical context and offers a window into the religious and cultural life, language, and thought of social actors in Latin American history.

The Routledge Companion to Early Modern Music and Literature

Edited by Rachael Durkin Edinburgh Napier University, UK, Katharina Clausius , Christin Hoene , Katherine Butler

Series: Routledge Music Companions

The entanglement of music and literature of the early modern period is rich with exchanges, dialogues, and disputes. These entanglements present a fascinating counterpoint to early modernity, and in many ways serve as complicit witnesses to their times and places. The Routledge Companion to Early Modern Music and Literature considers musico-literary production from the period 1500–1800, as well as its contemporary resonances, and seeks to unpick these often knotty intersections. This Companion is therefore a valuable addition to the bookshelves of those looking to grapple with the early modern musico-literary relationship.

Webern's Lost Cello Sonata and Music in the Aphoristic Style

Rajan Lal

Series: Royal Musical Association Monographs

This book offers a music-analytical and historical exploration of the 'aphoristic style'; small yet strident modernist works written by the Second Viennese School between 1909 and 1914, challenging long-held misconceptions about early twentieth-century atonal music. This book will be of interest to music theorists, historians of the long-nineteenth and twentieth centuries, undergraduate and postgraduate students, and all those intrigued by the relationship between music theory and musical style in the age of the 'emancipation of dissonance'.

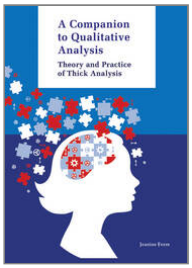
Companion to Qualitative Analysis

Theory and Practice of Thick Analysis



Jeanine Evers

Qualitative analysis resembles a puzzle; you are confronted with a heap of data and you find yourself wondering: what should I do next? Ideally, you have already started the analysis before the amount of data becomes overwhelming. However, realistically, qualitative research inevitably generates a large amount of data that requires thorough organization, interpretation, combination and manipulation. A Companion to Qualitative Analysis introduces the concept of Thick analysis, a triangulation strategy that enables you to systematically examine your data from a broad perspective to get the most out of your research. Part I of the book provides a theoretical overview of different analysis methods, the use of QDAS (qualitative data analysis software), ethical considerations and quality demands. Part II illustrates what the combination of different analyses of the same dataset by several researchers yields. And this is what Thick analysis is about!,Jeanine Evers wants to challenge you to th

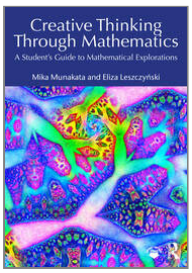
Creative Thinking Through Mathematics

A Student's Guide to Mathematical Explorations



Mika Munakata , Eliza Leszczynski

This book engages students in interactive explorations that encourage creative thinking in mathematics. Organized around five themes, fifteen quests invite students to notice, wonder, and draw upon mathematical reasoning as they connect mathematics to other disciplines and everyday situations. The quests foster creativity by posing open-ended questions, encouraging reflection, inviting playfulness and curiosity, and connecting to research-based traits of creativity. Project ideas and additional online resources encourage students to personalize their learning. Written for undergraduates and pre-service teachers, this book celebrates the idea that everyone can explore mathematics.

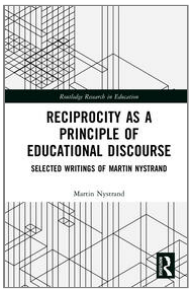
Reciprocity as a Principle of Educational Discourse

Selected Writings of Martin Nystrand



Martin Nystrand

Series: Routledge Research in Education

This book collates Martin Nystrand's research across his forty-year career, bringing together his studies on the dialogic organization of both writing and classroom discourse. Drawing from the conceptual framework of the Bakhtin Circle and other related works, this collection elucidates the role of reciprocity in the management and transformation of conversant interaction in both writer-reader interaction and in classroom discourse. A foundational work in dialogic pedagogy, this volume is essential reading for teachers and researchers interested in dialogic pedagogy, discourse studies, education research, and historiography.

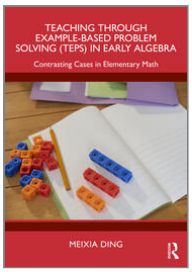
Teaching Through Example-Based Problem Solving (TEPS) in Early Algebra

Contrasting Cases in Elementary Math



Meixia Ding Temple University, USA.

This elementary mathematics resource outlines a pedagogical approach known as Teaching Through Example-Based Problem Solving (TEPS) and presents pre-service teachers with an effective way to instruct early algebra. Using contrasting cases to illustrate inverse relations and the basic properties of operations, it breaks down an often controversial "gatekeeper" for students' learning and strengthens their algebraic thinking. Ideal for use in pre-service elementary math methods courses, and for teacher professional development as a supplement to any elementary math textbook, this book empowers teachers to meaningfully engage students in an often daunting subject area.

Edited by Yana Manyukhina University College London, UK.

This book presents a compelling vision for curriculum futures that prioritises democratic participation, and authentic learning over narrow accountability measures. As educational systems worldwide grapple with post-pandemic challenges, climate concerns, and artificial intelligence, traditional approaches seem ill-equipped to address these unprecedented challenges. Drawing on research from diverse global contexts these contributions converge on three consistent themes: the centrality of student agency in learning, the importance of holistic development that integrates academic achievement with wellbeing, and the need for democratic and participatory approaches to education.

Coaching Academic Fundamentals

A Practical Guide to Teaching Students How to Plan, Learn, and Practice Effectively

Rob Flynn

This book is an educator's playbook for building academic fundamentals— routines and habits that help students plan effectively, learn deeply, and practice with purpose. Drawing from nearly two decades of teaching and coaching, the author lays out a clear progression of nine essential skills that can be taught, coached, and repeated across the classroom and at home. Educators and parents will walk away with simple routines they can implement immediately, and students will gain a model for developing the independence that school demands. Whether you're trying to help one kid or redesign your entire academic support program, these are the fundamentals worth your time.

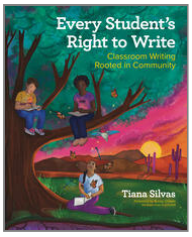
Every Student's Right to Write

Classroom Writing Rooted in Community



Tiana Silvas

Young students deserve writing spaces that center community while working to nurture the heart of the writer. No matter what your writing curriculum is, Every Student's Right to Write will show you how to establish writing environments where students engage wholeheartedly in important community work as they experience first hand the possibilities writing holds as a place to process, discover, imagine, center compassion, and take action. This book shows how the power of writing can flourish in learning communities that honor and celebrate all students when we collectively work to center their right to write while nurturing the visionary in each of our young writers.

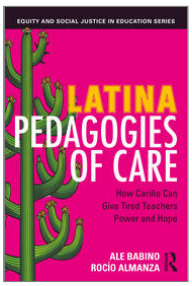
Latina Pedagogies of Care

How Cariño Can Give Tired Teachers Power and Hope



Ale Babino , Rocío Almanza

Series: Equity and Social Justice in Education Series

Despite decades of educational reform, many teachers and students still remain under-resourced and underserved. In this important new book, award-winning educators Ale Babino and Rocío Almanza show how teachers can reclaim their humanity in a system that oscillates between toxic positivity and cynical despair. With stories, dichos, and actionable strategies, Babino and Almanza invite readers to name the pain of the herida abierta—the open wound of educational harms—and respond with care that re-humanizes and re-tools students and their teachers. Educators, teacher educators, and scholars alike will benefit from this book's tender witness, personal testimony, and pedagogical tools.

Pre-Service Mathematics Teachers as Lesson Designers

Edited by Mária Slavíčková

Series: European Research in Mathematics Education

This book addresses how pre-service mathematics teachers (PMTs) can be better prepared to design and teach lessons that engage students in reasoning and proving (R&P), a core yet persistently challenging aspect of mathematics education. Building on the European MaTeK project, the book presents a multi-phase intervention developed collaboratively by five universities to enhance PMTs' design capacity in teaching R&P across diverse curricular contexts. Combining conceptual clarity with practical examples, the book offers valuable insights for mathematics teacher educators, researchers, and curriculum developers.

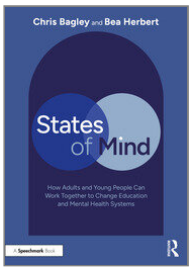
States of Mind

How Adults and Young People Can Work Together to Change Education and Mental Health Systems



Chris Bagley , Bea Herbert

States of Mind critiques and reimagines the traditional paradigms that shape our mental health and school systems, showing that, by embracing a different worldview, we can work with young people in a way that fosters belonging, personal growth and collective action. Education should support us, both individually and collectively, to co-construct ways of being, thinking and acting authentically. This book is essential reading for teachers, educational psychologists, advocacy organisations, thinktanks, and all those wishing to create more hopeful, humane mental health and education systems.

The Science of Learning Meets AI

A Practical Faculty Guide to Purposeful Integration, Student Engagement, and Ethical Practice

Lewis D. Ludwig , Todd D. Zakrajsek University of North Carolina, USA

This guide helps educators use generative AI to strengthen what they already know about effective teaching. Drawing on experience in faculty development and learning science, Ludwig and Zakrajsek propose a three-stage progression model—Adapt, Create, Embed—to help faculty incorporate AI into their teaching. They focus on how AI can deepen student learning by enhancing time-tested frameworks such as TILT, Universal Design for Learning, Bloom's Taxonomy, and Backward Design. Chapters includes classroom-tested examples, reflection prompts, and activities for individual or group exploration. This book offers a path to using AI in ways that support students and reinvigorate teaching.

Emancipation and Vocational Education: Skills, Bildung and the Subject

Bill Esmond University of Derby, UK, Johannes K. Schmees Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Norway, Volker Wedekind University of Nottingham, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Vocational Education

This book challenges the economistic neoliberal rationale for vocational education by drawing critically on emancipatory theoretical approaches, especially a body of German theory neglected almost entirely by contemporary accounts. This book will be of interest to scholars, postgraduate students, and researchers involved in vocational, technical, professional and adult education, the theory of education, and more broadly the economisation of education under neoliberalism. With potential to reframe debates concerning specific approaches to VET that can be applied in the global South, the book has undoubted international appeal.

Researchers as Travellers and Storytellers

Culture, Research and Identity

Edited by Lauren Dyll , Keyan G. Tomaselli University of Johannesburg, South Africa

Researchers are, in many ways, travellers and storytellers whose journeys across landscapes, disciplines, and cultures offer profound opportunities for discovery, reflection, and connection within contemporary cultural studies. Drawing from interdisciplinary perspectives including literary studies, media studies, and cultural geography, this collection demonstrates how travel becomes a site of learning when approached with openness, transforming research into a dialogic process between self and other, between here and elsewhere.

How Policy Happens

Understanding the decisions that shape our education systems

Loic Menzies

This book shows how policy really gets made — not in tidy theories or ministerial press lines, but in time-pressured collisions between convictions, evidence and conflicting demands. Combining anecdotes from the corridors of power with academic theory, and extensive interviews with senior policy-makers and former ministers, this book offers an engaging but rigorous account of how ideas become decisions. 'How Policy Happens: Understanding the decisions that shape our education system' is an essential guide for professionals working in the education and policy sectors including teachers, civil servants, politicians and academics.

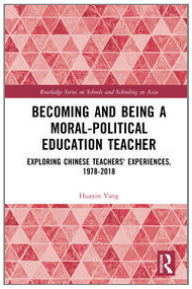
Becoming and Being a Moral-Political Education Teacher

Exploring Chinese Teachers' Experiences, 1978-2018



Huaxin Yang

Series: Routledge Series on Schools and Schooling in Asia

Providing authentic insights into the "China model" of citizenship education, this book draws on lived experiences to exlpore the professional lives of Chinese moral-political education teachers between 1978 and 2018. Rooted in Confucian philosophical and ethical frameworks shared across Asian countries, the study employs a distinctive theoretical framework of state legitimation to examine how teachers perceive and enact moral-political education in their daily practice. Using qualitative research methods, the chapters amplify the voices of educators who serve as agents of the Chinese state in educative legitimation, revealing rich, nuanced details of their lived experiences.

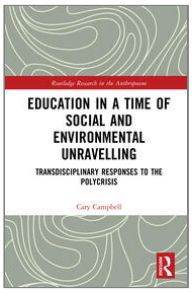
Education in a Time of Social and Environmental Unravelling

Transdisciplinary Responses to the Polycrisis



Cary Campbell

Series: Routledge Research in the Anthropocene

Through a series of essays and interviews with scholars, scientists, artists and activists, this book seeks to articulate existential and educational responses and interventions to the polycrisis. It presents a terrestrial vision for critical eco-pedagogy, arguing that educational freedom in this time is not unlimited or unbounded, but rather cultivated through an engagement with limits and limitations, most fundamentally, the limits of a planet with limited resources and carrying capacity. It will be of interest to researchers and teachers interested in environmental education, as well as posthumanism, decolonizing education, arts-based research methods, and postgrowth theory.

Series: Routledge Research in Educational Leadership

Drawing on a study of an established community-based K-8 charter school as a microcosm for studying educational change, the authors implement a prismatic theory framework design to explore change, liminal spaces, and complex educational problems. It uncovers the detrimental impact of punitive approaches that isolate individuals, perpetuate exclusionary practices, and challenges the traditional behavior management systems prevalent in inclusive settings. As such, it examines how to transform school culture and foster more inclusive restorative practices.

Leading the Next Era of Public Education

A Roadmap for Personalized, Student-Centered, and Equitable Schools

Taylor P. Wrye

Leading the Next Era of Public Education presents a comprehensive framework for transforming any school or district in our rapidly evolving, technology-rich world. Cognitive bias, institutional routines, and compliance cultures keep schools tied to what is familiar over what is effective. Are these legacy structures effectively serving teachers and students in the age of AI and XR? This book offers a practical roadmap for executive leaders, governing bodies, and school-level teams seeking to transition from incremental fixes to system redesign. The book aligns strategy, operations, and instruction to support districts in delivering equitable, student-centered outcomes.

Teach English with AI

A Practical Guide for Secondary English Teachers

Mark Fraser

Teach English with AI offers practical guidance for navigating a rapidly evolving landscape, moving beyond the fear to embrace AI as a tool for enhancing teaching and learning. In a world where AI skills are increasingly valuable in the workplace, this book provides English teachers with subject-specific strategies to integrate AI into their classrooms. It demonstrates how AI can augment, rather than replace, the core human skills that English curricula emphasise. Blending practical application with a clear vision of human-centred design, this essential book equips English teachers with the knowledge, skills and strategies they need to thrive in the age of AI.

Writing Fitness

From Beginner to 5K

David Didau , Rikki Cole

Writing is one of the most cognitively demanding tasks students face yet too often they're expected to produce extended essays before they've fully writing sentences. Inspired by the Couch to 5k running app, Writing Fitness rethinks the way we develop students' writing offering a structured, cumulative model to build fluency, precision, and confidence over time. Ideal for English teachers at Key Stage 3 and beyond, this book offers a practical roadmap for improving writing outcomes—especially for disadvantaged students. Writing Fitness equips teachers to deliver writing instruction that is rigorous, inclusive, and sustainable across the curriculum.

A Methodology of Languaging Self

Autoethnographic Work in Diverse Literacy and Language Educational Studies

Edited by Jason D. DeHart

A Methodology of Languaging Self examines the role of critical methodology in literacy and language practices. Employing globally diverse autoethnographic approaches, it highlights varying perspectives and lived experiences from marginalised authors. Through a decolonial lens, this book offers fresh insights into the complexities of literacy and language practices. Drawing together marginalised voices and experiences through creativity and authentic (re)presentation, this book considers how autoethnography and qualitative methods can work within literacy and language studies.

Countering Colonialingualism in Language Education

Research Practices and Pedagogies from the Global South

Edited by Paul Meighan , Leonardo Veliz University of New England, Australia

Series: Global South Perspectives on TESOL

This landmark volume engages the lived realities of linguistic discrimination by naming and countering colonialingualism, an operating system that marginalizes Indigenous and minoritized communities in language education.
The volume shows how minoritized communities resist and reclaim their languages and knowledge systems, and how policies can be redesigned in accountable, pluriversal ways. It will appeal to scholars, researchers, practitioners, and postgraduate students in applied linguistics, TESOL, and language education engaged with urgent issues of linguistic and epistemic justice and decolonization.

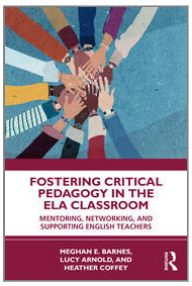
Fostering Critical Pedagogy in the ELA Classroom

Mentoring, Networking, and Supporting English Teachers



Meghan E. Barnes , Lucy Arnold , Heather Coffey

This book presents the story of the Critical English Educator Collaborative (CEEC) – a teacher-guided, informal learning community focused on supporting prospective and practicing ELA teachers' understandings of critical pedagogy. Three ELA teacher educators guided a cohort of novice ELA teachers in monthly virtual conversations relative to the challenges facing public school teachers today. CEEC is a place where participants can be vulnerable and feel safe to share their concerns, experiences, and successes without fear of retribution from school administrators, parents, or faculty. CEEC's story gives individuals tools to engage in the process of becoming critical educators.

Gameplay as Teaching Practice in Literacy Education

Edited by Vaughn W. M. Watson Michigan State Univ., USA., Jin Kyeong Jung , Jungmin Kwon , Lucía Cárdenas Curiel , Joanne E. Marciano

In this book, literacy, language, and educational researchers, teacher educators, and educators offer novel conceptualizations theorizing (game)play as a teaching practice and research approach. The contributors of the book, known as the (Game)play Collaborative, generate new understandings of the interplay of literacy, language teaching, and research, and the intersectional identities of children and youth rendered more visible through (game)play with families, peers, community members, and educators. This is a great resource for academics and educators in the language and literacy fields, educational technology and game studies, media literacy education, and multicultural education.

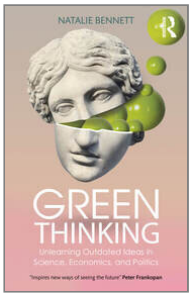
Green Thinking

Unlearning Outdated Ideas in Science, Economics and Politics



Natalie Bennett

Green Thinking seeks to "compost" the views of dead white men (Rene Descartes, Thomas Hobbes, Adam Smith, Norman Borlaugh) and of some not white or dead (Francis Fukuyama, Richard Dawkins, Richard Thaler), and to explore the flowering of Green thinking in the 21st century, growing from the nutrients that microbes and their kin are generating from the wreckage. This book will appeal to fans of David Graeber, Kate Raworth, Tyson Yunkaporta, Jason Hickel, Anna Tsing, Robin Wall Kimmerer, Ursula Le Guin, Bruno Latour, Wangarii Maathai, Merlin Sheldrake, Vandana Shiva, Lynn Margulis, Kim Stanley Robinson, listeners to the New Books Network, Past Present and Future and HPS podcasts.

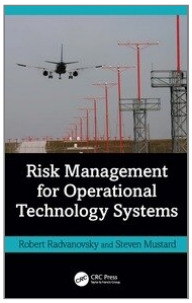
Risk Management for Operational Technology (OT) Systems



Robert Radvanovsky , Steven Mustard

Risk Management for Operational Technology (OT) Systems highlights the importance of applying risk assessments specifically tailored to OT environments, rather than relying solely on traditional IT-focused approaches. The authors propose a modern approach to risk management in OT, one that recognizes these new realities. This approach emphasizes proactive measures to operationally protect legacy and modern OT systems alike from tampering, intrusion, and cyberattack—ensuring that critical infrastructure can remain resilient, safe, and reliable in a connected world.

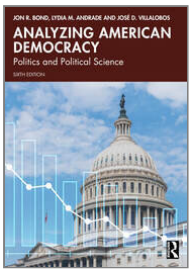
Analyzing American Democracy

Politics and Political Science



Jon R. Bond , Lydia M. Andrade , José D. Villalobos

The sixth edition of Analyzing American Democracy, like its predecessors, seeks not only to educate students about American government and politics, but also to teach two general lessons. First, as citizens of the world, as individuals pursuing an education, a career, and a fulfilling life, students have a lot of good, self-interested reasons to know how politics and government affects their lives. Second, if they want to know more about politics, approaching it scientifically is the most systematic and useful way to do so, and to prepare them for democratic citizenship regardless of the career they choose.

The Yellow Vests and The Battle for Democracy

Taking to the Streets of Paris in the 21st Century

Ida Susser

The Yellow Vests and the Battle for Democracy details how people of all ages, many from the provinces and the urban periphery, rushed through the Paris streets, breaking windows and braving tear gas, challenging the ruling class in extraordinary and unpredictable ways. Avoiding hierarchy and stable organization, and claiming a right to a territory or space that is between the private and the public, these protests imagined a different form of collectivity that is not commodified but established by the social practice of "commoning" – of momentarily linking protests in the streets and other spaces.

Constrained Expertise in India and China

Knowledge and Power in Policymaking

Edited by Manjari Mahajan , Mark Frazier

Series: Politics and International Relations in Asia

Constrained Expertise in India and China explores what kinds of knowledge and knowledge purveyors get mobilized and privileged, and what gets sidelined in policymaking in India and China. Through its detailed empirical studies in both countries, the volume illuminates a trend of increasing concentration of political authority which has frequently demanded that experts be aligned with the central government's agenda. Spaces are shrinking for divergent and oppositional viewpoints, whether these come from the bureaucracy, academia, think tanks, or NGOs. The declining autonomy of experts has been exacerbated by institutional structures, since knowledge purveyors that directly contribute to policymaking typically have been embedded within bureaucracies or otherwise dependent on the state rather than occupying independent bases. Both countries face the challenge of how to build and sustain ecosystems of heterogeneous experts that are not simply echo chambers of executive authority.

Contextualizing Borders in East Asia

Edited by Takashi Yamazaki

This book investigates various aspects of East Asia's borders and borderlands and contextualizes them in the region's dynamic geopolitical and geoeconomic contexts. While the introductory chapter argues for the importance of contextualizing borders from an appropriate theoretical framework built on preceding works, four empirical chapters focus on border issues in China, North Korea, Okinawa, Taiwan and Hong Kong, showing that East Asia, particularly the East China Sea region, consists of nonconventional borders and that deviations from the Westphalian sovereign territory characterize East Asian borderlands.

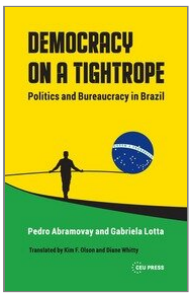
Democracy on a Tightrope

Politics and Bureaucracy in Brazil



Pedro Abramovay , Gabriela Lotta

Democracy on a Tightrope explores the complex relationship between politics and bureaucracy in Brazil's democratic development since the 1988 Constitution. Drawing from academic research and firsthand government experience, Pedro Abramovay and Gabriela Lotta examine how technocracy, meritocracy, and institutional power can both support and undermine democratic governance. Through vivid case studies—from drug policy to the Internet Bill of Rights—the book reveals how balancing political legitimacy with bureaucratic expertise is essential to building an inclusive, participatory democracy that resists authoritarian drift.

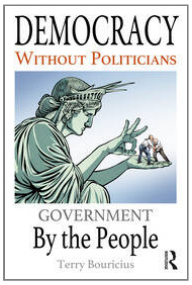
Democracy Without Politicians

Government By the People



Terry Bouricius

This book explains how electoral "democracy" is inherently undemocratic - enshrining rule by elites rather than popular self-rule - and argues that sortition (the use of random selection to form genuinely representative deliberative bodies) is a superior democratic alternative. Written by a former elected politician and policy analyst, this book will be of interest to students, researchers and citizens interested in comprehensive democracy reform.

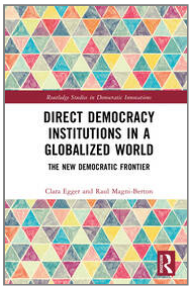
Direct Democracy Institutions in a Globalized World

The New Democratic Frontier



Clara Egger Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands, Raul Magni-Berton Catholic University of Lille, France

Series: Routledge Studies in Democratic Innovations

This book challenges the idea that representative democracy is the pinnacle of political development. It argues that when citizens can directly initiate and veto constitutional changes, democracy enters a new phase—direct democracy—as a distinct political system. This book is of key interest to scholars and students of democratic regimes, reform and democratisation, and more broadly, to comparative politics.

José Luis Villacañas and Political Theory in the 21st Century

Political Theology, Empire, Republic, Populism and Beyond

Edited by Nicol A. Barria-Asenjo

Series: Psychoanalytic Political Theory

With this book, Nicol A. Barria-Asenjo and her team of experts introduce in a systematic and comprehensive way the work of political philosopher, José Luis Villacañas, in the fields of political theory, philosophy, and psychoanalysis. Considered one of the most prolific contemporary philosophers in Spain, with both national and international impact, Villacañas scholarship is characterised by social and political critique with elements of Freudian and Lacanian psychoanalysis and its links it to populist perspectives. Divided into two parts, short and succinct chapters examine various aspects of Villacañas' intellectual production that spans over four decades.

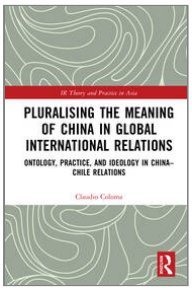
Pluralising the Meaning of China in Global International Relations

Ontology, Practice, and Ideology in China–Chile Relations



Claudio Coloma

Series: IR Theory and Practice in Asia

Coloma examines the bilateral relationship between China and Chile over the past decades and explore an approach that accounts for the plurality of political and ideological dimensions in international relations, particularly concerning non-Western and non-European countries.The book develops three key claims. Firstly, two socialist countries can arrive at antagonistic understandings of socialism and yet articulate ideological convergences around other elements. Secondly, a communist country can obscure its political divergence from an anti-communist regime by redefining its ideological horizon.

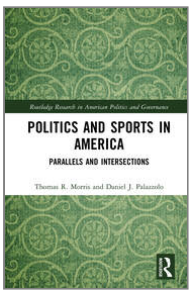
Politics and Sports in America

Parallels and Intersections



Thomas R. Morris , Daniel J. Palazzolo

Series: Routledge Research in American Politics and Governance

Politics and Sports in America offers a fresh perspective on the dynamic relationship between athletics and political life in the United States. This book examines the intersections of sports and politics across multiple dimensions: citizenship and civic identity, the balance between national and local forces, the role of elite athletes in advancing democratic principles, the tension between individualism and collective action, and the parallels between rival sports teams and polarized political parties. Designed for scholars and instructors, this book provides a political science framework for analyzing sports as a source of civic and institutional development.

Rethinking the International Organization for Migration

Edited by Sabine Dini , Shoshana Fine , Antoine Pécoud Universite de Paris XIII, France

This book analyses the crucial dilemmas faced by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and their implications, not only for immigration policy, but also for the global agenda in the field of development, human rights, security or climate change. Once small and relatively marginal, the IOM joined the United Nations in 2016 and now exerts a strong influence on global migration governance. In line with the UN mandate, it seeks to promote a multilateral approach to migration and to uphold the human rights of migrants and their role in global socio-economic prosperity.

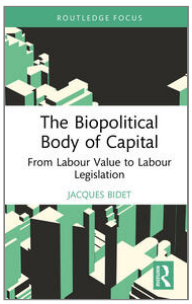
The Biopolitical Body of Capital

From Labour Value to Labour Legislation



Jacques Bidet University of Paris Nanterre, France

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

Originally published in French, this English edition translated by Jacques Bidet offers a rigorous and interdisciplinary reading of Capital, challenging dominant mainstream interpretations that overlook Marx's critique of capitalist society. Centering on the chapter "The Working Day," the book reveals Marx's analysis of labor exploitation as a biopolitical struggle between capital and living labor. Drawing on Foucault's concept of biopolitics, it reframes wage labor as a conflict over bodily autonomy, social reproduction, and the limits of capitalist control.

The Metaphysician of Syndicalism

Georges Sorel, Marxism, and Myth

Edited by Tommaso Giordani , Eric Brandom

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

The Metaphysician of Syndicalism brings together for the first time exciting new research on the radical French philosopher and political theorist Georges Sorel (1847-1922). The most theoretically sophisticated interpreter of Marxism in the French fin de siècle, Georges Sorel was a paradigmatic figure of the transition between 19th and 20th century intellectual life. Though the vast majority of his writings remain unknown and unread, today they are of critical importance given the resurgence of political radicalism. This book aims to provide new directions to the field of Sorel studies in English for this generation.

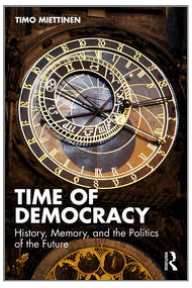
Time of Democracy

History, Memory, and the Politics of the Future



Timo Miettinen

In Time of Democracy, Timo Miettinen takes readers on a fascinating journey through the history of democratic ideas, showing how our political systems are deeply shaped by the way we understand the past, imagine the future, and live in the present. From Renaissance thinkers such as Machiavelli to modern ideas of crisis and revolution, the book traces how democracy emerged from a new understanding of change, human agency, and historical progress. Miettinen defends the openness of the future against both totalitarian visions and nostalgic retreats, showing how democracy withers when history is used to shut down alternatives.

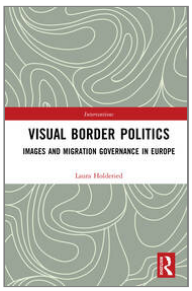
Visual Border Politics

Images and Migration Governance in Europe



Laura Holderied

Series: Interventions

The book highlights how images shape Europe's migration policies, using the pivotal 2015 'refugee crisis' as a lens to examine the complex intersection of visual media and border governance.Understanding visual border politics as situated practices of meaning-making that operate against the background of a structured visual order, it presents a critical framework that combines analyses of policy discourse and visual media discourse. Drawing on a broad sample of policy documents, a large visual dataset, and media analysis, the book adds complexity to existing analyses of visual politics in the context of migration.

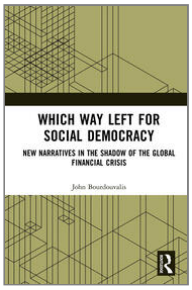
Which Way Left for Social Democracy

New Narratives in the Shadow of the Global Financial Crisis



John Bourdouvalis

Bourdouvalis examines how European democratic responses to the 2008 Global Financial Crisis demonstrated alternative forms of social democracy. The book uses an interpretive case study analysis of democratic responses to the 2008 crisis, and focuses on how movements in Spain, Greece, and Iceland sought to confront and resist neoliberal post-democratic capitalism. It covers protests and social mobilisation against austerity politics between 2008 to 2017, highlighting the inherent tensions and contradictions of neoliberal capitalism, but also the ineffectiveness of existing social democracy to meet systemic disorders of post-2008 Europe.

Beyond the Blue Yonder

A Curated Anthology of Writings on Space

Edited by T H Anand Rao , Niti Jha

This book addresses critical issues in contemporary space security and policy. As space becomes increasingly militarized and contested, this anthology provides essential insights into strategic frameworks, regulatory challenges, and technological developments. The analysis of space deterrence, international law, and sustainability offers valuable perspectives for understanding the evolving strategic importance of the space domain in global security. The War in Ukraine and the Changing World Order

Edited by Stipe Buzar , Jean-François Caron

In this book scholars from political science, economics, philosophy, history, and geopolitics offer critical insights into the conflict in Ukraine and the way it is changing the world order. These international experts explore the nature of the Russian regime, its stance towards the West, insights into the strategic, moral, and legal aspects of the conflict, and an appraisal of Western responses in terms of military aid to Ukraine, power competition, and value driven alliances. The war in Ukraine is often seen as the final nail in the coffin of the post-Cold War order of Liberal convergence, and the opening of a new multipolar reality.

A Bangladesh Reader

Beyond Nation and State

Edited by Mirza Taslima Sultana Jahangirnagar University, Dhaka, Parsa Sanjana Sajid Independent University, Bangladesh, Sayeed Ferdous Jahangirnagar University, Dhaka, Bangladesh

This book is an authoritative interdisciplinary resource on Bangladesh and the region's history, politics, and culture. It provides fine grained ethnographic, literary, and historical analyses. The volume interrogates key liberal categories – law, religion, nationalism, women's rights – through which knowledge of the national space of Bangladesh has been conventionally produced. The implicit call to question and reconfigure dominant epistemologies and knowledge practices that effectively reinscribe bourgeois, capitalist hegemony is a hallmark of current theorizing from the Global South, one that this volume fully embraces.

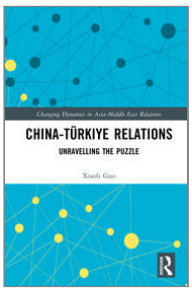
China-Türkiye Relations

Unravelling the Puzzle



Xiaoli Guo

Series: Changing Dynamics in Asia-Middle East Relations

This book provides a comprehensive analysis of post-2002 political, economic, and military relations between China and Turkey. Using primary sources, including interviews with government officials and experts, alongside international relations theory, the author analyses the motives and actions of both nations to demonstrate how China and Turkey pursue their interests through overlapping yet misaligned connectivity initiatives that limit the depth of their partnership, and how structural constraints tied to issues such as the Uyghur question and NATO alignment form a constant backdrop.

From Koreanness to K-ness

Contemporary Korean Culture and Society

Edited by Seryun Lee

Series: The Korean Wave in Translation

From Koreanness to K-ness aims to conceptualise 'K-ness' as a new way of understanding the underlying characteristics that shape the semiotic, cultural, and sociological representations of contemporary Korean culture and society. In this interdisciplinary edited volume, the contributors provide fresh insights into the new Koreanness that has been reshaped by the current international popularity of Korean popular culture, the emergence of new media, and the cross-cultural encounters in the more globalised environment. By exploring themes, topics and theories linked to ongoing discussions and emerging trends, this book illuminates the multidimensional nature of 'K-ness'.

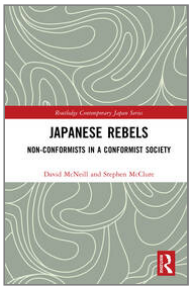
Japanese Rebels

Non-conformists in a Conformist Society



David McNeill , Stephen McClure

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

Japan is often seen through the lens of an unusually resilient stereotype that it is a nation of risk-averse conformists. In "Japanese Rebels," David McNeill and Stephen McClure deconstruct that stereotype by showing that there have always been Japanese people who have rejected the status quo, challenged injustice and fought for personal freedom. A critical read for academics and scholars in the fields of Japanese Studies, Asian Studies, Sociology and Anthropology, as well as those with a longstanding interest in Japan and Asia, especially in individual or social movements for reform and freedom of expression.

On Time

Encounters between India and Europe in Early Calcutta

Peter Robb Emeritus Professor, SOAS South Asia Institute, London, UK

This book explores the intersection of public and private temporal systems. Examining Calcutta between 1780-1830, it reveals how time functioned as both a regulatory mechanism of emerging colonial governance and a deeply personal construct that continued to reflect pre-colonial norms and practices.

Partition, Belonging, and the Birth of Bangladesh

Edited by Subho Basu , Sandeep Banerjee

Series: Routledge/Edinburgh South Asian Studies Series

This book traces the cultural and political economic roots through which an independent Bangladesh was created, exploring the social, cultural and political strands that informed and influenced the experience of Bengali-speaking people in the region from 1947 to 1971 and beyond. Through a sustained analysis of social evolution on both sides of Bengal, this book demonstrates how a sense of affection transforms into a political struggle for freedom and nation formation. It will be of interest to researchers of Bengal, Bangladesh and South Asia studies, as well as Asian History.

Western Popular Music and Indian Modernity

Edited by Biswarup Sen

Series: Routledge South Asian History and Culture Series

From the beginning of the colonial period, western musical forms and practices have travelled to the subcontinent, interacted with domestic sound cultures, and played a significant role in the making of Indian modernity. As the contributions in the volume show, it would be popular western styles like ragtime, jazz and rock n' roll that had the greatest impact on Indian culture and social life.

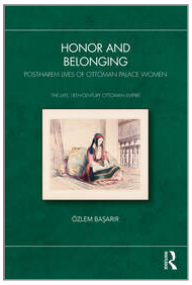
Honor and Belonging

Post-Harem Lives of Ottoman Palace Women



Özlem Başarır

This book explores post-harem lives of Ottoman palace women who lost prominence after sultans' deaths & were overlooked in historiography. Focusing on Sultan Abdülhamid I's consorts (1774-1789), it examines how these women sustained status & finances outside palace through rental properties, bonds & estates. Using Ottoman archives including deeds & inventories, it reveals economic strategies & charitable activities that rebuilt dynastic belonging. Shows alternative female economic agency distinct from valide sultans. Offers fresh perspective on gender, space & power in Ottoman Empire, filling gaps in dynastic wealth & imperial femininity literature.

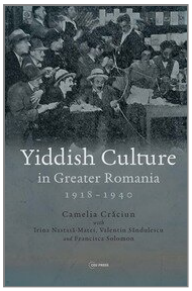
Yiddish Culture in Greater Romania (1918-1940)



Camelia Craciun , Irina Nastasa-Matei , Valentin Sandulescu , Francisca Solomon

This volume examines the socio-cultural mechanisms responsible for restructuring the Yiddish cultural life after the changes brought about by the end of World War I and the creation of Greater Romania. It describes how this process evolved until the political regimes banned the activity of Yiddish theaters, press and, ultimately, the usage of Yiddish, thus making cultural life impossible.

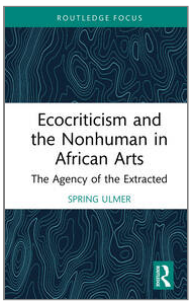
Ecocriticism and the Nonhuman in African Arts

The Agency of the Extracted



Spring Ulmer

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book examines the ways in which African photography, film, and literature are resisting environmental extractivism, using themes of interrelationality. Reminding us that we are all part of an interdependent collective, the book challenges us to act to reverse the extractivist plunder poised to render extinct most of what is presently known as the world. In their work, African photographers, filmmakers and writers are increasingly resisting global capitalism's extractivist ransacking of the African continent. It will be of interest to readers from across disciplines such as African Studies, Black Studies, Philosophy, Photography, Film Studies, and the environmental humanities.

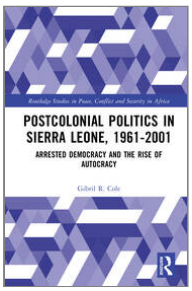
Postcolonial Politics in Sierra Leone, 1961-2001

Arrested Democracy and the Rise of Autocracy



Gibril R. Cole

Series: Routledge Studies in Peace, Conflict and Security in Africa

This book investigates the historical trajectory of postcolonial Sierra Leone, especially the persistence of political violence and autocratic tendencies. Regarded as a litmus test for the consolidation of postwar democracy, the 2023 national polls became a stark reminder of the persistence of élite bickering, electoral malfeasance, autocratic political machinations, and violence. This book investigates how a culture of corruption, political violence, and autocracy crystallized in the decades following independence. Drawing on extensive archival research as well as the author's own interviews, this book will be an important read for researchers of West African history and politics.

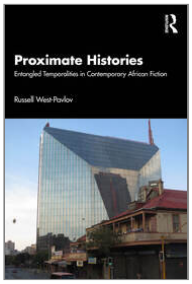
Proximate Histories

Entangled Temporalities in Contemporary African Fiction



Russell West-Pavlov University of Tübingen, Germany

This book examines how African fiction offers revolutionary ways to understand temporality and reimagine history in the twenty-first century. Analyzing works by Achebe, Coetzee, Dangarembga, Makumbi, Mengiste, Mujila, Owuor, and Serpell, it highlights how these authors reject linear Eurocentric historicism for bold, immediate engagements with history and its temporal fabric. Proposing a theory of 'proximate historiographies,' the book explores entangled, expansive, and kinetic temporalities, positioning Africa as a laboratory of futurity. It will interest scholars of African literature, postcolonial studies, and innovative historiography.

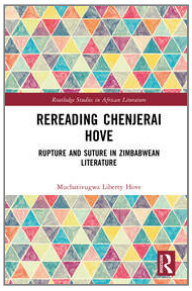
Rereading Chenjerai Hove

Rupture and Suture in Zimbabwean Literature



Muchativugwa Liberty Hove

Series: Routledge Studies in African Literature

This book assesses the life and works of leading Zimbabwean poet and novelist, Chenjerai Hove. Proposing a reading of Hove's work through the dual concepts of rupture and suture, this book investigates Hove's position as a writer in exile. Providing an important original analysis of Hove's work, this book also brings in comparisons with other writers in exile, arguing that displaced citizenship allows African writers to trouble the disjuncture in the nationalist and postcolonial project.As such, this book will be an important read not only for researchers of Zimbabwean literature, but also scholars working on African and diasporic literature more widely.

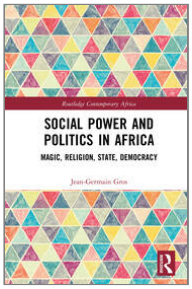
Social Power and Politics in Africa

Magic, Religion, State, Democracy



Jean-Germain Gros

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book investigates the ways in which forms of social power such as the state, democracy, magic and religion coexist in Africa, coming together in cooperative and sometimes conflictual ways to form the essence of politics. Drawing on cases from across the continent, the book suggests that magic and religion are prominent in social milieux, where the perception of control over supernatural forces is seen as important, but they are also by no means absent in legal rational political systems. Multidisciplinary in scope and design, this book will be of interest to researchers across political science, anthropology, sociology and religious studies.

The Evolution of African Armies

From Indigenous and Colonial Forces to Modern Military Forces

Edited by Andrew E. Yaw Tchie

Series: Routledge Studies in Peace, Conflict and Security in Africa

This book investigates how African armies in post-conflict societies are evolving and adapting to new and emerging threats. In recent years, multiple extremely complex armed conflicts have contributed to chronic instability and vulnerabilities in several African states and regions. This book investigates several key case studies to assess the development, deployment and use of African armies in different conflict environments. It examines how African states have utilised bilateral partnerships, the deployment to international peacekeeping operations and military training to enhance security and military capacities as a way to tackle both emerging and existing threats at home.

Regulating Unmanned Vessels

Emerging Solutions

Edited by Zuzanna Pepłowska-Dąbrowska , Igor Vio

Series: Maritime and Transport Law Library

While the technology on crewless ships (Maritime Autonomous Surface Ships, MASS) develops rapidly, the legal framework requires revisions to accommodate this new phenomenon. This book proposes regulatory solutions to the problems arising from MASS operations, carefully balancing the interests of many, at times new, parties involved. Written for policy makers on different levels (international and national), national maritime administrations, practitioners in maritime law, insurers of maritime risks, maritime legal scholars, artificial intelligence scholars, and advanced students of maritime law courses.

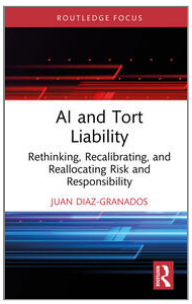
AI and Tort Liability

Rethinking, Recalibrating, and Reallocating Risk and Responsibility



Juan Diaz-Granados

Series: Routledge Research in the Law of Emerging Technologies

This book provides a novel framework for adapting tort law to the challenges of artificial intelligence in all of its forms -- from machine learning to generative models to autonomous and agentic systems. Centred on a liability matrix, this book maps AI systems into four zones according to their private and public risks and benefits and it prescribes tailored liability mechanisms for each. These may range from flexible, fault-based models with safe harbours for low-risk, high-benefit technologies, to strict liability, rebuttable presumptions of causation, and even moratoriums for systems that pose grave public dangers without delivering corresponding public value.

Brexit and Rights Protection in the United Kingdom

Understanding the Challenges

Russell Solomon

Series: Routledge Research in Human Rights Law

The book is about how Brexit has and is likely to impact the UK's protection of rights. In analysing the multi-layered framework of institutions that has provided this protection, Solomon contributes to our understanding of how this critical juncture has disrupted the human rights regime developed under the EU, its limits, and the kind of associative posture the UK will likely adopt towards the EU in the post-Brexit era. The question of rights protection after treaty withdrawal is a significant issue, both inside and outside academic study. It will particularly interest researchers in UK public law, UK/EU human rights law, and comparative constitutional law.

Criminal Justice and Data Protection

Communication Metadata under EU Human Rights Law

Isadora Neroni Rezende

Series: Routledge-Giappichelli Studies in Law

This book inquires how communications metadata can be used in criminal proceedings, having regard to the principles of legality and fairness. It seeks to find some common ground between privacy and data protection regimes on the one hand and criminal procedural rules on the other. To this end, it employs both an interdisciplinary doctrinal research method and a comparative analysis be-tween a limited number of EU Member States. By identifying different stand-ards of fairness for the preventive context, the investigation, and the trial phase, the book highlights gaps in protection and attempts to reconcile these two separate, yet closely related, regimes.

Justice for Denizens

Edited by Johan Olsthoorn

The legal rights of a person within a state usually depends on their migration status. Many states across the world deny non-citizen residents or 'denizens' certain political, socio-economic, and cultural rights granted to every citizen alike. This book tackles pressing moral questions raised by legal rights-differentiation by citizenship status by drawing on the ethics of migration, citizenship, multiculturalism, refuge as well as on normative theories of law, territory, and settler colonialism.

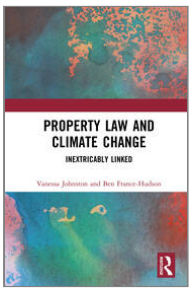
Property Law and Climate Change

Inextricably Linked



Vanessa Johnston , Ben France-Hudson

This book reveals a critical oversight in global climate action: the failure to integrate property law into climate policy and regulatory frameworks. Through systematic analysis of mitigation and adaptation strategies, it demonstrates how the neglect of property law fundamentals undermines the effectiveness of climate responses, with particular focus on Australia and New Zealand. The book offers both diagnosis and direction, examining why current approaches fall short and identifying how property law integration could strengthen climate responses. This book will appeal to researchers in the fields of property law, environmental law and governance, and comparative law.

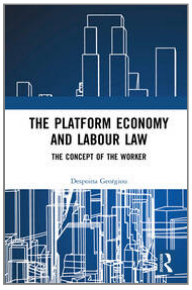
The Platform Economy and Labour Law

The Concept of the Worker



Despoina Georgiou

This book focuses on the evolving definition of an employee, a concept fundamental to labour law protection. The book offers a novel perspective on the characteristics of integrated working activity, as derived from the European Commission's regulatory practice and the CJEU case law on competition law, specifically concerning integrated workers and agents. It critically examines the prevailing 'subordination' paradigm, which has been the traditional basis for classifying workers, but is increasingly inadequate in the modern labour context. This book will be of interest to researchers in the field of EU Law, Labour Law, Competition Law and Business Law.

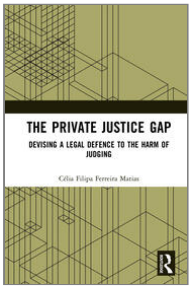
The Private Justice Gap

Devising a Legal Defence to the Harm of Judging



Célia Filipa Ferreira Matias University Of Macao, Macao Sar China

This book examines how private justice challenges the state's monopoly on adjudication, with a particular focus on today's digital contexts. The author contends that private interventions can be legitimate expressions of justice rather than threats to it, and argues for a nuanced approach. By proposing a framework for private justice defence, the book explores how this stance could bridge the gap between public and private justice systems, fostering greater collaboration between citizens and the state. It will appeal to scholars of legal theory and law and technology.

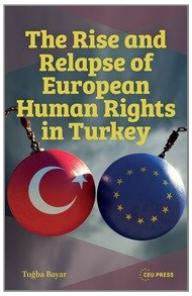
The Rise and Relapse of European Human Rights in Turkey

The AKP Era of 2002–2024



Tuğba Bayar

This book examines the trajectory of human rights in Turkey under the Justice and Development Party (AKP) from 2002 to 2024 within the broader context of EU–Turkey relations. It traces Turkey's shift from early democratic reforms aligned with EU accession goals to a period of democratic backsliding marked by centralization of power and repression. Adopting a neo-Gramscian lens, the book analyzes how EU conditionality initially fostered reform but ultimately failed to anchor liberal norms, revealing a contested hegemonic relationship.

Third-Party Funding in International Investment Law

Ammar Tanhan

This book explores the use of Third-Party Funding (TPF) in Investor-State Dispute Settlement (ISDS), a transformative yet controversial instrument that implicates procedural fairness, the commodification of justice, public interest and state sovereignty in investment law. It argues that attempts to reform TPF have mainly focused on a narrow set of issues which may arise during arbitral practice, specifically the issue of potential conflicts of interest between funders and arbitrators, resulting in regulatory gaps. The book will be of interest to researchers in the field of international arbitration and investment law.

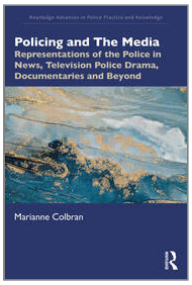
Policing and The Media

Representations of the Police in News, Television Police Drama, Documentaries and Beyond



Marianne Colbran

Series: Routledge Advances in Police Practice and Knowledge

This important new book looks for the first time at the stories the media tell about the police. It looks at the way in which the police have been represented historically across a variety of media, including crime news, police dramas, documentaries, social media and podcasts. But it also breaks new ground by exploring the process as well as the product and how a variety of factors, including police/media relations, shape these narratives. The book will be of key interest to Professional Policing students and researchers, as well as police professionals. It will also be essential reading for students and scholars of criminology, media studies and cultural studies.

Enabling Change in the Investigation of Rape and Serious Sexual Offending

Learning, Development and Wellbeing

Edited by Emma Williams

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

Operation Soteria examined how police investigate rape and serious sexual offences. This book focuses on a critical but often overlooked aspect of that project: the role of learning, development, and officer wellbeing in these challenging investigations. The book provides practical, evidence-based tools for demand modelling, strategic change planning, and assessing officer learning—all grounded on rigorous theoretical foundations. This collection speaks to police professionals, criminal justice practitioners, policymakers, and anyone seeking to understand why meaningful change in this critical area of policing remains so elusive—and what we can actually do about it.

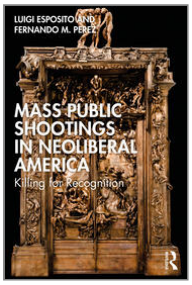
Mass Public Shootings in Neoliberal America

Killing for Recognition



Luigi Esposito , Fernando M. Perez

Why have mass public shootings in the U.S. become more frequent and lethal over the last two decades? This question cannot be answered by looking exclusively at the biographies, personalities, or mental health problems of individual shooters. Instead, to paraphrase C. Wright Mills, human behavior is never self-contained and must be understood at the intersection between the personal and social realms. This book will be an appropriate and useful supplementary text for various types of courses within sociology, criminology, and other social sciences that look at the social dimension of violence.

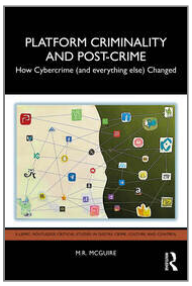
Platform Criminality and Post-Crime

How Cybercrime (and Everything Else) Changed



M.R. McGuire

Series: E-lemic: Routledge Critical Studies in Digital Crime, Culture and Control

Online platforms now constitute so significant a mode of wealth production that many argue a new kind of economic order - 'platform capitalism' has emerged. But the platform vehicle has also provided a new organisational dynamic for criminal entrepreneurs. This book explores how digital crime/cybercrime has been decisively reshaped by the emergence of the digital platform. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of criminology, cybersecurity, technology ethics, and digital economies. It will also appeal to professionals and policymakers engaged with these fields.

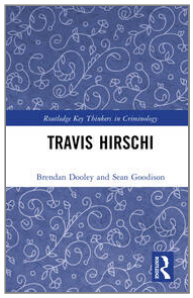
Travis Hirschi



Brendan D. Dooley , Sean E. Goodison Police Executive Research Forum, USA

Series: Routledge Key Thinkers in Criminology

This book offers an intellectual history of Hirschi's contribution to the formative arguments that comprise the modern history of criminology. It expands beyond a rendering of Hirschi's publication record through the inclusion of biographical content. His refrain was that knowledge is built not by accumulation and accommodation but by unapologetically erasing bias and weak logic. Despite his frequent professional disagreements, he maintained friendships because his dissent commanded respect. This book is essential reading for students and scholars interested in exploring the enduring legacy of this key thinker in criminology.

AI Innovation in Business

How Artificial Intelligence Can Create Value for Organizations

Jonny Holmström

Unlike many AI books that take a purely technical or cheerleading angle, this book bridges strategy, management, technology, and policy to demystify the AI revolution and tackle the urgent question facing today's leaders: How can we truly unlock value from AI? Championing an ecosystem approach, Holmström reveals that capturing AI's full value is a strategic and organizational challenge that demands new ways of thinking and collaborating. For business leaders, IT professionals, and policymakers alike, this is essential reading for those looking to harness AI's potential responsibly and strategically—not merely as a tool, but as a catalyst for reinventing the future of business.

Information Assets

An Executive Guide to the Untapped Driver of Business Success

James Price , Nina Evans

In the age of Artificial Intelligence, organisations are increasingly using data, information and knowledge as a competitive weapon. Their data, information and knowledge are arguably their most valuable assets. Yet, this fourth asset is managed badly when compared to the other three assets, namely money, people and infrastructure with considerable risk to the organisation. Executives are accountable for the success of their organisations, and those who fail to manage this critical resource and business enabler effectively can be regarded as negligent.

Quantum Finance

The CFO's Survival Kit for an Uncertain World

Arif Ahmed

Since they assume a static environment, many traditional financial models fall short of capturing market dynamics, leading to poor outcomes. This book draws parallels between quantum mechanics and financial management to explain the erratic behavior of the world of finance. It uses quantum concepts including uncertainty, superposition, and entanglement that have been nurtured over time by renowned physicists. But rather than a deep dive into quantum mechanics or computations, it presents simple principles and recent case studies to illustrate them.

Radical Retirement

The Reinvention of Self After Work

Edited by Christine Eastman , Kath Houston

Most retirement books advocate for a soft and safe landing into retirement. Radical Retirement awakens a sense of excitement about reinventing your sense of self and stepping out into a new time in your life, which might not follow what you had previously thought or what others had thought for you. Each of the chapters, written by people across a wide variety of sectors and with different experiences and stories to tell, show in an honest way how to seize the opportunity to take life in a new and perhaps unexpected direction.

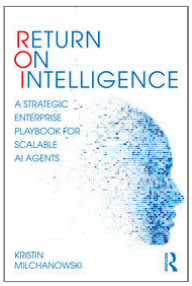
Return on Intelligence

A Strategic Enterprise Playbook for Scalable AI Agents



Kristin L. Milchanowski

A call to lead with empathy, this book redefines what transformation means in the age of artificial intelligence. Where most organizations still chase automation and efficiency, Kristin Milchanowski, PhD, reveals a deeper truth: intelligence is not a tool. It is infrastructure. Cutting through the hype and ambiguity that surrounds AI, she bridges the gap between technological deployment and meaningful transformation. Written for senior executives, transformation leaders, policymakers, and technologists who are navigating the frontier of AI adoption, as well as MBA, AI strategy, and leadership students.

Smarter than You

Winning in Business with Superintelligent AI

Alan Watkins , G. C. Cooke

While headlines focus on risks and regulations associated with AI, this groundbreaking book offers business leaders what they truly need—a visionary yet practical roadmap to harness artificial intelligence as a catalyst for unprecedented human and organizational growth. Written by a renowned neuroscientist and a pioneering tech strategist, this essential guide cuts through the noise to reveal how the most successful leaders will partner with AI to architect tomorrow's business landscape rather than merely react to it. The authors present a revolutionary perspective: AI isn't replacing humanity—it's humanity evolving.

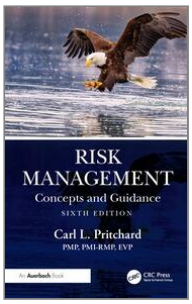
6TH EDITION

Risk Management

Concepts and Guidance



Carl L. Pritchard, PMP, PMI-RMP, EVP Pritchard Management Associates, Frederick, Maryland, USA

In the quest to control the future, risk informs business decision making and investment. The challenge is in creating consistency in managing risk and the risk process. The new sixth edition addresses this challenge and trends that inform any risk discussion. This edition views risk in light of current systems but is still grounded in the history of risk practice. Updated to reflect such emerging trends of risk management as machine learning and genAI, the new edition features an in-depth case study from the bio-research arena but applicable to any organization wrestling with its ability to apply "planned clairvoyance" to peer into the future.

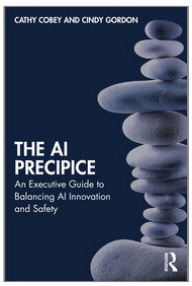
The AI Precipice

An Executive Guide to Balancing AI Innovation and Safety



Cathy Cobey , Cindy Gordon

The AI Precipice fills a significant gap by providing an executive leadership guide to balancing innovation and safety. With the rapid business transformation underway to leverage AI, executives must allocate substantial investments in governance, corporate purpose, and risk management tailored to their organization's strategic goals. The stakes are high, and very few organizations are generating positive returns on their investments. Offering a wealth of strategic and operational insights from credible sources, this authoritative resource is indispensable for senior executives aiming to design, develop, and implement successful AI initiatives within their organizations.

Conceptualising the Consumer

Thinking Beyond the Extended and Distributed 'Self'

Edited by Mark Tadajewski University of Leicester, UK

Series: Key Issues in Marketing Management

This book reimagines what it means to craft a self in contemporary life. The contributions present the self as dynamic, relational and politically charged. They call for a more critical and ethically engaged approach to grasp how identities are formed within the intertwined systems of consumption, technology and power. The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Journal of Marketing Management.

Financial Resilience and the Sustainable Development Goals

Edited by Magdalena Zioło , Bruno S. Sergi

Series: Routledge Focus on Economics and Finance

This book presents the concept of financial resilience from a global and international perspective, and through the prism of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). It covers a broad spectrum, from the theoretical framework and the assessment of the current state of knowledge and research to the practical approach used in financial institutions. The book's key contribution is that it examines the link between the SDGs and financial resilience, which is an interesting and under researched observation. Its original and innovative approach to financial resilience fills this research gap and also includes a discussion of artificial intelligence (AI) and digitalisation.

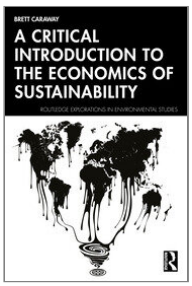
A Critical Introduction to the Economics of Sustainability



Brett Caraway

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

This book explores the various schools of thought which have endeavoured to understand the interactions between technological development, economic growth, and the movement of material and energy through biological and social systems. Examining both economic thought and technological development through a historical lens, Brett Caraway sheds light on the relationship between patterns of economic growth and innovation on the one hand and escalating environmental and ecological crises on the other.

Economic Growth, Price Stability and Governance Implications of Fiscal and Monetary Policies

Global Scenario

Edited by Ramesh Chandra Das

The debate on the necessity of government interventions in economic activities has been well documented in the literature of developmental macroeconomics. This book examines whether fiscal and monetary policies combined with good governance result in better economic growth and price stabilization. It examines how corruption control, institutional quality, and policy coordination impact economic performance across both developed and developing nations. It will be useful to students and researchers of economics, development economics, political science, sociology, international relations and administrative sciences and to policy makers

Global Corporate Tax Governance

Crisis, Consensus, and Revolution

Michael F. Motala

Series: Global Governance

The study analyses how the 2008 Financial Crisis and 2020 COVID-19 pandemic catalysed reform through G-20 and OECD initiatives, resulting in a two-pillar framework with conditional mismatch rules and a 15% minimum Effective Corporate Tax Rate applied country-by-country. Through empirical, comparative, and meta-historical analysis, the author reveals the decisive influence of the Transnational Tax Policy Community (TTPC) as agenda-setter, adviser, and gatekeeper. Despite the TTPC's significant role, the research demonstrates that domestic politics substantially impact implementation and enforcement outcomes.

History of Post-Keynesian Economics

Edited by Louis-Philippe Rochon Laurentian University, Canada

This book commemorates a pivotal moment in economic thought—the 50th anniversary of Alfred Eicher and Jan Kregel's groundbreaking 1975 article in the Journal of Economic Literature that boldly announced a "new paradigm in economics" and marked the first journal publication to carry the post-Keynesian label. What began as an academic declaration has evolved into a influential school of economic thought that continues to shape policy debates and theoretical frameworks worldwide.

Governing Solidarity in European Labour Markets

Atypical Employment and Minimum Wage Reform in Spain and Portugal

Edited by Paulo Marques , Rui Branco , Oscar Molina Universitat Autonoma de Barcelona, Spain, Renato Carmo

Series: Routledge Studies in Labour Economics

This book asks why two structurally similar countries – Portugal and Spain – pursued different routes to reduce labour market segmentation following the conclusion of the sovereign debt crisis. It argues that the composition of the governing social bloc drives the orientation of reform, while the choice of decision-making arena (parliamentary law-making versus tripartite social concertation) and the EU's evolving social governance shape the breadth and depth of reform. Governing Solidarity offers a fresh framework and rich evidence for scholars of political economy and industrial relations, as well as advanced students and policymakers confronting labour market segmentation.

Imagining Regions

Hegemony and Emancipation in Europe and Asia

Edited by Olga Lomová , Zora Hesová

What if regions were not just governed spaces, but imagined ones? Imagining Regions: Hegemony and Emancipation in Europe and Asia offers a fresh perspective on regionalism by shifting the focus from institutional structures to regional imagination—the cultural, ideological, and political visions that conceive of transnational spaces beyond the boundaries of the nation-state. Drawing on historical and contemporary case studies from Europe and Asia, the authors investigate how these ideational projects can serve as tools of both hegemony and emancipation.

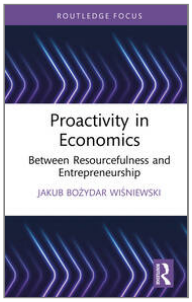
Proactivity in Economics

Between Resourcefulness and Entrepreneurship



Jakub Bożydar Wiśniewski King's College London, UK

Series: Routledge Focus on Economics and Finance

This book argues a concept that allows economists to make better sense of activity where an individual takes greater agency over their personal outcomes through existing employment or additional activity. In this way, proactivity can help economists develop greater understanding of under-valued or under-studied areas such as employee self-initiative, protean career orientation, gig contracting, and prosumer activism. This book will be of interest to readers in economic theory, entrepreneurship, economic development and behavioural economics.

The Future of the International Monetary System

Adjustment or Reform

Edited by Fabio Masini , Bernard Snoy et d'Oppuers

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

This book engages with the scholarly and policy debates that have emerged around alternative devices and structures for the management of the international economy. The key question underpinning this edited volume is whether adjustments to the current global economic governance are enough or whether major reform is necessary, and in which direction, to avoid a crash of the system itself. The book will be of great interest to readers in international monetary systems, economic governance and international finance and banking more broadly.

The Political Economy of the Energy Transition in Latin America

Between Extractivism and Sustainable Development

Edited by Hannes Warnecke-Berger , Hans-Jürgen Burchardt

Series: Global Challenges in Political Economy

The persistence of extractivism in Latin America is a central issue in contemporary debates on global sustainability and the curse of the energy transition. This book explores these pressing concerns by analysing the tensions between the energy transition, extractivism, and green development in Latin America. Through an interdisciplinary approach that integrates political economy, sociology, environmental science, and development studies, this book provides a nuanced understanding of Latin America's resource dilemmas in the context of global energy transitions.

Urban Observation and Social Sensing

Edited by Bin Chen The University of Hong Kong, Fan Zhang

Series: The Urban-Environment-Sustainability-Technology Nexus

Urban Observation and Social Sensing helps readers see cities in a way they have seldom imagined before. Advanced technologies such as satellites in space, near surface drones, or even smartphones, can be used to explain how a city functions, or why certain areas are more populated than others. It examines the science of capturing city images and information gathered from above the ground combined with the information from social media and mobile data on the ground, and how to make sense of it all. From planning better neighborhoods to understanding how city life affects health, this book is a guide to the future of urban living and the technologies that help navigate it.

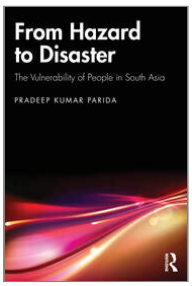
From Hazard to Disaster

The Vulnerability of People in South Asia



Pradeep Kumar Parida

This volume explores relationships between hazard, vulnerability and disaster. Moving beyond technocratic approaches, it argues natural hazards alone don't cause disasters - they become disastrous when intersecting with vulnerable populations. Using qualitative research, the book shows how different groups (by gender, age, wealth, social identity) face diverse outcomes from the same hazard. Social vulnerability crucially determines resilience. The book aims to understand why disasters occur to develop root-cause solutions and amplify voices of at-risk populations.

Mobilities, Design and Passenger Experiences

Edited by Samuel Mutter , Peter Merriman Aberystwyth University, UK

The chapters in this book explore how transport environments, mobility infrastructures, and embodied movement practices have been shaped and 'designed' by a whole host of experts, professionals and political actors for different ends. Examples focus on a range of transport modes in different parts of the world, including buses in urban Chile, underground metro railways in China and the UK, and railways in Sweden and Japan. The book examines the role of architecture and design features in shaping, affording and hindering passenger flows, behaviour and experience, resulting in infrastructures which may include or exclude certain groups of passengers in different ways.

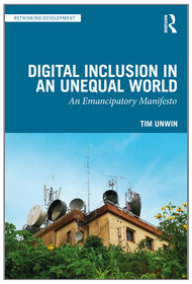
Digital Inclusion in an Unequal World

An Emancipatory Manifesto



Tim Unwin

Series: Rethinking Development

Why do so many efforts to use digital tech to help the world's poor ultimately end in failure? This book provides a detailed critique of previous theory and practice, whilst also proposing practical and realistic suggestions for good practice. This book combines longer thematic chapters by Tim Unwin, one of the world's leading thinkers on ICT for development, with shorter vignettes from other experts across a range of different practical, intellectual, and geographic backgrounds. Students from across the fields of international development, computer science, electronic engineering, geography, and economics will also benefit from its expert insights.

Poverty in Polycrisis

Dynamic Pathways for Lasting Change

Vidya Diwakar

Series: Rethinking Development

We are living in a period of global volatility in which intersecting crises are combining with devastating impacts for people already living in and near poverty. This book carefully examines the dynamics of these crises and challenges us to find new ways forward for policies and programming that more effectively meet the needs of the world's most vulnerable populations.

Climate Action and Sustainable Development Goals

Implementation and Integration

Edited by Gowhar Meraj The University of Tokyo, Japan, Ahmad Mohd Khalid Narsee Monjee Institute of Management Studies, Mumbai, India

Series: Environmental and Societal Dimensions of Sustainable Development Goals

This book investigates the critical relationship and interactions between two major environmental agendas of this century: the Paris Climate Agreement and the UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Through numerous global case studies, this book provides extensive evidence explaining the synergies and trade-offs that exist between these two agendas and illustrates the varying approaches employed by governments and institutions while implementing them. It highlights essential lessons learned, key policy and regulatory measures focused on potential mitigation and adaptation solutions, and the vital role played by a range of stakeholders in achieving the goals of both agendas.

Ethnicity, Inequality, and Economic Development in Sub-Saharan Africa

Edited by Tade O. Okediji University of Minnesota Twin-Cities, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in African Development

This book uses a multidisciplinary approach to explore the links between ethnicity, inequality, and economic development in Sub-Saharan Africa. The book shows how ethnic identity influences all aspects of life in African societies, defining access to political institutions and economic resources, resulting in horizontal or structural inequalities. It assesses the economic, cultural, legal, and sociological connections among ethnicity, inequality, and economic development in Sub-Saharan Africa. A distinctive contribution to development literature, this book will interest students and scholars of Economics, Geography, Anthropology, Political Science, and Development and African Studies.

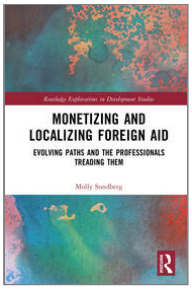
Monetizing and Localizing Foreign Aid

Evolving Paths and the Professionals Treading Them



Molly Sundberg

Series: Routledge Explorations in Development Studies

This book investigates the uneasy coexistence of two current policy pathways within international development: to monetize aid and simultaneously to localize it. The book explores these paths through the experiences of the development experts who are treading them, notably those who hail from aid recipient countries, and those who engage with for-profit instruments and institutions. It looks beyond non-profit NGOs, to the growing institutional realms of consulting firms, development finance institutions, and foreign state aid agencies involved in both for-and non-profit work. It also highlights possibilities for change which would interest development practitioners and policy makers.

Urban Facility Management

Edited by Jan Veuger Blockchain Saxion University of Applied Sciences, The Netherlands

This is the first interdisciplinary book on a holistic approach to Urban Facility Management (UFM) based on recent scientific insights and analysis over a defined period of eight years of research. With this book, I would like to share insights on UFM together with several other authors and specialists worldwide. The book covers what is UFM, the added value of UFM, the results of eight years of scientific research and finally how can we face the future of UFM. UFM adds value by developing sustainable, resilient and vibrant cities that improve the quality of life for residents. UFM promotes economic growth and ensures efficient and effective use of resources.

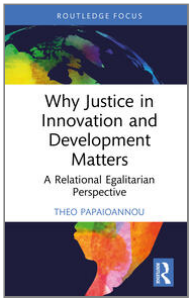
Why Justice in Innovation and Development Matters

A Relational Egalitarian Perspective



Theo Papaioannou Open University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Development and Society

This book argues that justice needs to be imbedded in innovation and development, both so that the fruits of technologies are distributed fairly, and to ensure that social relations in the process of generation and application of new knowledge are equalised. Drawing together updated and new writings, in this book Theo Papaioannou puts forward a relational egalitarian theory on justice in innovation and development. The original relational perspective outlined in this book will be important for researchers across the fields of innovation studies, development studies, politics and philosophy.

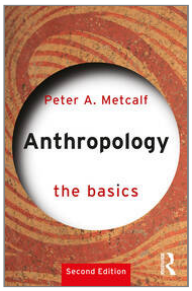
2ND EDITION

Anthropology: The Basics



Peter A. Metcalf

Series: The Basics

The ultimate guide for the student encountering anthropology for the first time, Anthropology: The Basics is a student-friendly text that explains and explores key anthropological concepts including: what is anthropology? how can we distinguish cultural differences from physical ones? what is culture and how do anthropologists study it? what are the key theories and approaches used today? How has the discipline changed over time? New to this edition are a reframing of gender and feminist theory, discussions of queer anthropology, as well as an entirely new chapter on decolonizing anthropology.

Kits for Digital Methods

Doing Sociotechnical Research

Edited by Angela K. VandenBroek , Nicole Taylor Texas State University

Kits for Digital Methods: Doing Sociotechnical Research is a guide to innovating research methods for a world where digital technologies permeate everyday life and research. Drawing on the expertise of leading sociotechnical researchers, it reimagines the "kit" not as a fixed set of tools or solutions, but as a flexible, transparent, and collaborative framework for methodological experimentation. These kits are sandboxes for experimenting, playing, and reflecting on the ethics and possibilities of digital research.

Being Third Gender, Being Neapolitan

Culture, History and the 'Femminielli'

Edited by Paolo Valerio , Amelia Rosa Tundo , Eugenio Zito

This book introduces the Neapolitan 'femminielli', their customs and practices through essays originally published in Italian and newly translated into English. Contributors explore different facets of this human experience and demonstrate its extreme complexity across historical, socio-cultural, literary, iconographic, and artistic dimensions. Their efforts show the femminielli to be a very articulated and at the same time fluid reality, multifaceted and dynamic, in relation to its contextual dimensions. Scholars and students of Cultural Anthropology, Psychology, Gender Studies, History, Performance, and Literature will all find something engaging and timely in this collection.

Covid-19 and Death Studies

Multidisciplinary Perspectives and Lessons

Edited by Erica Borgstrom Open University, UK, Bethan Michael-Fox , Arnar Arnason

This book examines the profound impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on how people experienced dying, death and bereavement from early 2020 onwards. This interdisciplinary collection draws together international examples rooted in empirical research from death studies scholars to make sense of these impacts. The collection includes a wide range of insights from how personal and societal responses to the pandemic shaped the ways people talked and thought about death, to the provision of palliative and intensive care, and changes in funerary practices.

Ethnographies of Loss, Longing, and the Afterlives of Care

Remnants of Attachment

Edited by Lauren Cubellis , Rebecca Lester

The anthropological work on care has sought to diversify conceptualizations of the concept, to challenge how we recognize it and identify its happening, and to critique its complicities and caveats. This volume revolutionizes this framing by articulating a mode of care that remains dynamic, and which acknowledges the changeability of care and caring over time and place. These authors address a fundamental tension in the theoretical and conceptual of work of care to date; namely, that attempts to identify care or problematize it often end up staying it, even when that staidness expresses complexity.

Excavating Power

Archaeological Labour, Imperial Narratives, and Identities in Eastern Mediterranean (19th-20th c.)

Edited by Simona Troilo

This book analyses archaeological excavations and the use of antiquities in the eastern Mediterranean from a unique and original perspective, that of power relations built on the vestiges of the past. Starting with Egypt, Crete, Palestine, Greece and Ottoman Empire, the authors of the essays reconstruct the history of some European excavations in Ottoman and post-Ottoman times, bringing to light the marginalised actors and the different narratives shaped on antiquities.

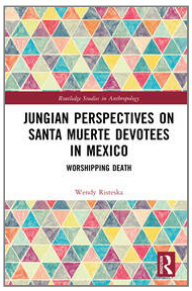
Jungian Perspectives on Santa Muerte Devotees in Mexico

Worshipping Death



Wendy Risteska RMIT University, Melbourne

Series: Routledge Studies in Anthropology

This groundbreaking ethnography offers a deep psychological framework for understanding the Santa Muerte (Saint Death) phenomenon in Mexico. The book explores the spirituality of the most vulnerable and marginalised in response to persistent threats and the collapse of conventional safety nets, arguing that devotion to Santa Muerte functions as a critical psychological container for destructive forces, offering a sense of order and control amid the real and existential dangers of a society living through the chaos of an "apocalypse." This is essential reading for anyone interested in contemporary Mexican Studies as it highlights the psychological impact of life-near-death.

Sacred Places in the Arctic and Beyond

Cultural and Existential Transitions

Edited by Francis Joy , Patrick Dillon , Dawid Bunikowski

Series: Arctic Worlds

Sacred Places in the Arctic and Beyond brings together indigenous and non-indigenous scholars, rightsholders, and practitioners to explore the status and management of sacred places, which are important as both tangible and intangible cultural heritage. They address the problem of how Western-orientated discourses and organisational structures frame legislation about, and management of, sacred places in ways which are seldom compatible with how Indigenous people understand these places and engage with them. Major themes from the case studies are integrated with ideas from cultural ecology and legal pluralism into a framework to inform future policy.

Telling Other Tales

Experiencing the Balinese Mask World

Edited by Irving Chan Johnson

Series: Asian Heritages

Since it first mesmerised Western audiences in the early twentieth century, Balinese masked dance–drama (Topeng) has drawn sustained scholarly attention. Yet until now, much of that attention has been filtered through non-Balinese perspectives. Telling Other Tales seeks to redress this imbalance by presenting Topeng as a living, plural tradition—one whose meaning is co-created by Balinese and non-Balinese performers, scholars, and other observers alike.

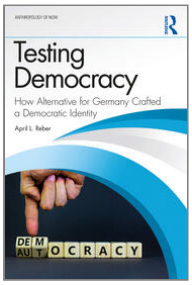
Testing Democracy

How Alternative for Germany Crafted a Democratic Identity



April L. Reber

Series: Anthropology of Now

This book examines Germany's political party, Alternative for Germany (AfD), particularly how they test assumptions about democracy and redefine its norms. Through extensive ethnographic research with AfD members, this book reveals three methods AfD members employed: disruption of memory politics, information and narrative control, and provocative performance strategies. Ultimately, it demonstrates how seemingly mundane techniques, like words, songs, performances, and infographics, can drastically redefine democratic norms and policy. Scholars, students, and general readers across the social sciences will find this book an invaluable resource in understanding contemporary politics

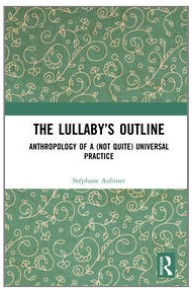
The Lullaby's Outline

Anthropology of a (not quite) Universal Practice



Stéphane Aubinet

This book offers an anthropological exploration of the lullaby, a type of music found in nearly all human societies. The chapters review diverse ethnographic cases, from bedtime routines in Western societies to historical and Indigenous practices. Starting from four European traditions (the Irish suantraí, the Georgian iavnana, the Ancient Roman nenia, and the Sámi dovdna), the study delves into themes of power, spirituality, death, magic, technologies, and Indigenous ontologies, which echo across diverse cultural contexts without being quite universal. It will be of interest to scholars of anthropology, music, folklore, and beyond.

The Meaning of Weapons

Material and Discursive Negotiations in Culture and Religion

Edited by Lucien van Liere , Erik Meinema

This book studies the role, representation, and materiality of weapons, focusing on what they mean to communities and individuals in various cultural, social, political, and religious settings. The volume brings together insights from various disciplines including anthropology, religious studies, philosophy, history, and conflict studies. In doing so, it lays the groundwork for highly needed new theoretical and methodological directions to understand the meaning of weapons in our times.

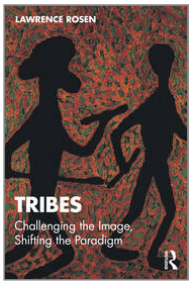
Tribes

Challenging the Image, Shifting the Paradigm



Lawrence Rosen Princeton University, USA

Tribes: Challenging the Image, Shifting the Paradigm reconsiders the concept of "tribe" in political, cultural, and academic discourse, offering a dynamic alternative to outdated and damaging stereotypes. It explores how tribes disperse power, resist conquest, and regenerate through ritual and cultural practice. The volume challenges the misuse of "tribalism" in modern politics and repositions tribes as vital actors in global conversations about identity, governance, and resource rights. It is ideal for students and researchers interested in anthropology, human rights, international relations, and political rhetoric.

Why Anthropology Needs the Global South

Edited by Carla Guerrón Montero , Dan Podjed

What would anthropology look like if the South were our North? This book turns the map upside down and calls for transforming anthropology from a singular to a plural perspective, which recognizes the Global South as a site of original theory and research rather than merely a source of information. The authors in this book offer fresh and accessible reflections on their anthropological journeys in the Global South, North, and the worlds in between. This is an essential read for anthropology students, professionals and teachers, as well as for anyone seeking a compass for navigating the contemporary world.

RAGEism

Racism, Ageism and the Quest for Liberation Democracy

Maya Rockeymoore Cummings

Series: Aging and Society

In RAGEism, Dr. Maya Rockeymoore Cummings reveals the hidden architecture of systemic injustice that has shaped American policy for generations. Coining the term "Rageism" to describe how racism and ageism intersect, she exposes the deliberate policy choices that disadvantage African Americans, Latinos, Native Americans, and marginalized Asian communities throughout their entire lives. Drawing on her experience as a Congressional staffer, policy strategist, and advocate, she weaves compelling case studies with personal insights to show why these aren't just "other people's problems" – they threaten the foundations of American democracy itself.

Yoland Wadsworth

Effective evaluation can provide valuable insights into the way a program, a course or an organisation is being run, as well as direction for improvement. This widely-used introduction to evaluation is intended for non-specialists in the human-centred services who need to do evaluation as part of a busy workload. With extensive examples, it is a handy reference for professionals and students in health, welfare, adult education and community work, and in government and non-profit agencies.

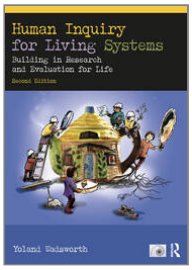
2ND EDITION

Human Inquiry for Living Systems

Building in Research and Evaluation for Life



Yoland Wadsworth

If we don't have the kinds of health and human services or even the kinds of lives, communities and organisations we want, then we need to think differently. Yoland Wadsworth offers an inspired insight and radically new proposition: that the act of our 'inquiring', of researching and evaluating together, is the way by which every living organism and all collective human life goes about continuously achieving the conditions for life. All three of Yoland Wadsworth's best-selling books have been brought together in this Routledge trilogy to offer for the first time a coherent body of work addressing the pressing needs of people to 'inquire their way' to the future.

2ND EDITION

Introduction to Media Sociology

All Media Are Social

Andrew M. Lindner Skidmore College, USA, Stephen R. Barnard

Series: Sociology Re-Wired

From streaming platforms to smartphone apps to the good old-fashioned newspaper, media are nearly omnipresent in contemporary life and act as a powerful social institution. In this new edition of Introduction to Media Sociology, Lindner and Barnard encourage readers to think critically about the power of big media companies, state-media relations, politics and journalism, representations of race, class, gender, and sexuality in media, and what social media may or may not be doing to our brains, among other topics. The second edition reflects the evolving power of Big Tech firms, the proliferation of misinformation, and voices from outside the mainstream.

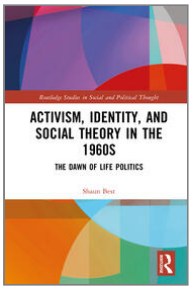
Activism, Identity, and Social Theory in the 1960s

The Dawn of Life Politics



Shaun Best

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

This book examines the crucial connection between social analysis and everyday practice using a study of the transformative social movements of the 1960s. It demonstrates how personal experiences of discrimination can reflect broader mechanisms of social exclusion, to reveal how the fusion of personal and political spheres created new forms of identity politics and social activism that continue to shape contemporary society. This accessible text provides essential context and offers new arguments for understanding contemporary social movements and identity politics and is designed for students and researchers across social science disciplines.

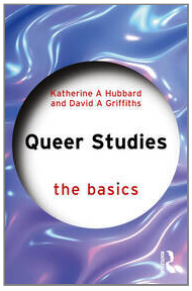
Queer Studies: The Basics



Katherine A Hubbard , David A Griffiths

Series: The Basics

Queer Studies: The Basics offers a concise and accessible introduction to the foundational principles, history, and contemporary concerns of queer studies. Organised across eight themed chapters, the book traces the development of queer theory from the late 20th century to the present, while exploring key topics such as identity, health, media, sex, and temporality. It takes a multi-disciplinary and intersectional approach, introducing readers to key debates, concepts, and cultural contexts that have shaped the field. This book is ideal for students and newcomers to queer studies across disciplines including gender studies, media studies, sociology, and cultural studies.

Class and Conjuncture in Television, Cinema, and Literature

Yiannis Mylonas

Series: The Cultural Politics of Media and Popular Culture

This book presents a critical examination of how cultural forms, ranging from cinema and TV to literature, address class within the overarching context of a crisis conjuncture, specifically the period following the 2008 financial crash. It demonstrates how culture serves as a crucial site for capturing the contemporary "structure of feeling," publicly mediating the period's pervasive social anxieties, latent aspirations, and political antagonisms. Bridging theory and praxis, it will not only appeal to scholars interested in cultural sociology, literature, and politics, but to those in the arts, and to students of media, sociology, cinema, literature, and cultural studies.

Digital Technologies and Aging in South Asia and Middle East

Transforming Elderly Care

Edited by Sheeba Khalid , Glenn W. Muschert , Driss Ed. Daran

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

Khalid, Muschert, and Daran explore how digital technologies are reshaping elderly care in South Asia and the Middle East, addressing the opportunities and challenges of this transformation through a critical sociological and interdisciplinary lens. The book examines whether technological advancements can bridge or widen existing disparities in healthcare for older adults, using cross-regional perspectives, empirical case studies, and policy analysis from South Asia, the Middle East, and other comparable contexts. It discusses practical solutions for inclusive technology adoption, ethical concerns, and community-driven models.

Fair Skilled Mobility

A Manifesto

Edited by Izabela Grabowska , Mary Boatemaa Setrana
University of Ghana, Ghana

Series: Routledge Studies in Development, Mobilities and Migration

This book sets out a new approach to the global flow of skilled migration, based on ethical, fair, balanced and sustainable frameworks. Not focusing on human capital loss and 'brain drain', the book argues that we should look towards mutually beneficial outcomes. In a world where rapid technological advancements and evolving economic landscapes are reshaping labour markets, this book serves as a guide for 'doing' skilled migration, highlighting shared development, social inclusion, and economic resilience opportunities. It will be a breath of fresh air for researchers, practitioners, and policymakers looking for possible solutions to global migration skill flow challenges.

Intellectuals in the 21st Century

Reconfiguring Ideologies and Global Struggles Against the Elitization of Knowledge

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

This book sees international academics from across five continents come together to critique the role of the present-day intellectual. Arguing that the elitization of the social sciences and humanities has reached a climax in the 21st century, due to the commercialisation of knowledge and the capitalist model, it asks how intellectuals can free themselves of the ideological labyrinth, and reshape the contributions of the social sciences and humanities for the needs of our time. It will appeal to scholars, intellectuals, and postgraduate students with interests in social and political theory and philosophy, epistemology, social class, neoliberalism, and academia.

Intersectionality and Environmental Movements

British Activism in Global Context

Lydia Ayame Hiraide

Series: Social Movements in the 21st Century: New Paradigms

In view of recent criticisms of the environmentalist movement for centring middle-class whiteness, this book examines the discourses, strategies, and theories of environmentalism in modern Britain through the Black feminist lens of intersectionality. The author proposes a framework of 'intersectional absences and presences' to argue that how environmentalists understand—or ignore—intersectionality shapes their social movements in important ways. It affects how they build and communicate their political demands as environmentalists, as well as the literal spaces in which they organize.

Lines and Passages

Reimagining Migration and Borderlands in South Asia

Edited by Salah Punathil

Migration across borders has become a more contentious political question in contemporary South Asia than ever, especially in the context of recent populist assertions and migration politics. Going beyond the predominant political narrative, the essays in this book not only engage with everyday life as it unfolds in marriage and kinship relations and ethnic and cultural practices at borderlands but also address critical issues that shape everyday life under socio-political, economic, and legal conditions, such as policing, conflicts and violence, illegality, and other forms of precarity for migrant subjects.

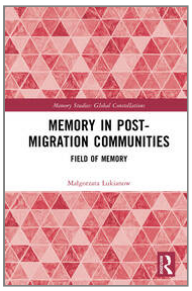
Memory in Post-Migration Communities

Field of Memory



Małgorzata Łukianow University of Warsaw, Poland

Series: Memory Studies: Global Constellations

This book offers an exploration of post-migration memory fields—spaces where multiple and conflicting memory narratives of the same past event intersect within a limited locality. Focusing on Poland and the remembrance of the post-war and post-communist periods, it examines how memories coexist, clash, merge, or become silenced. Combining theoretical insight with grounded ethnographic analysis, it provides conceptual and methodological tools for studying societies shaped by large-scale population exchange. Of appeal to scholars and students of sociology, anthropology, history, and memory studies interested in collective remembrance, local identity, and post-displacement heritage.

Migration as a Collective Project

A Temporal Perspective on Hadiya Migration to South Africa

Edited by Dereje Feyissa , Fana Gebresenbet

Series: Studies in Migration and Diaspora

This book seeks to broaden the conversation in migration studies by incorporating a collective perspective, as illustrated by the case study of Hadiya migration from Southern Ethiopia to South Africa. Rather than presenting individualism and communalism as opposing forces, the authors conceptualize them as points on a continuum. At the starting end, communal ties are crucial, particularly in the early stages of the Hadiya migration, but over time, as migrants accumulate wealth and encounter increasing competition in South Africa's informal economy, individualism begins to take precedence, gradually unravelling the social fabric that initially supported collective success.

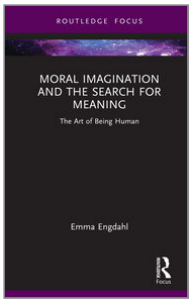
Moral Imagination and the Search for Meaning

The Art of Being Human



Emma Engdahl University of Gothenburg, Sweden

This book explores what it means to live an emotionally engaged and morally responsive life in a world increasingly governed by productivity, fragmentation, and emotional detachment. Drawing from a rich interdisciplinary background it offers a lyrical yet analytical meditation on empathy, recognition, and the fragile practice of democracy. This volume speaks to academics and students, while remaining accessible to therapists, educators, and general readers interested in emotional intelligence and ethics. It will particularly appeal to readers of bell hooks, Rebecca Solnit, and Martha Nussbaum who seek a lyrical voice that bridges academic theory with lived experience.

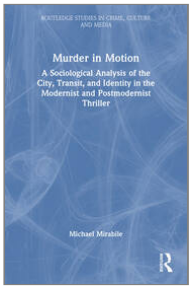
Murder in Motion

A Sociological Analysis of the City, Transit, and Identity in the Modernist and Postmodernist Thriller



Michael Mirabile

Series: Routledge Studies in Crime, Culture and Media

Murder in Motion examines the fictional category of the thriller – one founded on the affects and objects of suspense – through the lens of city dwelling. In particular, the purpose is to locate the mechanism of suspense against the backdrop of the increased mobility and speed of modern life, employing exegetical tools drawn from urban sociology and related fields to determine the significance of representations of anxiety within metropolitan settings. The audience for the book will be students, instructors, and researchers in literary studies, film studies, media studies, as well as researchers in sociology and critical theory.

Pathways in Decentralised Collective Bargaining in Europe

Edited by Frank Tros

One of the main challenges in labour relations in Europe is the ongoing decentralisation of collective bargaining from national and sectoral levels to company levels. Based on recent research, this book shows high varieties across European countries and economic sectors in degrees, forms and impacts of decentralisation. The authors explore continuity and change in regulating and practicing collective bargaining in France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Poland, Spain and Sweden. Company case studies in manufacturing and retail show the divergent effects of national regimes and social partners' power resources on trade unions' strategies and influence in company bargaining.

Photographic Collections as Visual Method

Innovation and Creativity in Asia

Edited by Terence HENG University of Liverpool, UK, Soon-Hwa OH Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in Research Methods

This book explores photographic collections as way of doing and/or inspiring research in the humanities and social sciences. It explores the various ways in which photographic collections exceed their archetypal role as records of the past, to become not only a unit of analysis, but also the starting point for creative and critical work across disciplines. A wealth of data, stories, and inspiration, this book will appeal to scholars, students and practice-based researchers in the areas of visual and creative methods, methods for visual sociology and visual anthropology, photographic studies, museum studies, and area studies with a particular focus on Southeast and East Asia.

Refugee Resettlement as an Institution

Edited by Rawan Arar , Molly Fee , Heba Gowayed , Blair Sackett

Series: Ethnic and Racial Studies

This book examines how scholars and policy makers primarily characterize refugee resettlement as a humanitarian solution or a migration pathway. While these descriptions may be accurate, they are not comprehensive. It examines how such framing influences understandings of resettlement's scope and impact, generating conceptual blind spots that limit critical inquiry. By reframing resettlement as an institution embedded in a complex network of actors, relations, and practices, the chapters in this book reveal how resettlement is not a passive process.

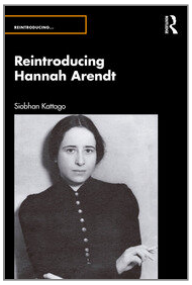
Reintroducing Hannah Arendt



Siobhan Kattago

Series: Reintroducing...

Reintroducing Hannah Arendt connects Arendt's philosophical and political thought to social theory and the social sciences in the 21st century, as individuals experience profound social, political and technological change. In addition to outlining central themes in her published work, Siobhan Kattago argues for the acuity of Hannah Arendt's insights for understanding our century of polarized politics, post-truth, artificial intelligence, social media, and echo chambers. The volume will thus appeal to scholars and students of sociology, philosophy, social theory and politics with interests in the thought of Hannah Arendt and its enduring significance.

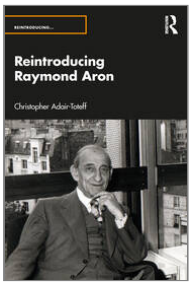
Reintroducing Raymond Aron



Christopher Adair-Toteff University of South Florida, USA

Series: Reintroducing...

This book reintroduces the work of Raymond Aron and demonstrates the pertinence of his thought for reflection on social interaction and the human condition. One of Europe's leading intellectuals, Aron was primarily a sociologist, but his writings transcended disciplinary boundaries and engaged with philosophy and political theory. Reintroducing Raymond Aron explains his work within its historical context, underlining its importance and relevance for contemporary sociological and political problems. It will therefore appeal to scholars and students of sociology, sociological theory, political theory and international relations.

Teamster Rank and File

Power, Bureaucracy, and Rebellion at Work

Samuel R. Friedman

Explaining why social movements and labor activists run into obstacles, and how these can be overcome, this book draws valuable sociological and strategic lessons from the drivers' ten-week wildcat strike that helped that lay the basis for organizing Teamsters for a Democratic Union. This book will be useful for courses on social movements, work and industry, labor sociology, labor history, labor studies, the sociology of organizations, and graduate courses in capitalism and socialism, as well being a good case study for courses in qualitative research methods. Technocracy

Knowledge and Power in the Information Age

Paul O'Connor United Arab Emirates University, Abu Dhabi

Series: Contemporary Liminality

In what is described as a 'knowledge society', this book argues that contemporary knowledge is systematically filtered and distorted by the requirements of the bureaucratic-managerial organisations that constitute the structural core of hypermodernity. As knowledge becomes increasingly politicised, almost every 'fact' serves an agenda. A compelling study of the politics of knowledge, this book sheds light on the way a certain type of knowledge is used to lay claim to authority, status and resources, and how its endless expansion reshapes society. It will therefore appeal to scholars of sociology, anthropology and social theory with interests in the sociology of knowledge.

The Ambiguity of Consent

Consent Puzzles in Film, Television, Public Discourse, and the Law

Edited by Michele Meek

This book explores the complex, often contradictory nature of consent in contemporary society. It examines how consent is expressed and debated across media, legal systems, and public discourse, particularly in the height of "consent culture" in the 2020s. Through case studies and cultural analysis, it addresses issues such as the blurred lines between "bad sex" and assault, the instability of consent for minors, and how normative models often fail to account for structural inequalities. This book is ideal for students and researchers in Gender Studies, Media Studies, Law, and Politics, as well as anyone interested in the ethical, legal, and cultural dimensions of consent.

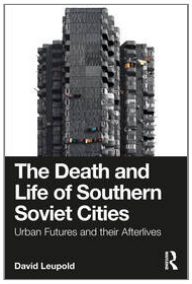
The Death and Life of Southern Soviet Cities

Urban Futures and their Afterlives



David Leupold

What does it mean, three decades after the demise of the USSR, to inhabit cities built for a future that has never arrived? In pursuit of the question – what is left of the socialist city? – the aim of this book project is not only to trace the material and mnemonic remains of the socialist city but to show how the Soviet discourse of the city would at times engender radical ideas that challenged the narrow confines of state socialism itself. As such, this will be an important resource for students, instructors, and researchers in understanding and thinking through socialism, post-socialist transformation and histories of the USSR.

The Future of DEI in the Higher Education Workforce

Present Controversies and Future Strategies

Edna Chun Columbia University, US, Alvin Evans

The Future of DEI in the Higher Education Workforce takes readers through an in-depth and probing analysis of the evolving and contentious landscape surrounding Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) initiatives in American higher education over the past two decades. Extensively researched and illustrated with case studies depicting innovative approaches in support of inclusion, equity, and organizational justice, the book provides a thorough account of the current backlash toward DEI practices and raises compelling responses for researchers of higher education and academic and administrative leaders.

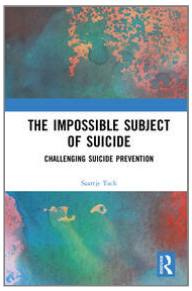
The Impossible Subject of Suicide

Challenging Suicide Prevention



Saartje Tack Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, Netherlands

Deploying feminist and queer theories of embodiment and subjectivity, The Impossible Subject of Suicide stages an intervention into dominant understandings of suicide that position suicide prevention as the only possible and ethical response to suicide, thus ruling it out as a legitimate choice. It will therefore appeal to scholars in the social sciences and humanities with an interest in mental health, suicide, and or questions around agency, embodiment, and subjectivity.

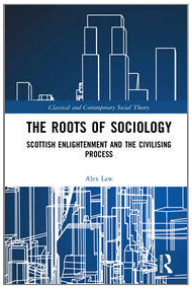
The Roots of Sociology

Scottish Enlightenment and the Civilising Process



Alex Law Abertay University, UK

Series: Classical and Contemporary Social Theory

This book argues that of today's 'core' social scientific disciplines, it is sociology that has inherited the capacious ambitions of the Scottish Enlightenment. A critical, qualified introduction to the precocious effort of the Scottish Enlightenment to create a theory of 'the civilising process', The Roots of Sociology assesses the contribution and continuing relevance of the enlightened intellectuals to sociology as an intergenerational process. As such, it will appeal to scholars and students of sociology, social theory and intellectual history.

Circular Economy Assessment

Indicators and Applications

Edited by Dalia Streimikiene

This book provides theoretical foundations for circular economy concepts, principles, and models while analyzing their applications across agriculture, industry, and energy sectors. It systematically evaluates measurement frameworks and indicators that track circular economy progress among countries, with particular focus on EU member states. The authors develop and test indicator frameworks through case studies that reveal patterns of progress, convergence, or divergence in circular economy implementation. By examining policies that promote circular economic development, the book identifies the best practices for EU nations and gives recommendations based on tested frameworks.

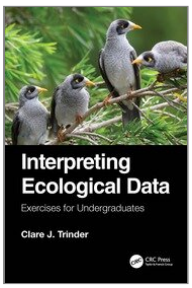
Interpreting Ecological Data

Exercises for Undergraduates



Clare J. Trinder

With over 70 exercises containing more than 270 questions, Interpreting Ecological Data allows students to apply ecological theory learned in classes to new, 'real' data from the scientific literature. Rather than simply rote learning word-perfect answers, they are empowered to apply their knowledge and develop critical thinking skills: core attributes for science undergraduates. The book covers ecological principles such as predation, competition, mutualism, food-webs and biogeochemical cycling. The answers are all included in the final chapter, with detailed explanations where relevant.

Climate Change

What Must Be Done?

Edited by Philip Clayton , Jaeha Woo

Series: Routledge Advances in Climate Change Research

Many books explain why global warming is a problem; this book shows what must be done. It addresses central themes of climate change in straightforward terms, laying out the actions that need to be taken to slow global warming and adapt to the near and long-term future that we have created for ourselves. Collecting knowledge, personal stories, and practical insights from experts across a dozen specialties, this volume shows how we can adapt to climate change in order to protect the most vulnerable among us.

Climate Change, National Security and Geopolitics

Strategies and Responses of Five Major Powers

Edited by J. Scott Hauger , Robert Mizo

Series: Routledge Advances in Climate Change Research

This book is a comprehensive study on how the national security sectors of China, India, Japan, Russia and the United States have engaged the idea of climate change as an existential threat. Climate Change, National Security and Geopolitics examines the respective ways in which the five states have framed the issue of climate change in relation to their larger national security construction. It investigates the extent to which these countries have engaged with climate change as a security challenge, and how this has informed their larger security policy making and practice.

Environmental Ethics and Film

Pat Brereton Dublin City University, Ireland

Series: Routledge Studies in Environmental Communication and Media

Environmental Ethics and Film presents and defends a systematic and comprehensive account of the moral relation between human beings and their natural environment and assumes that human behaviour toward the natural world can and is governed by moral norms. In contemporary society, film has provided a powerful instrument for the moulding of such ethical attitudes. Through a close examination of the medium, Environmental Ethics and Film explores how historical ethical values can be re-imagined and re-constituted for more contemporary audiences.

Just Transition and Climate Justice in Sub-Saharan Africa

Epistemologies, Policy and Practice

Edited by Philani Moyo , Willice 0. Abuya , Gabriel Botchwey

Series: Routledge Advances in Climate Change Research

.Just transition offers a way for fossil fuel-dependant economies to meet climate goals, while ensuring that society as a whole – communities, workers, young people and marginalised groups – remain in the forefront of the conversation. Bringing together leading scholars in the field, who apply a climate justice analytical lens and just transition concepts, the chapters question the extent to which pathways towards net zero carbon emissions by 2050 are achievable in Africa and whether this can be attained without undermining economic growth, jobs, livelihoods and lives.

The Interplay Between the Biosphere and Climate

Costas A. Varotsos , Yuri A. Mazei Lomonosov Moscow State University

The climate issue is at the center of discussions related to the high frequency and greater intensity of devastating natural disasters, establishing a new term: "climate crisis." This book explores the dialogue between the biosphere and the climate system and analyzes the threats to the biosphere from current climate change. It evaluates existing unsolved problems concerning the changes in the biosphere caused by human activities, such as the increase of carbon dioxide, the pollution of air, soil, fresh, and salt water, and deforestation. It focuses on the new techniques of studying the climate system and the methods that lead to the interconnection with the biosphere.

Casino Management in Integrated Resorts

Desmond Lam

Series: Hospitality Essentials Series

Gambling or, perhaps more appropriately, gaming is an activity that is generally accepted by our modern society and often involves the use of money to take risks so as to gain additional value. The activity is sometimes described as playing a game of chance that involves some elements of chance and/or skill. It can take various forms in different cultures and across time. In the absence of prior empirical evidence (i.e., research-based or evidence-based findings), best practice should prevail. Under the best practice principle, a practice that has shown the best possible evidence of success (or effectiveness) should be adopted.

Event Experience and Design

Transformative Approaches

Krzysztof Celuch

Event management and design are integral to human society, deeply embedded in our cultural fabric. As noted by Greg Richards, Lenia Marques, and Karen Mein, "Events do not just happen; they are carefully crafted to weave narratives (content) into places (context) through processes of experience design" (Richards et al., 2014, p. 1). Finally, we need to remember that events could shape our personal journey. We do not know what the magic Grall is to find a million-euro business, discover love, or build a life-long friendship. That is why designing experience is so important.It is always worth meeting.

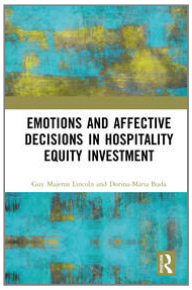
Emotions and Affective Decisions in Hospitality Equity Investment



Guy Majerus Lincoln , Dorina-Maria Buda

This book examines the act of private equity investing in hospitality businesses. This is understood as the provision of funding for businesses from sources external to the business resulting in the entrepreneur / founder relinquishing ownership of a part of the business to one or multiple investors. In this book we have explored the activity of hospitality equity investment and in particular the implication of affect and emotion in the activity. As the entirety of the activity is concerned with making decisions about the investment, we have paid attention to how affect and emotion are located throughout this financial decision making.

The Psychology of Sex

Meg-John Barker The Open University, UK

Series: The Psychology of Everything

What can psychology teach us about sex? How do different bodies and brains respond sexually? How can we prevent people being stigmatised for their sexuality? The Psychology of Sex takes you on a tour through the different ways that psychology helps us understand sex and sexuality. It explores cultural concerns around sexualisation, pornography, and sex addiction, as well as drawing on research from sexual communities and the applied area of sex therapy. This new edition features material on evolving sexual identities, as well as sexuality and technology and how digital platforms shape sexual behaviours.

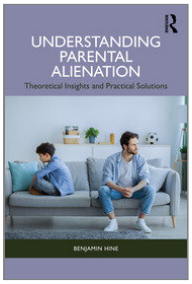
Understanding Parental Alienation

Theoretical Insights and Practical Strategies



Benjamin Hine University Of West London

Understanding Parental Alienation offers a clear, accessible starting point for anyone trying to make sense of parental alienation (PA): what it is, how it develops, and why it causes such profound harm. Opening with a grounded, user-friendly explanation of the phenomenon, the book demystifies PA without minimising its seriousness, setting the stage for a deeper exploration of its emotional, psychological, and legal dimensions. Accessible yet academically robust, Understanding Parental Alienation is a multi-purpose guide for mental-health professionals, legal practitioners, family-court personnel, and families navigating post-separation conflict.

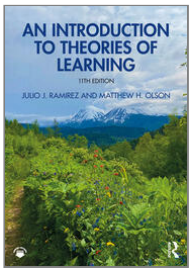
An Introduction to Theories of Learning



Julio J. Ramirez , Matthew H. Olson Hamline University, USA

Now celebrating its 50th anniversary, An Introduction to Theories of Learning has provided a uniquely sweeping review of the major learning theories from the 20th century that profoundly influenced the field of psychology. The four main goals of this text are to define learning, to show how the learning process is studied, to place learning theory in a historical perspective, and to present essential features of the major theories of learning with implications for educational practices. In this new edition, the authors have retained the best features of earlier additions while expanding and enhancing its application to modern scholarship.

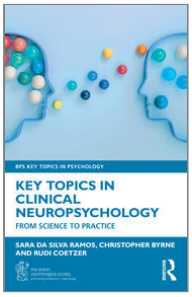
Key Topics in Clinical Neuropsychology

From Science to Practice



Sara Da Silva Ramos Brainkind, UK and University of Surrey, UK, Christopher Byrne University of Liverpool, UK and the NHS (North Wales Brain Injury Service), UK, Rudi Coetzer Bangor University, UK

Series: BPS Key Topics in Psychology

This text provides a concise and engaging introduction to the science and practice of clinical neuropsychology. It takes readers on a journey beginning with the history of discipline, through exploring some of the classic case studies in neuropsychology which have brought valuable insights into understanding how the brain works, even before we could see it in action. Early chapters look at the beginnings of the field and the impact that the emergence of neuroimaging and the use of different research methodologies have had on the development on the discipline.

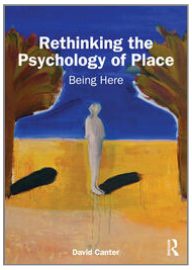
Rethinking the Psychology of Place

Being Here



David Canter

Rethinking the Psychology of Place presents a new approach to Professor David Canter's 1977 Psychology of Place. Providing a unified Theory of Place relevant to human transactions with buildings, cities and nature, the book weaves together psychological, architectural and social perspectives to demonstrate that place is a dynamic phenomenon emerging from embodied experience, memory and social interactions. Central to this are 'place rules' and 'environmental roles' that mediate how individuals relate to and behave within locations, challenging deterministic notions that design directly causes place experiences.

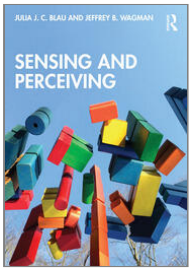
Sensing and Perceiving



Julia J. C. Blau , Jeffrey B. Wagman

Sensing and Perceiving offers a comprehensive and highly accessible overview addressing two centuries-old questions: how are animals aware of their surrounding world, and how does this awareness enable everyday behaviors? Authors Julia J. C. Blau and Jeffrey B. Wagman provide a thorough description of the biological systems involved in these processes and examine both traditional and ecological approaches to understanding how these processes occur. The book features a conversational and humorous writing style with everyday examples that introduce novice readers to sensing and perceiving processes.

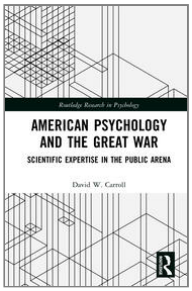
American Psychology and the Great War

Scientific Expertise in the Public Arena



David W. Carroll Professor Emeritus at the University of Wisconsin-Superior, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Psychology

American Psychology and the Great War provides the first comprehensive examination of the research of psychologists during the Great War in early twentieth century America, spanning efforts that produced a mix of successes, controversies, and unforeseen consequences. By contextualizing wartime efforts within the broader development of applied psychology in the pre-war years, the book illuminates how psychological work with the military accelerated the transformation of the discipline from an academic curiosity into a profession with real-world applications.

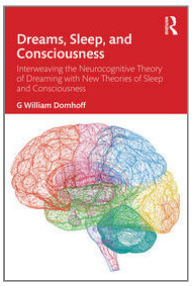
Dreams, Sleep, and Consciousness

Interweaving the Neurocognitive Theory of Dreaming with New Theories of Sleep and Consciousness



G William Domhoff

Dreams, Sleep, and Consciousness presents the first scientifically based explanation of how dreams, sleep, and consciousness interconnect since the beginning of the neuroimaging era. This groundbreaking book introduces a fully developed neurocognitive theory of dreaming that encompasses the development of dreaming in children and provides detailed quantitative findings demonstrating how dreams reveal personal concerns.The book features two innovative theoretical frameworks. The new "adaptive inactivity theory of sleep" explains why the sleeping brain shows varying activation levels and how this enables dreaming.

Dimensional Diagnosis

Practical and Conceptual Issues in the Integration of Personality and Psychopathology

Edited by Christopher J. Hopwood University of California, United States, Carla Sharp University of Houston, United States

Despite a general consensus that the mental health field is shifting toward dimensional diagnosis, key questions remain about exactly how this transition should occur. This book brings together leading scholars to discuss how personality is related to psychopathology, how this changes our understanding of mental disorders, how dimensional models can be applied clinically, and implications for training and research. The volume is uniquely structured around 15 core challenges identified by the editors. Within each chapter, two author teams weigh in with different perspectives on the questions posed, offering a window into critical debates at the cutting edge of clinical science and practice.

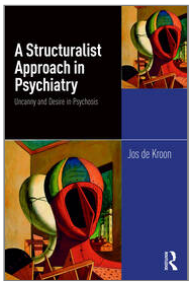
A Structuralist Approach in Psychiatry

Uncanny and Desire in Psychosis



Jos de Kroon Reinier van Arkel Institution of Mental Health, the Netherlands

A Structuralist Approach in Psychiatry presents an alternative view of the psychiatric patient and highlights a connection with continental post-structuralist thinking to provide a new approach to psychiatry. After outlining the problems facing psychiatry, and the historical development of the field, this book outlines a structuralist model of the subject that does greater justice to the complexity involved while avoiding physicalist reductionism. This book will be of interest to mental healthcare professionals, including psychiatric nurses, psychiatrists, psychologists, and physician assistants, and those studying to enter these professions.

Gestalt Therapy in Times of War

New Clinical Tools and Political Consciousness

Edited by Margherita Spagnuolo Lobb , Pietro Andrea Cavaleri , Mattia Romano , Giacomo Bisonti

Series: Gestalt Therapy Book Series

This volume does not deny the terrible emotions of war, but seeks to move through them, finding new clinical tools that psychotherapists can use to help patients in their turmoil, and support therapists in their caregiving role. This book will be invaluable to gestalt psychotherapists, psychotherapy trainers, and all therapists who are looking for new tools for working with patients from multicultural and critical contexts, especially in relation to polarized social stances, wars and other traumatizing conflicts.

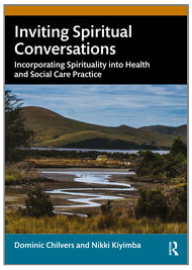
Inviting Spiritual Conversations

Incorporating Spirituality into Health and Social Care Practice



Dominic Chilvers , Nikki Kiyimba

This book takes a fresh look at spirituality within health and social care practice. It begins by suggesting that spirituality is a capacity selected during evolution that has become integral to human flourishing. Practitioners are provided with an innovative framework for considering spirituality for themselves and their clients. Educators will discover a guided curriculum for teaching this important topic and students will learn essential knowledge and skills for their future work. This is an essential guide to navigating this challenging terrain and working respectfully with the spiritual aspect of a client's identity.

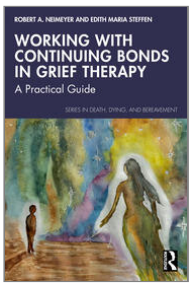
Working with Continuing Bonds in Grief Therapy

A Practical Guide



Robert A. Neimeyer Portland Institute for Loss and Transition, Oregon, USA, Edith Maria Steffen University of Roehampton, London, UK

Series: Series in Death, Dying, and Bereavement

Grief counseling and therapy have been revolutionized by the recognition that adaptive grieving commonly involves retaining bonds with the deceased rather than relinquishing them, but guidelines for how to integrate this shift into professional practice have been scarce. With astute attention to clinical and cultural contexts, specific instructions for a great range of approaches, numerous practice vignettes, and transcripts of actual sessions, Working with Continuing Bonds in Grief Therapy is required reading for all professionals who support the bereaved in living through loss while reaffirming or realigning bonds with their loved ones.

Psychoanalytic Perspectives on the Israel-Gaza Conflict

Edited by Paul Cundy

This book creates a vital space for psychoanalytic thought on the Israel-Palestine conflict, one of the most polarizing and emotionally charged geopolitical struggles of our time. In the wake of the horrific events of October 7, 2023, and the subsequent war in Gaza, marked by death, famine, and destruction, the global community has been deeply divided. Refusing the collusion of silence in the face of alleged war crimes and genocide, this book offers a thoughtful exploration of the psychological mechanisms underlying the conflict and our responses to it.

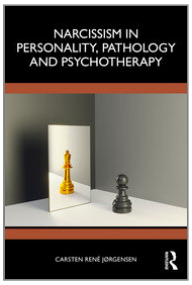
Narcissism in Personality, Pathology and Psychotherapy



Carsten René Jørgensen

Modern Western culture and modern human beings are often described as narcissistic (Lasch, 1979). Among other manifestations, this toxic narcissism is expressed in a lack of recognition of our own basic vulnerability, aggressive and grandiose defences against (recognizing) this vulnerability, greed, lack of mutual empathy, tendency to take offence and to react with narcissistic rage to perceived narcissistic injuries rather than engage in curious exploration of what is happening inside us and between us when crises and social conflicts escalate.

Psychoanalysis and Euripides' Suppliant Women

A Tragic Reading of Politics

Sotiris Manolopoulos

This book explores how ancient tragedy illuminates contemporary political crises through a psychoanalytic lens. Through a "tragic" reading of Euripides' play, The Suppliant Women, it demonstrates how fractured societies attempt to "heal" themselves through populism, authoritarianism, cruelty, and cultures of deception. This interdisciplinary study will be of interest to psychoanalysts in practice and in training, as well as academics and scholars of psychoanalytic studies, politics, and classical studies, and anyone seeking to understand how ancient wisdom addresses modern democratic challenges and the pathological mental functioning manifest in contemporary politics.

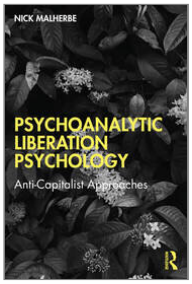
Psychoanalytic Liberation Psychology

Anti-Capitalist Approaches



Nick Malherbe Institute for Social and Health Sciences, University of South Africa

Psychoanalytic Liberation Psychology challenges conventional psychological paradigms by developing a radical approach where psychoanalysis meets liberation psychology. Drawing from his psycho-political work in South Africa, Nick Malherbe articulates how this approach functions as a powerful counterforce to capitalism's psychological grip on society and individuals. Rather than presenting a definitive framework, this book offers theoretical insights alongside concrete case reflections that illuminate both the generative potential and inherent challenges of this work.

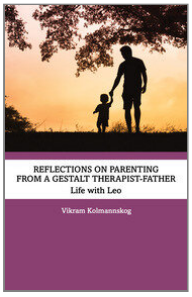
Reflections on Parenting from a Gestalt Therapist-Father

Life with Leo



Vikram Kolmannskog Norwegian Gestalt Institute, Norway

This book explores the early father-child experience from an intimate, first-person perspective, through the lens of a gestalt therapist and his family. Describing and reflecting upon several of his own experiences, author Vikram Kolmannskog shares how the knowledge gained from gestalt therapy influences his parenting, and how his parenting experiences enrich his practice and understanding of gestalt therapy. Spanning a five-year time period from 2020 to 2025, which includes the first three years of his son Leo's life, the book covers several different aspects of parenting: queer, emotional, conflicting, playful, and ecological.

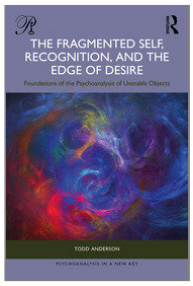
The Fragmented Self, Recognition, and the Edge of Desire

Foundations of the Psychoanalysis of Unstable Objects



Todd Anderson

Series: Psychoanalysis in a New Key

This book explores the most unstable facets of psychic life and how these can be understood and engaged in the psychoanalytic consulting room. With a distinctive perspective on subjectivity, this book offers an aesthetic and ethical framework for psychoanalysis—one that sustains engagement with paradox, dissociation, and symbolic survival over premature resolution. It is essential reading for psychoanalysts, psychotherapists, and scholars of psychoanalytic thought.

Unknowing as Truth

Epistemic Inversions and the Recursive Psyche

Todd Anderson

Series: Psychoanalysis in a New Key

Unknowing as Truth reframes psychoanalysis as a discipline of recursive hospitality through the lens of epistemic inversion—treating unknowing not as deficit but as the living medium of analytic truth. With a rich blend of clinical vignettes, teaching pathways, study prompts, and a lexicon for supervision, this book offers a teachable, clinically resonant architecture for psychoanalysts.

Collected Psychoanalytic Works of Sabina Spielrein, Volume 1

Early Works from Zürich, Vienna and Berlin

Michael Gerard Plastow , Christiane Weller

This is the first of two volumes of totally new English translations of all the known published psychoanalytic works of Sabina Spielrein, an important early proponent of psychoanalysis—and in particular of child psychoanalysis—who anticipated much of its later development. This collection brings together all of Spielrein's published writing in a consistent and clear style for an English-speaking audience. Essential for the serious study of Spielrein's own theoretical elaboration, this book is for psychoanalysts, psychoanalytic psychotherapists, and scholars in related fields, as well as those interested in the writings of influential women.

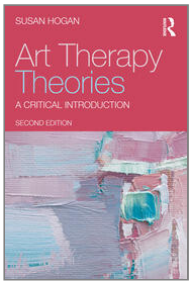
Art Therapy Theories

A Critical Introduction



Susan Hogan University of Derby, UK

Art therapists work with a range of distinct philosophical and theoretical underpinnings, but prior to the first edition there had been no single book to offer an overview of these theories. Each chapter provides a non-judgemental, yet analytical, synopsis of each approach. Art Therapy Theories is aimed at trainee art therapists who need to demonstrate that they have a grasp of theory, as well as a sense of how the theory can translate into practice. It will also appeal to seasoned therapists, counsellors and to a wide range of professionals in the mental health field.

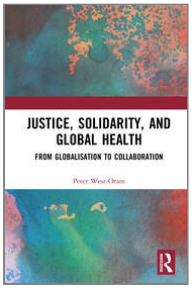
Justice, Solidarity, and Global Health

From Globalisation to Collaboration



Peter West-Oram

Articulating a call for justice in the context of global health, this fascinating book responds to the uncertainties, inequalities and conflicts highlighted through the COVID-19 pandemic by arguing that everyone, no matter where they live, is entitled to at least a basic level of healthcare. Erudite and important, this is a book that will interest students and scholars across disciplines, from Public Health to Philosophy to Bioethics to International Relations.

Writing COVID-19 Lives

Edited by Irene Gammel , Jason Wang Ryerson University, Canada

Series: The COVID-19 Pandemic Series

Writing COVID-19 Lives examines how people turned to life writing—often in fragile, makeshift forms—to make sense of the pandemic. Across poetry, memoir, autofiction, photography, sketchbooks, diaries, postcards, and digital storytelling, the collection traces a pandemic aesthetic marked by brevity, fracture, and pause: an autobiographical "I" that is unsettled, doubled, or dispersed. As Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie writes in Notes on Grief, "you learn how much grief is about language, the failure of language and the grasping for language." That grasping—the search for a voice that could still speak—threads through these essays.

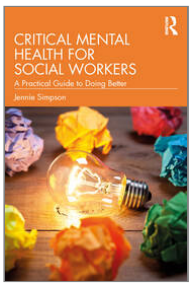
Critical Mental Health for Social Workers

A Practical Guide to Doing Better



Jennie Simpson

This book provides an alternative viewpoint on mental health, an issue that touches so many of the families and individuals we work with. Whether that be a parent or school seeking an 'ADHD' diagnosis for a child, a teenager struggling with self-harm or a parent with 'bipolar', it is a topic of ever-increasing relevance. Social workers should challenge oppression, empower people, and uphold their human rights and this book helps to prevent the perpetuation of harm to the very people we wish to support.

Radical Hope in Social Work

Edited by Carole Zufferey University of South Australia, Australia, Chris Horsell

Series: Routledge Advances in Social Work

This book broadens the concept of hope used in social work research, education, policy and practice, by theorising radical hopes for social work in Part 1, as well as incorporating diverse lived experience perspectives on radical hopes for change in Part 2. We invite the readers of this book to envision their own radical hopes for change and activism, that may differ to the hopes and advocacy presented in this book but can nonetheless, contribute to a more supportive and socially just society for everyone.

The Routledge International Handbook of Radical Ethical Social Work

Edited by Jeanette Schmid , Marina Morgenshtern

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

We begin this volume by situating ourselves in relation to the lands on which we live and work. Jeanette is a settler and guest on the unceded territories of the Snuneymuxw people on Vancouver Island, Canada. Radical, ethical social work is a kaleidoscope of creating new interpretations and indeed new spaces by shifting existing arrangements to identify new conversations, new relationships and thus new possibilities.

Therapeutic Potential of Marine Biotoxins

From Poison to Pharmacy

Edited by Santhanam Ramesh , Ramasamy Santhanam , Subbiah Balasundari

Explores the latest on the therapeutic potential of marine biotoxins, emphasizing the present gaps in the existing knowledge on marine biotoxins. It covers the types and chemistry of marine biotoxins; marine phyla yielding biotoxins; the impact of marine biotoxins on the environment, on fisheries, and on human health; and marine phycotoxins, invertebrate toxins, and fish toxins and their therapeutic potential as pharmacological agents for several disorders, including cancer, diabetes, hypertension, dyslipidemia, and obesity. It provides the names of marine taxonomic groups and further explores the therapeutic potential of certain groups, including marine algae, and more.

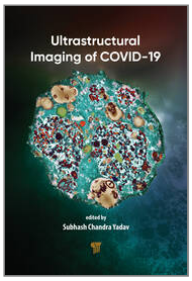
Ultrastructural Imaging of COVID-19



Subhash Chandra Yadav

This book provides a core understanding of the COVID-19 disease through ultrastructural imaging, using light microscopy, immunofluorescence, and scanning and transmission electron microscopy of samples from COVID-19 patients at different stages of the disease. It provides direct evidence of the impact of the SARS-CoV-2 virus on the cellular level in different age groups, disease stages, and comorbidities. The book explores advanced imaging techniques to enhance understanding of ultrastructural changes and provides a comprehensive overview of SARS-CoV-2-induced ultrastructural alterations in various respiratory tract cells.

Rare and Risky Food Allergens

Clinical Relevance, Cross-reactivity and Management

Edited by Roua Lajnaf , Sawsan Feki

Depending on national regulations, rare food allergens are not regarded as major food allergens. Consequently, there is a notable lack of information devoted to rare allergens, despite the significant health risks they pose to sensitized individuals, including potentially fatal anaphylactic reactions. Rare and Risky Food Allergens: Clinical Relevance, Cross-Reactivity and Management addresses that gap by providing an authoritative overview of uncommon food allergens such as fruits, legumes, rice, mammalian milk and meat, honey, wheat beer, chocolate, coffee, edible insects, algae, spices, green tea, and selected food additives.

Biomedical Nanomagnetics

Volume 1

Edited by Kannan M. Krishnan

This landmark two-volume set brings together the scientific contributions of Prof. Kannan M. Krishnan, covering over four decades of dedicated research in nanomagnetism, materials science, and biomedical engineering. Volume 1, Biomedical Nanomagnetics, chronicles the design, synthesis, and application of functionalized magnetic nanoparticles for imaging, diagnostics, and therapy. Bridging nanoscience and medicine, this volume introduces a comprehensive "materials-to-medicine" framework with real-world clinical impact—covering magnetic particle imaging, magnetic hyperthermia, and targeted drug delivery.

Burn-Induced Neurodegeneration

Therapies for Neuromotor Complications

Edited by Amany Gomaa Atiaa , Shehab M. Abd E-Kader

Series: Neuroscience of Neurodegenerative Disorders

Burn-induced systemic inflammation, neuroinflammatory cascades, and ICU-related neurological syndromes collectively form a clinical continuum that mimics or contributes to neurodegeneration. Framed within this paradigm, this book offers an evidence-based approach to neuromotor rehabilitation that addresses both central and peripheral nervous system complications. It bridges acute trauma with chronic neurofunctional loss, positioning physical therapy as a pivotal intervention to modulate degeneration, support neuroplasticity, and enhance recovery.

Neglected Viruses

Edited by Alaa Aljabali

While the world focuses on the pandemics of the day, a group of dangerous viruses remains dangerously underexplored. These pathogens, capable of causing severe neurological damage, hemorrhagic fevers, and devastating outbreaks, represent a critical gap in our scientific and public health defenses.This volume, drawing on the expertise of top researchers, emerges as a vital response to this neglect. It consolidates the latest research into a single, coherent resource, offering a comprehensive analysis of these viruses from their molecular structures and epidemiological patterns to their clinical management and the societal factors that allow them to persist.

Solid-State Nanomagnetics

Edited by Kannan M. Krishnan

Volume 2, Solid-State Nanomagnetism, explores the physics of nanoscale magnetic materials, including thin films, patterned heterostructures, and spin-dependent phenomena. With detailed studies on exchange bias, domain wall dynamics, and artificial spin systems, this volume lays the foundation for next-generation spintronic devices and magnetic logic. Together, these volumes reflect a unified research philosophy: rigorous in fundamentals, interdisciplinary in scope, and translational in ambition. From quantum phenomena to clinical innovation, this collection serves as both a scientific archive and an inspirational guideline for the future of magnetism, materials, and medicine.

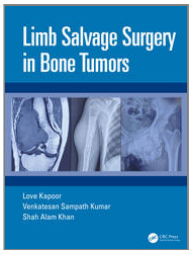
Limb Salvage Surgery in Bone Tumors



Love Kapoor , Venkatesan Sampath Kumar , Shah Alam Khan

This book brings together a wide spectrum of surgical techniques for tumor excision and limb reconstruction, with special emphasis on practical biological options often used in developing countries. A unique section on pelvic tumors explores reconstruction strategies beyond megaprostheses. Unlike most books on musculoskeletal neoplasms that focus primarily on tumor pathology and outcomes, this volume emphasizes reconstruction techniques and presents the wide range of available options. It bridges a critical gap in surgical oncology literature, making it a valuable reference that deserves a place on every oncologist's shelf.

An Introduction to Veterinary Humanities

Edited by Alison Skipper , Ruth Serlin , Carol Gray
Hartpury Univ.

This book offers new ways to think about these issues through the emerging interdisciplinary field of veterinary humanities. It breaks new ground in bringing together insights from multiple academic perspectives – history, art, ethics, social sciences and many more – to think about veterinary topics in a new way through contributions from over forty authors. Addressing topics from across the veterinary sector, their writing ranges from deeply personal reflections to academic essays. This anthology will be particularly relevant to those training or working in the veterinary sector, whatever the role or level of experience.

Women, Elderly, Children, and Ill Patients

Edited by Sunita Mishra , G Bhanuprakash Reddy , Tikam Chand Dakal

Clinical Nutrition in Special Populations: Women, Elderly, Children, and Ill Patients is a comprehensive book that addresses the unique nutritional requirements across critical life stages and health conditions. Drawing on scientific evidence, the book provides tailored dietary recommendations for children, women at different physiological stages, individuals managing specific diseases, and the elderly. By focusing on both prevention and management, it equips readers with practical tools to promote optimal health and well-being.

Nano-Carbons for Nanobiosensing and Bioremediation in Smart Targeted Cancer Treatment

Loutfy H. Madkour Tanta University, Egypt

Smart-drug delivery aims to localize treatment to tumors to reduce cytotoxicity and enhance the therapeutic index by using multifunctional targeting strategies. This book focuses the applications of Nanostructured carbon materials (NCMs) in all fields of pharmacy and medicine from therapeutics to analysis and diagnosis. It also examines the pharmacokinetics, metabolism and toxicity of different forms of CNTs and discusses the perspectives, the advantages and the obstacles of this promising bio-nanotechnology in the future.

Soil and Human Health

Food as Medicine

Edited by Rattan Lal , Marium Husain

Series: Advances in Soil Science

The intersection of soil health and human vitality is a critical yet overlooked aspect of global wellbeing. Soil and Human Health: Food as Medicine examines the soil-human health nexus, offering a comprehensive synthesis of research and insights that highlight the connections between soil processes, food systems, and human health.

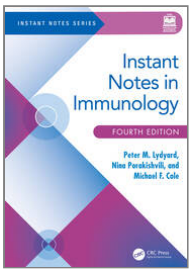
4TH EDITION

Instant Notes in Immunology



Peter M Lydyard Royal Free & Univ. College Medical School, UK, Nina Porakishvili , Michael F Cole

Series: Instant Notes

Instant Notes in Immunology, Fourth Edition, is the perfect text for science undergraduates and medical students looking for a concise introduction to the subject, or a study guide to use before examinations. Thoroughly updated in all areas, especially in mucosal immunity, regulation of the immune response and cancer immunotherapy, each topic begins with a summary of essential facts, an ideal revision checklist followed by a description of the subject that focuses on core information, with clear, simple diagrams easy for students to understand and recall in essays and exams.

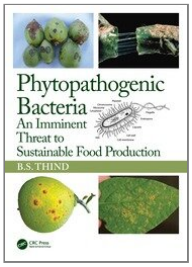
Phytopathogenic Bacteria

An Imminent Threat to Sustainable Food Production



B. S. Thind Punjab Agricultural University, Ludhiana, India

The field of Plant Bacteriology/Phytobacteriology is rapidly advancing and changing due to recent advances in genomics and molecular plant bacteriology as well as global spread of bacterial plant diseases and emergence of new bacterial plant pathogens. So, there is a need to integrate understanding of bacterial taxonomy, genomics and basic plant bacteriology that reflects state of the art knowledge about plant-disease mechanisms. In the present book, first eight chapters contain general information about bacteria, classification of plant pathogenic bacteria and molecular mechanisms of virulence and pathogenesis of phytopathogenic bacteria.

Alkaloids From Medicinal Plants and Their Transformative Applications

Edited by Rakesh Kumar Bachheti Addis Ababa Science and Technology University, Ethiopia, Archana Bachheti Graphic Era University, India, Azamal Husen Wolaita Sodo University, Ethiopia

Series: Exploring Medicinal Plants

Alkaloids from medicinal plants and their transformative applications comprehensively explores alkaloids derived from medicinal plants, presenting information on their chemical properties, extraction techniques, and transformative applications in healthcare. It discusses how alkaloids from medicinal plants are used in traditional and modern systems of medicine, and explores potentials in health improvement. It also discusses how these substances function within the body and what studies have been conducted to demonstrate their efficacy.

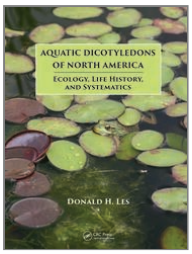
Aquatic Dicotyledons of North America

Ecology, Life History, and Systematics



Donald H. Les University of Connecticut, Storrs, USA

This book brings together a wealth of information on the natural history, ecology, and systematics of North American aquatic flowering plants. Unlike most books on aquatic plants that have a taxonomic focus and are intended primarily for identification, this book provides a comprehensive overview of the biology of major aquatic species by compiling information from numerous sources that lie scattered among the primary literature, herbarium databases, and other reference sources. The book covers over 1000 species in more than 300 genera.

Barcoding Life

For Exploring and Protecting Biodiversity

Edited by Siddra Ijaz Centre of Agricultural Biochemistry and Biotechnology, Pakistan, Imran Ul Haq University of Agriculture Faisalabad, Pakistan, Hayssam Mohamed Ali

Barcoding Life: For Exploring and Protecting Biodiversity gives a detailed exploration of DNA barcoding across all domains of life. Researchers will find that DNA barcoding facilitates rapid species identification, streamlining biodiversity studies and accelerating the discovery of new species. Taxonomists will gain valuable insights into species relationships, enabling more accurate classifications and targeted investigations. Policymakers will learn how DNA barcoding informs conservation priorities, guiding effective strategies and optimizing resource allocation.

Bioresources for Managing and Treating Dementia

Prospects and Challenges

Edited by Abraham Olufemi Asuku , Ayodeji Johnson Ajibare , Olugbemi Tope Olaniyan

Series: Neuroscience of Neurodegenerative Disorders

Globally, dementia is a health challenge with remarkable socio-economic implications. In spite of advances in conventional treatment, there is an urgent need for more accessible, effective, and safer therapeutic options. Bioresources offer a promising avenue for dementia treatment and management.This book explores the potential of bioresources in dementia management, focusing on their mechanisms of action and key prospects and addressing the critical obstacles that must be navigated to harness their full therapeutic potentials.

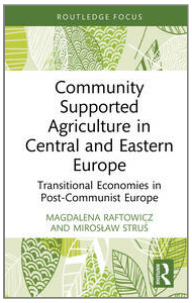
Community Supported Agriculture in Central and Eastern Europe

Transitional Economies in Post-Communist Europe



Magdalena Raftowicz , Mirosław Struś

Series: Earthscan Food and Agriculture

This book analyses Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) in Central and Eastern Europe, providing a meaningful contribution to the broader discourse on sustainable agriculture and rural development in post-communist states. By combining conceptual analysis with practical policy relevance, this book will be of interest to students and scholars of food and agricultural, rural development and sociology and environmental economics. It also provides actionable insights for policymakers engaged in designing resilient local food systems and promoting rural innovation.

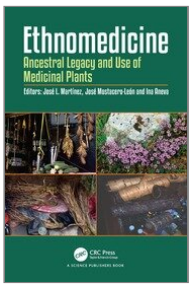
Ethnomedicine

Ancestral Legacy and Use of Medicinal Plants



José L. Martínez Universidad de Santiago de Chile, Chile, José Mostacero-León Universidad Nacional de Trujillo, Peru, Ina Aneva Bulgarian Academy of Sciences

Ethnomedicine: Ancestral Legacy and Use of Medicinal Plants is a book that explores the deep connection between humanity and medicinal plants, blending ancestral wisdom with modern scientific perspectives. Written by experts from four continents, it presents diverse healing traditions from Latin America, the Balkans, Africa, Asia, and the Middle East. Through case studies and cultural narratives, the book examines sacred rituals, culinary-medicinal practices, and the therapeutic potential of plants. It emphasizes the importance of preserving traditional knowledge, promoting biodiversity conservation, and fostering intercultural understanding.

Evolution of the Monitor Lizards

Systematics, Morphology, and Biogeography of the Varanids

Robert Sprackland

This book is a comprehensive review of the entire lineage of monitor lizards, living and extinct. It fills a gap in our understanding of the relationships and role of environmental and ecological diversity and their effects on evolution and ecology. These lizards, so often described as "morphologically uniform" differing mainly in size, are incredibly diverse. This variation is comprised of numerous small features adding up to 80-plus distinctly different species. Monitors are shown to be far from a homogeneous group, a lineage in which subtle variations have led to profoundly divergent organisms.

Food and American TV

Constructing Identity in Bite-Sized Narratives

Edited by Urszula Niewiadomska-Flis , Carrie Helms Tippen

Series: Routledge Food Studies

This interdisciplinary volume investigates American serial television, exploring how food serves as compelling lens to examine cultural narratives, societal dynamics, and the artistry of storytelling. The chapters examine narrative-driven series such as The Brady Bunch, The Bear, Star Trek, Ted Lasso, Only Murders in the Building, Lessons in Chemistry, and others, emphasizing the role of food and drink in shaping characters, advancing plots, establishing settings, and driving conflicts to resolution. The book will be of great interest to students and scholars of food studies, media studies, cultural studies and literary studies.

Fruit Flies of Economic Importance XI

Edited by Diana Pérez-Staples , Bernard Dominiak , Maria Teresa Vera , Abdeljelil Bakri

This book contains contributions from many scientists to improve the ability of all nations to manage tephritids and provide good quality food. This book starts with a reflection of the contribution of Prof. Antigone Zacharopoulou, followed by three chapters expanding our knowledge and information of the biology, ecology and physiology of tephritid flies. The following three chapters explore opportunities for international trade. Aspects of the Sterile Insect Technique (SIT) and natural enemies are explained in the next five chapters. Finally, the last seven chapters describe a diverse range of action programs and Integrated Pest Management (IPM).

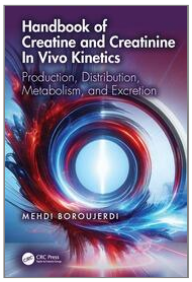
Handbook of Creatine and Creatinine In Vivo Kinetics

Production, Distribution, Metabolism, and Excretion



Mehdi Boroujerdi College of Health Sciences - School of Pharmacy, University of Massachusetts Lowell, USA

The conceptual basis to summarize and predict the in vivo behavior and the related mathematical descriptions and models of creatine and creatinine are currently based on the principles and the methodologies of pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics. Most in vivo kinetic analyses and models of creatine and creatinine are assumed linear. The presence of nonlinear in vivo kinetics for creatine are assessed by the author due to the affinity and preferential uptake of the molecule in the muscle. This book is an inquiry into the application of these principles and methodologies for the endogenous compounds creatine and creatinine, and provides new pathways for studies and bench research.

Nourishing Scotland

Pete Ritchie

Series: Earthscan Food and Agriculture

This book delves into Scotland's evolving food system, uncovering the challenges of change, tracing food policy progress since devolution in 1999, and envisioning bold strategies for the next twenty-five years. It is grounded in a right-to-food perspective, and describes both the necessity of, and the opportunity for, a repurposing of the food system from a focus on commodity production and trade to a focus on nutrition equity and environmental restoration. This book will be of great interest to students, scholars and policymakers interested in food and agricultural policy, as well as those interested in sustainable food systems, public health, and social policy more widely.

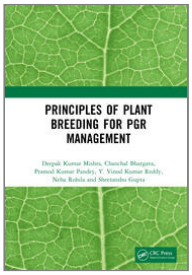
Principles of Plant Breeding for PGR Management



Deepak Kumar Mishra , Chanchal Bhargava , Pramod Kumar Pandey , Y. Vinod Kumar Reddy , Neha Rohila , Sheetanshu Gupta

Aiming to bridge the gap between traditional plant breeding principles and modern advancements, this book focuses on the management of plant genetic resources (PGR) to cover the classical and contemporary techniques to meet the growing challenges of global food security, climate change, and agricultural sustainability. The subject matter in this book is directed at researchers, students, and professionals, and emphasizes the importance of conserving and utilizing genetic diversity. This title has been co-published with Elite Publishing House. Taylor & Francis does not sell or distribute the print edition in India.

Pseudocereals

Nutritional, Technological, and Industrial Perspectives

Edited by Amir Gull , Gulzar Ahmad Nayik Govt. Deg Col Shopian, Jahangir Ahmad Rather , F.A. Masoodi , Charles Brennan

As the global demand for sustainable and nutrient-rich crops grows, pseudocereals are emerging as a valuable alternative to traditional cereals. This book brings together recent scientific advances and practical insights on the chemistry, nutritional quality, processing technologies, and industrial applications of pseudocereals such as quinoa, amaranthus, buckwheat, and chia. The book addresses consumer acceptance, market strategies, and safety considerations, offering a balanced perspective that connects traditional knowledge with modern food science.

Recent Advances in Sustainable Aquaculture and Fisheries

Edited by Shabir Ahmad Dar , Imtiyaz Qayoom , Gohar Bilal Wani , Adnan Abubakr , Seemab Zehra

Explores latest developments and innovations aquaculture and fisheries management, focusing on sustainable practices, technological advancements, and ecological considerations that shape the future of aquatic resource management. The book discusses recirculating aquaculture systems, integrated multitrophic aquaculture, and biofloc technology. Topics include stock assessment methods, ecosystem-based management,, marine protected areas in conservation efforts, advancements in aquafeed formulations, sustainable feed practices, fish disease prevention and management in aquaculture systems, etc.

Soybean

Soybean, 2-volume set

Edited by R. Ambika Rajendran , Ayyagari Ramlal , Sanjay Kumar Lal , Chigeza Godfree

Provides comprehensive coverage of many aspects of soybean, its utilities, vulnerabilities, and most recent discoveries. Volume 1 emphasizes aspects of taxonomy, domestication of soybean, and its evolution. It covers the history, taxonomy, distribution, and economic importance of soybeans. Volume 2 looks at the current trends, genomic information, conventional breeding techniques along with their challenges, and the need for modern methods in the cultivation of soybeans. It explores the genetics, genomics, and proteomics of soybeans, discussing advances and improvements in soybeans, soybean diseases, the use of soybeans in medicine, and other future uses of soybeans.

Soybeans

VOL 1: History, Breeding, and Product Profile

Edited by R. Ambika Rajendran , Ayyagari Ramlal , Sanjay Kumar Lal , Godfree Chigeza

Provides comprehensive coverage of many aspects of soybean, its utilities, vulnerabilities, and most recent discoveries. It emphasizes aspects of taxonomy, domestication of soybean, and its evolution. Comprised of four sections, it covers the history, taxonomy, distribution, and economic importance of soybeans. It also discusses soybean breeding, seed systems, product development as well as product profiles of soybean.

Stimuli-Responsive Biomaterials for Inflammatory Diseases

Advances in Research and Clinical Applications

Edited by Mohammed Gulzar Ahmed , Vetriselvan Subramaniyan , Sagnik Nag , Sourav Mohanto

This book reviews the use of stimuli-responsive biomaterials in the diagnosis, treatment, and management of inflammatory diseases. It begins by providing a foundational understanding of inflammatory diseases and presents fundamental principles of stimuli-responsive biomaterials. This book provides insights into the characteristics of ideal biomaterials and the chemical principles that enable stimuli-responsive drug delivery systems to function effectively. A detailed classification of these advanced materials is presented based on their responsive triggers, such as pH, temperature, light, and biological signals.

Tailoring the Tomato Genome for NextGen Agriculture

Edited by Dilip R. Panthee , Chittaranjan Kole

Series: Nextgen Agriculture

Tailoring the Tomato Genome for NextGen Agriculture gives a comprehensive view of the modern revolution in tomato breeding—bridging classical genetics with modern molecular and data-driven innovations. Drawing on global germplasm resources from institutions such as the Tomato Genetics Resource Center (UC Davis) and USDA-GRIN, the book highlights how next-generation technologies are reshaping the improvement of one of the world's most important crops.

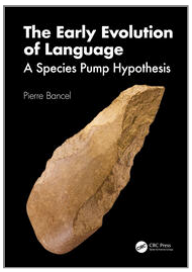
The Early Evolution of Language

A Species Pump Hypothesis



Pierre Bancel

The huge gap between human articulate language and all the communication systems of other living beings has prevented a satisfactory answer to this question up until today. Here, the problem is subdivided into a series of necessarily successive steps. From the climatic oscillations which pumped humans' ape ancestors out of the African rainforest, to the humming stage which still punctuates our conversations today, to the encounter of baby Celeste and his grandpa with a singing cuckoo hiding in the woods, to the emergence and inheritance of kinship terms, then personal pronouns, you are invited to follow this pathfinding quest over 10 million years.

The Melon Genome

Designing for NextGen Agriculture

Edited by Rakesh Kumar , Chittaranjan Kole

Series: Depiction and Designing of Plant Genomes

Melon is a major cucurbit crop cultivated on 1.09 million hectares, producing 29.5 million tons. It is grown on nearly every continent, highlighting its significant economic value. Both public and private sectors operate dedicated melon breeding programs focused on crop improvement. This book serves as an essential resource for breeders, geneticists, students, and industry professionals, providing the most up-to-date information to guide melon crop enhancement. Additionally, it also aims to unify the objectives of public and private researchers.

The Metagenomics Revolution

Unlocking the Potential Microbial Communities in Diagnostics and Beyond

Edited by Vivek Kumar , Amit Chaudhary

The Metagenomics Revolution serves as a comprehensive resource covering the principles, methodologies, and cutting-edge advancements in metagenomics. It bridges the gap between theoretical understanding and practical applications, making it an essential guide for researchers, clinicians, engineers, and industry professionals. The primary aim is to equip readers with a thorough understanding of metagenomics, from sample collection and sequencing technologies to computational tools and data interpretation. It provides a framework for analyzing microbial datasets, highlighting best practices in bioinformatics pipelines, multi-omics integration, and AI-driven microbial analysis.

Vitamins and Neurodegeneration

Mechanisms and Therapeutic Insights

Edited by Sachchida Nand Rai

This book examines the neurobiological impact of vitamins in the pathophysiology and prevention of neurodegenerative diseases, offering an integrative perspective on nutritional modulation of brain health. It explores the antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, and neurotrophic mechanisms of vitamins, alongside their pharmacokinetics, bioavailability, and blood–brain barrier transport. With a focus on age-associated deficiencies, impaired absorption, and cognitive decline, it highlights mechanistic links between micronutrient status and neuronal integrity.

Millets as Superfood

Biochemistry, Biotechnology, and Applications

Edited by Sadhana Singh U.P. Rajarshi Tandon Open University, Prayagraj, India, Santosh Kumar Upadhyay Panjab University, Chandigarh, India

Millets as Superfood: Biochemistry, Biotechnology, and Applications presents a timely and exhaustive analysis of these ancient grains that are quickly evolving as the foods of the future. Traditionally valued for their adaptability and endurance in harsh climates and minimal-input farming, millets are now being recognized worldwide as nutrient-dense, climate-smart superfoods with tremendous potential to enhance food security and sustainable agriculture. This book delivers a unique blend of traditional knowledge and cutting-edge science. It unravels the biochemical richness of millets—vitamins, minerals, antioxidants, and bioactive compounds.

Introductory Nanoscience

Physical and Chemical Concepts

Masaru Kuno , Sushrut Ghonge

This comprehensive second edition provides a pedagogical introduction to nanoscience with quantitative descriptions and solved examples. It demonstrates how scale-dependent property changes predict nanomaterial behavior. The book explores how optical/electrical properties depend on size, shape, and morphology, plus nanometer-sized object construction. Updated with new examples and an electricity/magnetism chapter covering nanomaterial responses to fields. Features complete equation derivations, end-of-chapter problems, and historical overview for upper-level students.

Carbohydrate Active Enzymes (CAZymes)

Biotechnological Applications for Mitigation of Climate Change

Edited by Anil Kumar Verma

This book provides a comprehensive exploration of CAZymes in addressing the climate crisis where the biotechnological advances in utilizing this diverse enzyme group for climate change mitigation have been examined. An overview of the CAZymes from their sources, structure, diversity, biological significance, and potential for alleviation climate change have been discussed. It further implicates the use of CAZymes in sustainable practices for their application in various sectors from food and agriculture to textile and pharmaceutical industries as well as medicine and combating climate change. This book is aimed at researchers in bioengineering, enzymology, and carbohydrates.

Integrative Approach to Fungal Infections and Bioprospecting for Drug Discovery

Edited by Eti Sharma , Rekha Puria , Karan Kumar

Series: Medicinal Plants and Natural Products for Human Health

Research into plant-based antifungals offers a viable alternative to discover potent, eco-friendly, and sustainable treatments. Natural antifungal compounds offer a promising solution, as they tend to have fewer side effects and reduced risk of resistance development compared to synthetic alternatives.This book delves into the application of metagenomics in identifying and harnessing the microbial communities associated with medicinal plants. By integrating bioprospecting techniques with cutting-edge genomic technologies, this work opens up promising new avenues to provide insights into the potential of natural products for developing novel antifungal therapies.

Drug Delivery

From Fundamentals to the Future

Edited by Dimitrios Lamprou , Matthew P. Wylie

This new text assist students in understanding the important science underpinning the formulation of modern dosage forms and how pharmaceutical and biopharmaceutical formulations are developed. Moreover, it covers the design and development of a wide range of pharmaceutical formulations and problem-solving issues associated with their production. The chapters support undergraduate and graduate students to develop the knowledge required for their studies or prepare for employment in the pharmaceutical industry that is estimated to be worth $1.42 trillion. The book covers topics from basic drug delivery to the future, including machine learning and sustainability approaches.

Handbook For Vigilance in the Chemical and Biohazard Environments

Edited by Apollo Odhiambo Maima

Assessment and management of chemical and biohazard risks requires an understanding of the risks in the laboratory, environment and in the community. This handbook provides a guide on best management practices to help prevent costly oversights and dangers in practice, industrial and scientific settings. It offers tools to actively avoid ill effects by addressing complacency, good laboratory ethic, and proactive strategies to minimize risk. It examines the safety culture of chemicals in a laboratory setting, simultaneously serving as a proactive management exercise and helping to prevent costly oversights and dangers in practice.

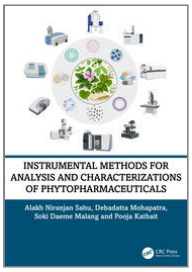
Instrumental Methods for Analysis and Characterizations of Phytopharmaceuticals



Alakh Niranjan Sahu , Debadatta Mohapatra , Soki Daeme Malang , Pooja Kathait

This book, Instrumental Methods for Analysis and Characterizations of Phytopharmaceuticals, provides a comprehensive exploration of phytopharmaceuticals and herbal drugs, bridging traditional knowledge with modern sciences. It discusses both conventional and novel drug delivery systems, offering insights into the rational selection of dosage forms for herbal medicines.

Macular Degeneration

A Progressive Retinal Disorder

Edited by Bhupendra Gopalbhai Prajapati , Rishabha Malviya , Himanshu Paliwal , Sonali Sundram

Provides an in-depth look at the various features of age-related macular degeneration (AMD). It provides a complete overview of this common retinal condition by focusing on the experience of ophthalmology and associated fields. The book explores the complex systems that drive AMD causes and pathology, as well as the most recent advances in diagnostic procedures and treatment plans. It also looks at genetic factors, inflammatory pathways, and the possibilities of artificial intelligence. It digs into AMD complexities, investigating its etiology, pathogenesis, diagnostic techniques, and developing therapy strategies.

Nanotechnology for Nucleic Acid Delivery

Edited by Pankaj Sharma , Saloni Jain , Vinay Jain

Explores the intricate interplay between nanotechnology and genetic medicine, offering insights into the latest advancements, methodologies, and applications. It covers various topics, from the fundamental principles of nanotechnology and nucleic acid chemistry to the design, synthesis, and characterization of various nanocarriers. It discusses the challenges in nucleic acid delivery, ole of polymers in nucleic acid delivery, regulatory aspects related to nanomedicine and gene therapy applications, application of AI and nanotechnology for personalized cancer care by nucleic acid delivery, as well as case studies and success stories of AI-driven approaches for nucleic acid delivery.

Natural Products in Drug Discovery

Benefits, Challenges, and Opportunities

Edited by Meenakshi Thakur

Combines the potential of traditional medicine with modern techniques for using products derived from natural sources such as plants, microbes, and marine sources for drug development. It presents information on the bioactive potential of natural products with properties that are antimicrobial, immunomodulatory, anti-cancerous, anti-inflammatory, hepatoprotective, antiviral, etc. and their usage in drug development. Recent techniques used for the isolation and identification of bioactive ingredients from natural sources have also been covered. The book reviews the latest developments in the field of genomics, transcriptomics, proteomics, and metabolomics for commercial applications.

Redox-Responsive Delivery Systems

Principles, Advances and Applications

Edited by Durgesh Nandini Chauhan Columbia College of Pharmacy, Chhattisgarh, India, Shraddha Manish Gupta UPES Dehradun, India, Kamal Shah GLA University, Uttar Pradesh, India, Kamta Prasad Namdeo Guru Ghasidas Vishwavidyalaya, Chhattisgarh, Nagendra Singh Chauhan Drugs Testing Laboratory Avam Anusandhan Kendra, Raipur

In the era of precision medicine, the demand for smart and targeted drug delivery technologies is greater than ever. Redox-responsive delivery systems represent a cutting-edge approach that exploits the unique oxidative and reductive environments of diseased tissues to achieve site-specific therapeutic action. This comprehensive volume brings together foundational knowledge, recent innovations, and application-specific insights into redox-sensitive systems used for drug, gene, and vaccine delivery. The book covers a wide range of carriers—including polymersomes, liposomes, nanoparticles, micelles, prodrugs, and dendrimers.

Next-Gen Therapies for Metabolic and Endocrine Disorders

Beyond Conventional Approaches

Edited by Thakur Gurjeet Singh , Sanjana Mehta

Delves into the mechanisms of action, potential benefits, and practical applications of next-gen therapies for metabolic and endocrine disorders. It discusses the current and future directions and innovations that could further transform the landscape of metabolic and endocrine disorder management. It provides novel therapeutic approaches to metabolic syndromes, such as single-cell transcriptomics, therapeutic approaches to newer classes of drugs and treatments for type 2 diabetes mellitus, the use of artificial intelligence and the internet of things in diagnosis and management of diabetes mellitus, to name a few.

Applied Rheology in Food Processing

Edited by Winny Routray , Kshirod Kumar Dash Tezpur University, Assam, India

This book acts as a guide to learn about the various rheological behavior of the food, including starch suspensions, dairy products, meat products, fruits and vegetables, packaging materials, associated nanoparticles, and other aspects. It discusses the rheological properties in terms of the categories of various food highlighting variation in properties in terms of differences of composition in the same category. It provides insight into the advanced modelling and experimentation techniques being employed for the assessment and development of requisite food rheology. This book is aimed at graduate students and researchers in food and chemical engineering.

Insects for Human Consumption

A Safe and Sustainable Food Source

Edited by José Lorenzo

Series: Contemporary Food Engineering

Considering their growing popularity as a food source, this book examines the main nutrients and bioactive compounds present in a range of different edible insects. Focusing on the fundamentals of nutrient obtention and rearing management, it dives into the latest developments in the science behind an industry niche that continues to grow as the international community recognises the uses of insects as a natural, sustainable source of important proteins and fats. This book is ideal for researchers, students, and professionals keen to understand the potential benefits of edible insects and how to navigate potential industry challenges.

Non-Thermal Approaches in Extraction of Bioactive Compounds from Diverse Food Sources

Edited by Mahendran Radhakrishnan , B. Kamalapreetha

Series: Contemporary Food Engineering

Combining technical insight with critical analysis, this book introduces non-thermal methods of extracting the diverse array of bioactive compounds found in our everyday foods, as well as the potential benefits for our health they present. After explaining the advantages and limitations of existing thermal techniques, it explores various, cutting-edge alternative methods of phytochemical extraction, such as Pressurized Liquid Extraction (PLE) and Enzyme-Assisted Extraction (EAE). This book serves as a vital guide for researchers, professionals, and students interested in unlocking the potential of bioactive compounds and shaping the future of their extraction from food sources.

Post-War Homes

Mid-Century British Architecture

Dominic Bradbury

During the 1950s and 1960s, a combination of reconstruction, consumer-led demand and the rise of the Welfare State, saw an unprecedented building boom in housing and new homes. British architects embraced the challenge, seeking to build on the lessons of inter-war modernism while introducing fresh and original ideas of their own. They created mid-century new towns, estates and houses, as well as many mid- and high-rise modern landmarks. Post-War Homes provides a major survey of this golden age of tectonic creativity, while focussing upon its most important, influential and engaging typologies.

2ND EDITION

Tall: the design and construction of high-rise architecture

Edited by Guy Marriage Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand

This second edition of TALL has been updated with new information about the construction of high-rise architecture. A lot has happened in the world since 2019 when the first edition was published and so the updates respond to these changes. In addition to the existing illustrations, there are 34 new illustrations in clear black and white, to assist further understanding of the revised material. Overall, this new edition continues to provide a practical guide and desk-reference to any architect or architecture student embarking on a tall building project.

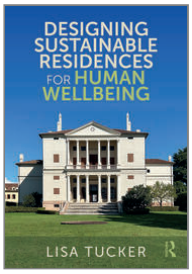
Designing Sustainable Residences for Human Wellbeing



Lisa Tucker

This book is a how-to manual for designing sustainable residences for human wellness. While the commercial market has embraced these principles, the residential market lags behind. Residential designers work much more intimately with clients and are attuned to specific and individual needs. Including information on residential programming, space planning, materials, building systems, energy and water efficiency, this will be a helpful and complete guidebook for all residential designers and students of residential interior design and architecture.

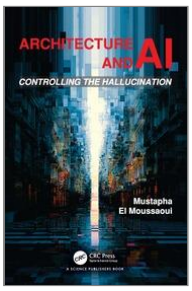
Architecture and AI

Controlling the Hallucination



Mustapha El Moussaoui

This book addresses the growing need for architects and designers to critically engage with artificial intelligence in visual and spatial production. It offers a systematic approach to understanding, directing, and constraining generative models. Combining theoretical insights with technical instructions, the book explains how contemporary AI tools such as latent diffusion models can be employed effectively and responsibly. Rather than relying on AI as an automatic image generator, the book proposes a methodology grounded in control, feedback, and authorship.

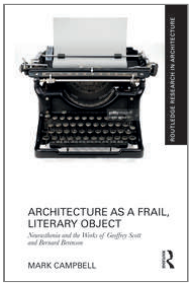
Architecture as a Frail, Literary Object

Neurasthenia and the Works of Geoffrey Scott and Bernard Berenson



Mark Campbell

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

This book considers the motives, ambitions, and malaprops of writing architectural history during the early–1900s; a moment that coincided with the emergence of modernity. In reference to a series of eccentric Anglo–American cultural figures, it considers the relationships between architecture, human perception, disease, and frailty to provide original ideas regarding the writing of architectural history and the literary construction of architecture.

Designbuild Pedagogies for Social Change

Past, Present and Potentials

Edited by Emilie Welty

This volume explores the transformative social change at the heart of designbuild education. From Black Mountain College to Rural Studio, designbuild was once viewed as a subversive critique of architectural education separate from the mainstream. In Designbuild Pedagogies, leaders and innovators in designbuild pedagogy from around the world expound on the methods they use to approach their work and the potentials they envisage for this expanding mode of teaching. These provocative chapters make for an accessible and inspiring window into designbuild's future and will be of interest to faculty and students of architecture and related design disciplines.

Pedagogies for an Anti-Disciplinary Design Education

Edited by Mitesh Dixit , Fedah Taqi , James Westcott

Pedagogies for an Anti-Disciplinary Design Education assembles methods from 15 contributors – across 12 universities in 10 countries – who are attempting to encompass the trans-scalar conflicts that design must take responsibility for. This book argues that a radical rethink is needed. An anti-disciplinary approach can engage the entangled supply chains, energy regimes, debt structures, border policies, histories of dispossession, and more-than-human ecologies in which design operates. Another design education is not only imaginable but already emerging in the experiments documented here, and it can be pursued without denying the constraints within which most of us work.

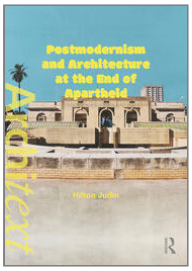
Postmodernism and Architecture at the End of Apartheid



Hilton Judin University of Witwatersrand, South Africa

Series: Architext

Set against a social and political urban landscape of segregation and forced removals, Postmodernism and Architecture at the End of Apartheid unpacks postmodernism in the 1970s and 80s as it unfolds in South Africa during the final brutal decade of apartheid. Architecture and apartheid are central subjects of the book– the ways they came to interact simultaneously to both buttress and undermine a country rapidly disintegrating. With battles waged in defence of white minority rule, architects' turn to postmodernism reflected their disintegrating consciences and commitments in operating in uncertain times.

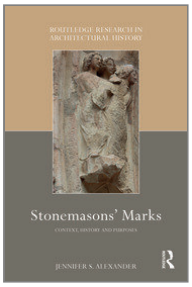
Stonemasons' Marks

Context, History and Purposes



Jennifer Alexander

Series: Routledge Research in Architectural History

This book investigates the historical and functional significance of Stonemasons' marks—symbols inscribed on individual stone blocks—as a communicative practice within the architectural and construction industries. Masons' marks exist for practical reasons and have been in use for over 4000 years. Marks stood outside literacy and acted as a form of communication within the stone-working environment that has parallels with systems of visual signs used elsewhere. This book presents an analysis of masons' marks, moving the debate away from a search for meaning to an appraisal of their roles.

The Architectural Laboratory

Performing Design Research

Edited by Janno Martens , Rajesh Heynickx , Filip Mattens , Stéphane Symons KU Leuven, Belgium

Over the past thirty years, the number of architectural laboratories has surged from a handful to hundreds across the globe. Yet the term remains elusive: What defines an architectural lab? And why has it become so compelling to architects today? Essential reading for architectural historians, theorists, practitioners, educators, students, critics, and curators, The Architectural Laboratory offers a compelling lens through which to understand the evolving role of experimentation in architectural practice.

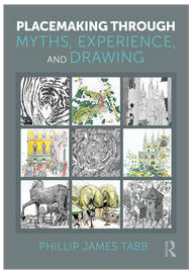
Placemaking Through Myths, Experience, and Drawing



Phillip James Tabb Texas A&M University, USA

This book reveals the profound connections between placemaking, drawing, mythology, and experience as focused on creating vital and meaningful places through the process of drawing. Six different drawing techniques are covered, including in-situ sketching, studio enhanced drawing, mythic landscapes, diagrams, watercolors, and conceptual masterplans. By analyzing drawings, planners and designers can learn from places and architecture, gaining practical insights into the complex interplay of factors that contribute to successful placemaking. This book is essential for practitioners, designers, and students interested in concepts of place, myths, experience, and drawing.

Progressive Planning Practice

Transforming Communities of Color

Edited by Sean Robin

Planning, design and community development have often been practiced in a monocultural way, meaning that communities of color and low-income communities are often overlooked or ignored, if not outright harmed. This book highlights a new approach for transformative community development, where worldviews are rooted in the culture of communities of color and everyday people can find expression in decisions about a community's future. Chapters explore themes such as decolonial planning, climate injustice, Black planning, and ethics. This book is essential for professionals, students and professors of urban planning, design, and community development in the US.

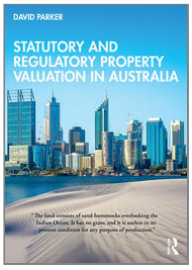
Statutory and Regulatory Property Valuation in Australia



David Parker University of South Australia

This book explains how property valuation is undertaken for the purposes of taxation and determining compensation for compulsory acquisition in Australia, known as statutory valuation, together with how property valuation is undertaken for financial reporting purposes, or regulatory valuation. Through an analysis of relevant concepts of value, statutes, standards and valuation methods, this book provides the framework within which such valuations are undertaken, being an easy to follow guide to the complex and often arcane world of statutory valuation and the globally applicable requirements of regulatory valuation.

The Community Housing Handbook

Unlocking Housing Potential for Small Towns and Rural America

Kim Skobba University of Georgia, Monica H. Callahan , Jermaine M. Durham

This book provides practical tools for driving meaningful change in housing. Chapters explore the pivotal role of housing for individuals and communities, shedding light on how small town leaders often act only when prompted by crisis or opportunity. The authors furnish a blueprint outlining essential components for crafting and executing a housing strategy tailored to the unique needs of rural communities. The book culminates in a compelling call to action, coupled with a concise guide to best practices and common pitfalls in community housing efforts. It is ideal for community leaders and practitioners, and students in urban and regional planning as well as community development.

The Future of Real Estate Education

From Pedagogy to Technology

Edited by Karen M. McGrath , Elaine Worzala , Pernille H. Christensen

Series: The American Real Estate Society (ARES) Real Estate Thought Leadership Collection

The Future of Real Estate Education brings together award-winning educators and researchers to address the complexity and challenges of today's real estate degree programs. Representing diverse disciplinary, geographic, and professional perspectives, the authors discuss innovative technology, inclusive pedagogy, curriculum development and more in an updated, global approach to real estate education. This book will interest faculty and administrators in real estate degree programs as well as instructors teaching undergraduate and postgraduate real estate courses. It is also relevant for professional educators and students pursuing professional education or a real estate degree.

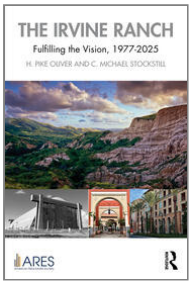
The Irvine Ranch

Fulfilling the Vision, 1977-2025



H. Pike Oliver Runstad Department of Real Estate, University of Washington, C. Michael Stockstill

Series: The American Real Estate Society (ARES) Real Estate Thought Leadership Collection

The Irvine Ranch: Fulfilling the Vision, 1977-2026 continues the story of the planning and development of the Irvine Ranch under a partnership of high-powered businessmen to the single ownership of Donald Bren. It chronicles in detail the Irvine Company's success in planning, as well as its strategic approach to major challenges such as the need for infrastructure and responses to anti-growth sentiment and litigation. New generations of urban planners and real estate developers will return again and again to study how Irvine, particularly under Bren's leadership, set the standard for large-scale community development.

City Planning for Civil Engineers, Environmental Engineers, and Surveyors

Yunyang Ye The University of Alabama

This thoroughly updated second edition focuses on the significant advances and shifts in urban and city planning and sustainable development. It includes new contents on sustainability and resilience in urban planning, climate change impact, technological advancements for urban planning, and electrification and decarbonization of urban environments. This comprehensive coverage balances theory and practice, including regulatory and policy insights, ensuring that the book remains a valuable resource with a unique perspective and technical depth that engineers and surveyors need. It also provides real-world examples and the use of state-of-the-art technologies adopted in urban planning.

Planning the Productive City

Rethinking Urban Industrial Spaces

Edited by Carl Grodach , Jessica Ferm

This book focuses on the overlooked role of industry and industrial land in contemporary urban development. Bringing together detailed studies of over 25 cities in 14 countries (including the US, UK, Canada, Italy, Germany, South Korea, and Turkey), this comprehensive volume puts the diverse forms, geographies, and conflicts over urban industrial land and productive activities at the center of discussions around the future of cities. This book is the first to comprehensively explore the challenges and opportunities of achieving these goals through planning the productive city and is essential for students, researchers and professionals across the range of urban studies fields.

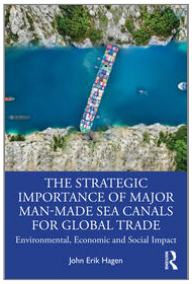
The Strategic Importance of Major Man-Made Sea Canals for Global Trade

Environmental, Economic and Social Impacts



John Erik Hagen

The book focuses on the most significant man-made sea canals in the context of their strategic importance for maritime global trade. Students and the public interested in canals, economic or logistical challenges between continents and nations, and in the context of global sustainability goals, will easily access necessary information on these topics, including industries such as ship operators, charterers, ports, industry and maritime service providers, as well as international organizations and governmental institutions, for updates related to international maritime trade and the important role of canals.

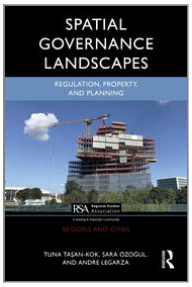
Spatial Governance Landscapes

Regulation, Property, and Planning



Tuna Taşan-Kok University of Amsterdam, Netherlands, Sara Özoğul , Andre Legarza

Series: Regions and Cities

What shapes the city? This book answers this question with a fresh lens: spatial governance landscapes, the dynamic interplay between planning regulation and property-market strategies. Centered on the Metropolitan Region of Amsterdam, the book traces how rules, norms, and public ambitions meet the logics of investors, developers, and intermediaries to co-produce urban form and everyday life. Bringing planning scholarship into direct conversation with real estate and urban governance studies, the authors map regulatory landscapes and investor landscapes side by side, showing how their frictions and alignments open and close pathways for housing, land use, and infrastructure.

Transformational Participatory Urbanism

Making Do as Spatial Practice

Edited by Liska Chan , Elizabeth Stapleton

Series: Cities and Cultures

Transformational Participatory Urbanism explores making do as a critical spatial practice at the intersection of spatial justice and creative geography. Through cases from Hong Kong's Lennon Walls and San Francisco Bay mudflats to container-based sanitation in Haiti and Toronto's strip-mall parking lots, contributors show how people rework urban space under constraint—through adaptation, care, and resistance. This book is written for scholars, practitioners, and advanced students in landscape architecture, urban design and planning, architecture, geography, and visual culture, as well as those seeking low-cost, high-impact approaches to equitable place-making.

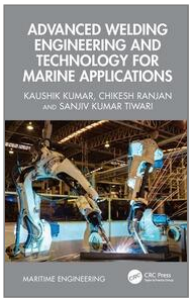
Advanced Welding Engineering and Technology for Marine Applications



Kaushik Kumar Briila Institute of Technology, Jharkhand, India, Chikesh Ranjan RTC Institute of Technology, India, Saurav Dutta , Sanjiv Kumar Tiwari

Series: Maritime Engineering

This book examines the radical technological changes occurring in welding engineering and technology, with a focus on offering a better understanding of the latest developments for marine applications. It presents a detailed analysis of interdisciplinary knowledge, numerical modeling and simulation, as well as the various applications of welding systems. The theoretical results, practical solutions, and guidelines presented are valuable for both researchers working in the area of marine engineering and practitioners looking for solutions to welding-related problems in the maritime industry.

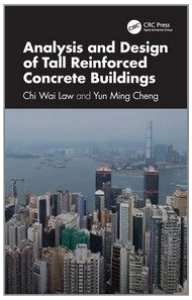
Analysis and Design of Tall Reinforced Concrete Buildings



Chi Wai Law , Yun Ming Cheng

More and taller buildings are being designed and built. These are complex and expensive structures and they can be constructed in varied ground conditions, from good to poor soil and rock. Most existing general books generally cover the basic structural analysis and design principles, and the modelling of structures and foundations for the actual design practice required by engineers tends to be adequately addressed only in narrower and more specialised books. This draws on the authors' extensive practical and research experience to bridge the basic design principles with engineering practice, while remaining rooted in fundamental principles.

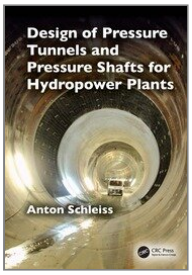
Design of Pressure Tunnels and Pressure Shafts for Hydropower Plants



Anton Schleiss Swiss Federal Institute of Technology Lausanne (EPFL)

Pressure tunnels and shafts are essential for hydropower plants, and their cost and linings is significant. This outlines the design basis, including rock hydraulics, then details the need and use of various types of linings. Pervious linings are often the most economical solution, but seepage forces in the lining and the rock mass result in hydraulic-mechanical interactions. In tight linings, the use of high-grade steels facilitates very high heads at storage level and pumped storage powerplant projects, but these require new risk-based design approaches. It covers design criteria and calculation methods, including safety assessment.

Port and Harbor Structures

R. Sundaravadivelu , S. Sakthivel

Focusing on design aspects of ports and harbor structures including ship yards, this book details various Indian codes and their comparison with prevalent international codes. It covers estimation of load acting on the system, design of slipway, marine travel lifts and ship lifts. Sediment transport and moment of shoals are illustrated with typical examples for green port development including capital dredging and disposal. Various procedure and documentation required for environmental clearance along with EIA/EMP and case studies on rehabilitation and retrofitting are given.It includes spread sheets for various designs like beam, pile, crack width and fixity depth calculation.

Seismic Design of Buried Pipeline Systems

Takashi Koike , Lessandro E. Garciano

This book discusses the application of seismic design methods for lifeline earthquake engineering to buried pipelines so that readers can analyse their behaviour and structural and functional characteristics, verify the results, and apply appropriate methods to design earthquake-resistant lifelines. This book is a vital resource for practitioners and students to deepen their understanding of seismic design methods for lifelines. Researchers will also be able to use these findings as a reference for future technological development.

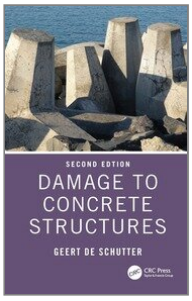
Damage to Concrete Structures



Geert De Schutter Ghent University, Belgium

Concrete can suffer from inappropriate design, errors during execution, mechanisms occurring during hardening, and actions or degradation mechanisms such as reinforcement corrosion, attacks on cement matrix and even aggregate deterioration. This revised textbook for students and reference for professionals now gives more on performance based approaches for durability design, rather than just a descriptive approach, and some focus on sustainability. A new chapter describes the risks related to valorization of secondary or waste materials in concrete. It is illustrated with numerous real-world examples and many drawings and photographs taken of actual structures.

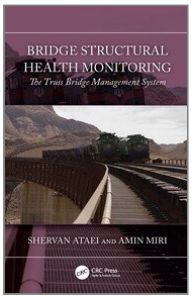
Bridge Structural Health Monitoring

The Truss Bridge Management System



Shervan Ataei , Amin Miri

Online SHM promises to optimize maintenance, extend lifespan and ensure safety and reliability. This practitioner reference and textbook focuses on a truss bridge management system, comparing calculated displacements, strains, and accelerations with SHM results. It emphasizes the universal applicability of SHM to any 50-degree-of-freedom system for predictive asset management. It outlines instrumentation and field loading testing, pre-processing of data, theoretical and experimental modal analysis, indicators of structural damage, and numerical model validation. It presents a detailed case study of capacity assessment of a steel truss railway bridge.

Climate-Resilient Structures and Infrastructures

Edited by Cao Wang , Bilal M. Ayyub , Michael Beer

As safety and serviceability of in-service structures and infrastructure systems are threatened by natural hazards. Owners and decision makers are especially concerned about their resilience -- their ability to be in readiness for, to absorb, recover from, and adapt to disruptive events. Climate change is increasingly producing nonstationary natural hazards such as wind hazards, and concurrent multiple hazards may result in especially severe performance reduction. This book focuses on hazard modelling and resilience methods, and their applications, presenting the theory, methodology, and practical applications to enhancing resilience for engineers, policy makers, and researchers.

Machine Learning for Data-Centric Geotechnics

Edited by Kok-Kwang Phoon Singapore University of Technology and Design, Singapore, Chong Tang , Zi-Jun Cao

Series: Challenges in Geotechnical and Rock Engineering

Machine learning and other digital technologies fed with large datasets offer a major set of tools for practical geotechnical design. Large language models and other generative AIs can perform cognitive tasks currently undertaken by humans -- and might even predict the next event based on some time series. This collection of focused chapters from a group of specialists presents principles and broader up to date practice of machine learning, along with a number of example areas of site characterization, design and construction in geotechnics. This book is essential for sophisticated practitioners as well as graduate student.

Surrogate Methods of Road Safety

KVR Ravi Shankar , Bhadradri Raghuram Kadali

This book provides a comprehensive understanding of accident data collection, analysis, and the use of surrogate safety measures from both vehicular and pedestrian perspectives. It discusses the application of simulation tools for surrogate safety analysis, with an emphasis on risk estimation and the integration of machine learning techniques. The book also explores the use of augmented and virtual reality for road user training and assessment, as well as safety concerns related to automated and connected vehicles. Field case studies offer a realistic view of on-site assessments, safety implications, and measures for safety enhancement.

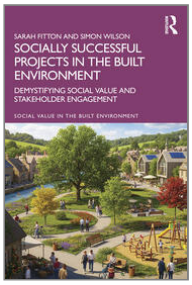
Socially Successful Projects in the built environment

Demystifying social value and stakeholder engagement



Sarah Fitton , Simon Wilson

Series: Social Value in the Built Environment

Socially Successful Projects in the built environment will help the reader understand the theory behind a reframed approach to stakeholder engagement using a social value lens. The authors argue that projects in the built environment need to be technically feasible, financially viable, and socially successful. In summary, this is about delivering better projects for both the stakeholders and the project teams. In Socially Successful Projects in the built environment, the authors unravel the complex relationship between social value and stakeholder engagement and reveal a transformative practical theory for effective collaboration and facilitation.

External Stakeholder Management in Projects

Edited by Johan Ninan

Series: Spon Research

External stakeholders in projects across sectors, such as infrastructure, policy, healthcare, communication, are the set of users, special interest groups and actors that are not a party to the contract but are socially or economically affected by the outcomes of the project. Managing such stakeholders is important as the success of any project depends on how its deliverables are viewed by the communities on whom its operations impinge. The book seeks to be a valuable resource for all project management academics, researchers and practitioners who are interested in improving external stakeholder management and the successful delivery of these projects.

Advances in Energy Materials

Materials Fabrication, Properties, and Applications

Edited by Lishin T. , Maciej Jaroszewski , Sabu Thomas

Covers a wide range of topics related to energy materials and applications, delving into theoretical foundations, modeling, and simulations of energy materials. It discusses the art of synthesizing and characterizing these materials and the multitude of applications that energy materials offer in our rapidly evolving world. It includes perovskite solar cells, solar-thermal storage materials and more. It provides a detailed analysis of the topic, highlighting the latest advancements in the field and their potential impact on the energy landscape. It offers important new research on energy materials and their significance in the pursuit of sustainable development.

Advanced Air Mobility

Human Factors, Ecosystem Readiness, and the Integration of eVTOLs

Edited by Dimitrios Ziakkas , Amin Vafadar , Debra Henneberry

Electric Vertical Take-Off and Landing (eVTOL) vehicles represent a major advancement in aviation technology, poised to transform urban mobility and global transportation networks. This book looks at how these aircraft are being incorporated into existing and emerging aviation infrastructures worldwide. This title addresses the knowledge gap between traditional aviation practices and the innovative demands posed by eVTOL technologies and offers insights based on research and real-world applications. This volume offers guidance for anyone involved in the design, implementation, regulation, or operation of eVTOL technologies within the evolving global aviation landscape.

Creating a Sustainable Healthcare Workplace

Management Challenges Related to Aggressive Patient Behaviour

Ewa Beck-Krala , Elżbieta Tarczoń , Małgorzata Sidor-Rządkowska , Jerzy Rosiński

Healthcare workers face increasingly dangerous work environments, with patient aggression emerging as a critical threat particularly in emergency departments. This title reveals the alarming frequency of verbal, physical, and mental aggression toward medical staff, often surrounded by a conspiracy of silence despite its significant impact on healthcare delivery. Through research including surveys of 246 medical professionals and 39 interviews and case studies, the authors expose the prevalence of this phenomenon and its devastating consequences for workers, organizations, and ultimately patient care.

Design of Workplace Dilution and Local Ventilation Systems

Edited by Amir Hossein Khoshakhlagh , Haruna Musa Moda

Temperate buildings are comfortable, safer and more productive places to work. Ensuring that extremes of cold and heat and airborne diseases are mitigated is through effective design, function and management of ventilation systems. This book addresses the basics of ventilation systems and their use in building-based workplaces and how to ensure they are managed successfully. This book provides comprehensive technical information regarding the design and implementation of dilution and local exhaust ventilation systems to ensure safe and productive workplaces.

Online Trust and Safety

Tools to Combat Online Harms, Misinformation and Malicious Content

Edited by Ian McLoughlin , Carol Soon , Roy Ka-Wei Lee , May Lwin , Razwana Begum , Zhu Feida

The promise of the internet was open knowledge and connection; the reality includes manipulation, abuse, and mistrust. This book confronts that gap with a practice-oriented guide to designing, analysing, and governing safer digital ecosystems. This resource offers researchers, policymakers, platform builders, educators, and civil society a clear map of today's landscape as well as a pragmatic agenda for what can and should come next: transparent provenance, robust measurement, and accountable interventions that earn user trust.

Resilient Contractor Safety Management

Edited by Simon Goncharenko

Contractor management has become an essential component of operational success, risk mitigation, and regulatory compliance across industries. As hiring clients place increasing demands on their contractors, understanding the expectations and the reasons behind them in the context of safety is more important than ever. This book offers insights into the evolving landscape of contractor engagement. It delivers a structured and practical guide covering every stage of contractor safety management, from selection, prequalification, and onboarding, to insurance, assessments, and legal considerations.

Resilient Safety in Advanced Air Mobility

A Framework for Sustainable Operations

Manolis Karachalios

Series: Resilient Safety

This book explores the Advanced Air Mobility (AAM) ecosystem, a subject that covers technological innovation, sustainable planning, and aviation safety. As urban and regional populations grow and traditional transportation networks reach their limits, AAM has emerged as a transformational solution for delivering transit through aerial mobility. This title examines how resilient safety principles can be integrated into AAM systems to create efficient, sustainable, and safe modes of local transportation.

4TH EDITION

Human Factors and Ergonomics for Beginners

Jan Dul Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University, the Netherlands, Bernard Weerdmeester

Human Factors and Ergonomics for Beginners offers a useful introduction to the broad field of human factors. Now in its fourth edition, this book is the go-to beginner guide to the field as it describes real, practical guidelines that are based on solid knowledge and experience. It will help any reader to enhance human-system performance and reduce the undesirable effects and unintended consequences of many human interactions with technology and the organizational environment.

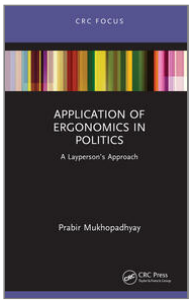
Application of Ergonomics in Politics

A Layperson's Approach



Prabir Mukhopadhyay Indian Institute of Information Technology Design and Manufacturing, Jabalpur, India

Politics and ergonomics share a commonality as they are designed for people. Despite this connection, the application of ergonomic principles to political success remains largely unexplored in academic literature. This book presents ergonomics in an accessible format specifically tailored for those involved in politics, regardless of their educational or professional background. Written in an engaging story-telling format, this guide covers six essential areas: the macro picture of politics and elections, the ergonomic approach to politics and power, ruling and opposition dynamics, connecting with people, election ergonomics, and practical exercises for application.

Contractor Safety Management

From Compliance to Culture

Adel Lawson

Contractor safety management represents one of the most critical yet overlooked challenges facing organizations today. When accidents occur involving contractors and subcontractors, the spotlight increasingly falls on client organizations who face mounting reputational, legal, and financial consequences. Contractor Safety Management: From Compliance to Culture examines how responsibility for safety is shared across complex contractor relationships, which moves beyond the traditional approach of treating safety as a compliance checkbox exercise.

Enhancing Modern Living with Virtual and Augmented Reality

Practical Applications

Kinga Stecuła , Radosław Wolniak

Series: CRC Press Reference Books in Computer Science

This book explores the role of virtual and augmented reality (AR and VR) in today's evolving digital landscape, examining how these technologies are shaping society and how they might evolve in the future. Critical discussions include the technical, ethical, and societal implications of AR and VR, with a focus on pressing issues such as data privacy, cybersecurity, accessibility, the digital divide, and the psychological effects of immersive experiences. It is an invaluable resource for students, researchers, and professionals interested in the interdisciplinary nature of AR and VR, and bridges fields such as computer science, psychology, media studies, tourism, and urban studies.

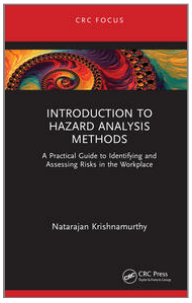
Introduction to Hazard Analysis Methods

A Practical Guide to Identifying and Assessing Risks in the Workplace



Natarajan Krishnamurthy

Risk management begins with the critical ability to identify and assess hazards before they manifest as accidents. This concise guide presents simple proven methodologies for hazard identification and assessment, equipping professionals with practical tools to anticipate potential dangers in their workplace. From HAZOP and "What if...?" Analysis, to Fault Tree and Event Tree Analyses and the Bowtie method, each technique is thoroughly explained with real-world applications drawn from the author's experience in accident investigation and consultancy.

Groundwater Geochemistry and Isotopes

Ian Clark

Groundwater Geochemistry and Isotopes provides a practical and theoretical understanding of geochemistry and environmental isotopes in hydrogeology with applications in both natural groundwater and in contaminated settings. This text teaches the thermodynamic basis and principal reactions involving the major ions, gases and isotopes during groundwater recharge, weathering, and redox evolution. This second edition brings additional case studies and new developments in the practical use of isotopes and geochemistry in understanding groundwater origin, evolution and anthropogenic impacts. Additional solved problems and example calculations are available as a free e-manual by request.

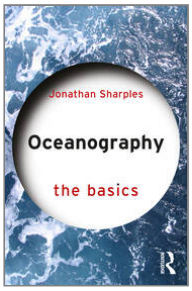
Oceanography

The Basics



Jonathan Sharples

Series: The Basics

Earth's oceans are vital for sustaining life on our planet. Oceanography is an intrinsically multidisciplinary science that explores how the ocean does this. The author uses plankton as a focus for the book, drawing together the physics of the ocean circulation, the chemistry of nutrients and carbon, and the biology of the plankton. This is an essential introduction to the field for undergraduates, and includes further resources and short, quantitative diversions for students who want to take the concepts further.

Agriculture in Extreme Environments

K. R. Krishna

Highlights the present status of farming regions that experience extreme environmental conditions including arid and semi-arid areas in North America, the Northern European Plains and Scandinavia, Patagonia, West Asia and North Africa, Australia, and Mongolia. It also covers some temperate environments, like Northern European Plains and Scandinavia. Each chapter covers a specific region that experiences extreme environments, first providing an introduction to the area and then providing detailed information on the natural physiography, climate, native vegetation, and environmental settings as well as the factors that generate the extreme environment.

Manik H. Kalubarme Space Applications Centre, ISRO, India, Dharmesh Verma , Ritesh Sharma Basmati Export Development Foundation (APEDA), India, A.N. Singh

Aromatic Basmati rice, also known as 'the scented pearl' by its connoisseurs, has been grown in a specific geo-climatic region of India and Pakistan for centuries. It is appreciated by consumers in more than 100 countries around the globe. Due to its specific aroma and grain quality traits, Basmati rice also fetches a much higher price in the international market compared to other non-aromatic rices, benefiting its producer farmers and also traders. Timely information on Basmati rice acreage and production is a necessity for planners, policy makers, and traders alike.

Biodiversity Hotspot of the Coastal Forests of Eastern Africa

Edited by T. Pullaiah , Ally J. K. Nkwabi

Series: Biodiversity Hotspots of the World

Covers the Coastal Forests of Eastern Africa Biodiversity Hotspot that stretches along the eastern edge of Africa and includes parts of Somalia, Kenya, Tanzania, and Mozambique. All islands lying immediately offshore are also part of the hotspot—Pemba, Zanzibar, Mafia and the Bazaruto Archipelago among them. It covers the geography, climate, and soil as well as the impact of climate change on the region, while also detailing the vegetation types, the various insects and invertebrates, amphibians, reptiles, mammals large and small, as well as coverage of the threats to and conservation of the rich biodiversity of the region.

Edited by T. Pullaiah , Teshome Soromessa

Covers the Eastern Afromontane, encompassing regions of Africa and Arabia. It covers extensive areas in Africa and Arabia, starting from some of its highest peaks and mountain regions to large plateaus. It provides an overview of the ecological features of the land, covering its geography, climate, and vegetation. It then goes on to cover diversity in its various lifeforms. It also delves into the diversity of amphibians and mammals residing in the hotspot. It covers the negative impact of climate change on the hotspot and the subsequent dangers it poses as well as other threats. The book details the conservation efforts as well as steps that can be taken to improve these efforts.

Digital Participatory Biodiversity Science

Edited by Lorna Heaton , Florian Charvolin

This book draws on several case studies of digital participatory science initiatives to reflectively analyze changes in biodiversity knowledge, expertise and infrastructures. It analyses changes in biodiversity knowledge, expertise and infrastructures in several digital participatory or citizen science initiatives and examines how these projects interact with their local environments and how the results are transported and made visible in other contexts. The projects described involve different groups including indigenous peoples, amateur naturalists, hunters, and researchers, in several geographical contexts, such as France, Finland and Canada.

Lower and Higher Plants for Biofuel Production

Edited by Azamal Husen Wolaita Sodo University, Ethiopia

The global energy sector is rapidly evolving in response to climate change, environmental concerns, and the depletion of fossil fuels. Biofuels, particularly those derived from plant-based sources, offer a renewable and cleaner alternative that can integrate into existing energy systems with minimal disruption. Lower and Higher Plants for Biofuel Production, explores the untapped potential of both microalgae and macroalgae (lower plants), as well as oilseed crops and high-biomass grasses (higher plants), as sustainable feedstocks.

Edited by Aznarul Islam Aliah University, Debajit Datta Jadavpur University, Biplab Sarkar Aliah University, Sandipan Ghosh , Sanat Kumar Guchhait University of Burdwan, Adolfo Quesada-Román Universidad de Costa Rica

Tropical deltas of the world are in decline and are threatened by climate change, geo-environmental dynamics, natural hazards, and disasters. This book is a comprehensive discussion of the present delta crisis and the various risks the deltas are facing due to human and natural factors. It addresses their resilience, the importance of biodiversity, and the future adaptations for sustainable management of tropical deltas. The use of geospatial tools for the assessment and modeling of environmental degradations and the applications of AI and ML are examined to help readers understand the interdisciplinary perspective of deltas' vulnerability and sustainability.

An Operator's Guide Book

MP Sukumaran Nair

This book is about the ammonia industry, which is the building block for nitrogenous fertilizers, and serves as a handbook for industry operators and consultants. Written from an operator's perspective, it explains optimization, economics, engineering, troubleshooting, safety and environment related implications. The theoretical implication of the working of catalysts, reactions, equipment, process safety and environment aspects are also dealt with to enhance operator confidence and run the plant most optimally. This book is aimed at professionals in chemical engineering, working in chemical and ammonia plants.

Design of Electrical Transmission Lines Structures and Foundations

Sriram Kalaga , Prasad Yenumula

This book covers line modelling, structural and foundation systems used in high-voltage transmission lines, conductors, insulators, hardware and component assembly.The term "transmission structures" includes a vast range of structural systems and configurations of various materials. It discusses those systems along with associated topics such as structure functions and configurations, load cases for design, analysis techniques, line, structure and foundation modeling, design deliverables and latest advances in the field. In the foundations section, theories related to direct embedment, drilled shafts, spread foundations, vibratory caissons, micro-piles and anchors are discussed.

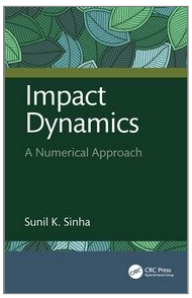
Impact Dynamics

A Numerical Approach



Sunil K. Sinha The Ohio State University, USA

Impact Dynamics: A Numerical Approach enables safer aerospace and mechanical designs by providing state-of-the art techniques and methodologies for impact simulation and crashworthiness analysis of critical structural components. It investigates the shock type of dynamic loading situations as a part of mechanical design discussions. The book focuses on numerical simulations using current models to explain the underlying physics and demonstrate how this physics-based approach provides better insight into impact events. This book will be useful to aviation safety professionals, researchers, and practicing aerospace and mechanical design engineers.

Mass Flow Measurement

Jesse Yoder Flow Research, Wakefield, Massachusetts, USA

Mass Flow Measurement describes how Coriolis flowmeters, thermal flowmeters, and mass flow controllers function. It explains how and why these flowmeters were developed, describes the applications and ways in which they are used, and explores what to expect in terms of future development. This book is designed for anyone involved with flowmeters and instrumentation, including product and marketing managers, strategic planners, application engineers, and distributors. Covering flowmeters that specifically measure mass flow, the book discusses why flow measurement is important for measuring gas flow and any fluid whose quantity is affected by temperature and pressure.

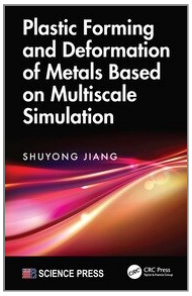
Plastic Forming and Deformation of Metals Based on Multiscale Simulation



Shuyong Jiang

This book takes a multiscale approach to explore the plastic forming and deformation of metals, spanning a wide spectrum from the macroscale to the mesoscale, microscale, nanoscale, and atomic levels. This work will serve as a valuable reference for researchers, students, and professionals in mechanical manufacturing, materials science, and solid mechanics seeking deeper insights into the plastic deformation mechanisms of metals.

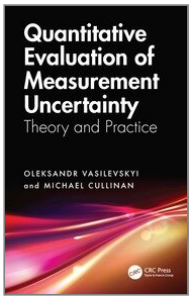
Quantitative Evaluation of Measurement Uncertainty

Theory and Practice



Oleksandr Vasilevskyi , Michael Cullinan

Quantitative Evaluation of Measurement Uncertainty: Theory and Practice provides comprehensive coverage of dynamic, direct, indirect, and combined measurements, giving a complete perspective on measurement uncertainty. It features pioneering approaches to evaluating uncertainty in dynamic measurements. Readers will gain a thorough understanding of both statistical and non-statistical methodologies for uncertainty analysis. Bridging theoretical principles with practical applications, this book will provide engineers, researchers, and graduate students with the essential tools to assess and communicate measurement uncertainty with confidence.

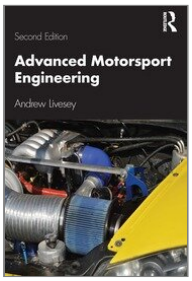
Advanced Motorsport Engineering



Andrew Livesey

Are you training as a technician, just starting a motorsport degree training as a technician, just starting a motorsport degree? Andrew is a practicing lecturer and motorsport engineer who has trained race engineers who are working for the major motorsport teams, including McLaren and Ferrari, and their supply chains. There are hundreds of different types of jobs in motorsport, this book will help you understand both the technology and the terminology so that you can progress your career quickly, using IMI or EAL qualifications at Level 3. This book is a follow on to Basic Motorsport Engineering, also written by Andrew.

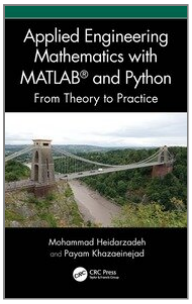
Applied Engineering Mathematics with MATLAB® and Python

From Theory to Practice



Mohammad Heidarzadeh , Payam Khazaeinejad

This new textbook bridges the gap between mathematical theory and practical engineering applications. Organized into eight chapters, it introduces programming skills in MATLAB and Python alongside essential mathematical concepts, progressing from basic computation and linear algebra to more advanced topics like differential equations, Fourier series, and Laplace transforms. The book is intended for undergraduate engineering students in Civil, Mechanical, Electrical, and Chemical Engineering. It is particularly suited for modules in Engineering Mathematics, Programming, Computations, and Analytical Studies, and can also serve as a supplementary reference for postgraduate students.

Building Energy Simulation Using DesignBuilder™

Vishal Garg IIIT, Hyderabad, Telangana, India, Jyotirmay Mathur MNIT, Jaipur, Rajasthan, India, Aviruch Bhatia IIIT, Hyderabad, Telangana, India

This book focuses on HVAC and photovoltaics as a medium to improve energy efficiency and energy generation, respectively. It covers heating and cooling design including simulating different types of HVACs from the lens of energy efficiency, and evaluation of the impact of photovoltaics for energy generation. It elaborates upon the cost-benefit analysis, sensitivity assessments, addressing uncertainties for different building components, building energy code compliance for HVAC systems. It also features simulation project case studies. It is aimed at students, researchers in building energy (simulation)/building design courses, energy simulation professionals, architects and so forth.

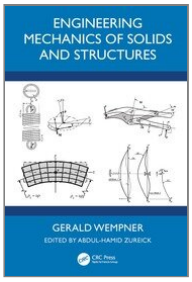
Engineering Mechanics of Solids and Structures



Gerald Wempner Georgia Institute of Technology (retired), Atlanta, USA, Abdul-Hamid Zureick

This textbook for advanced students in aerospace, mechanical, and civil engineering sets out the underlying concepts, methods, and theories. As well as giving the Newtonian approach to motion and equilibrium, it offers the Lagrangean criteria of work and energy as the most effective means to formulate finite elements and other discrete approximations. Thorough mathematics demonstrates the limitations of the approximations and provides the tools for more precise analyses. This can then be applied to a broad spectrum of structural and mechanical components – the analysis and design of a dome or a bridge, the hull of a ship or a spacecraft, or the mechanical component of an engine.

Fundamentals of Turbomachinery

Ernesto Benini University of Padua, Italy

Fundamentals of Turbomachinery simplifies complex turbomachinery concepts, helping engineering students understand the basics step-by-step to prepare for more advanced studies and real-world applications. It provides the theoretical details needed to explain the principles underlying turbomachinery behavior with an emphasis on a solid mathematical foundation. Designed to guide readers through an understanding of machines in terms of increasing complexity, this textbook focuses on core principles instead of advanced approximations or computational tools. This book is intended for senior undergraduate engineering students taking turbomachinery and fluid mechanics courses.

The Art of Engineering

Fundamentals and Principles

Jafar Ghazanfarian University of Zanjan, Iran

The Art of Engineering: Fundamentals and Principles provides the technical aspects, fundamental definitions, and philosophical foundations of engineering, offering a coherent framework that connects engineering concepts across all disciplines. Including detailed discussions on the philosophy of science, fundamentals of design, engineering ethics, and the evolving role of engineers in society, the book works through comprehensive coverage of engineering principles with a gradual introduction of theory. This book is intended for first-year engineering students taking an Introduction to Engineering or Fundamentals of Engineering course.

Interest in additive manufacturing, commonly referred to as 3D printing, is rapidly growing both in theory and practice. Engineers and engineering firms are increasingly turning to 3D printing to create prototypes of products before mvoing to full-scale production. In academic environments, professors, researchers, and students are leveraging the capabilities of 3D printing to enhance project outcomes. This newly revised handbook is specifically tailored to focus on product design within the defense industry, a sector that significantly influences a range of other industries. The content has been revised to meet the demands of businesses, industries, and government entities.

Assistive Robotics

Perspectives, Challenges, and Firmware

Edited by Debanik Roy Remote Handling & Robotics Division, BARC, DAE, Mumbai, India, Snehashish Chakraverty NIT, Rourkela, India

This book brings out analytical paradigms and research outcomes of novel Assistive Robots that are deployed in healthcare or surveillance & indoor service or agricultural activity. It attends to specific design-thread and hardware paradigms of the ensemble domain of assistive robots. The book addresses important research issues of Assistive Robotics, such as introduction of skewed co-ordinate reference frame (in lieu of Cartesian system), kinematics of compliant systems, non-linear coupled dynamics, run-time dynamics under uncertain robotic workspace, and so forth.

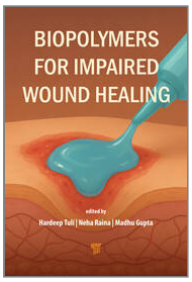
Biopolymers for Impaired Wound Healing



Hardeep Singh Tuli , Neha Raina , Madhu Gupta

This comprehensive book addresses a wide range of subjects, including an overview of cutaneous wound healing, the function of inflammation in wound repair, and the potential use of biopolymers in healing. It is an excellent resource for clinical and fundamental researchers looking into drug delivery, regenerative medicine, and wound healing. The creation of sophisticated wound dressings and prospective uses for biopolymeric formulations are covered in the section on the interdisciplinary approach to wound care. The book is a valuable resource and reference manual for all readers who are interested in understanding wound management.

Deep Learning Approaches in Intelligent Wireless Networking

Edited by Bharat Bhushan Sharda University, India, Mohd Anas Wajid , Sudhir Kumar Sharma Institute of Information Technology and Management, India, Achyut Shankar Amity University, India, Mithun Chakraborty , Parma Nand Sharda University, India

Series: Computational Methods for Industrial Applications

This reference text covers deep learning-based communication frameworks for multiuser detection and sparse channel estimation and elaborates discussion on deep learning-based ultra-dense cell communication and sensor networks and ad-hoc communication. It further presents concepts and theories related to high-speed communication systems which are important in intelligent wireless communications. It is written for senior undergraduate students, graduate students, and academic researchers in the fields of electrical engineering, electronics and communications engineering, computer science and engineering, and information technology.

Developments in Electric Discharge Machining

Edited by Ranjan Kumar Ghadai , Prosun Mandal , Sujeet Kumar Chaubey

Series: Advanced Materials Processing and Manufacturing

This book is about fundamental and advancements in electric discharge machining (EDM) technology including developments in machine tools, process capability, subsystems, electrodes and dielectrics, control units etc. in EDM and its variants such as Wire-EDM, ECDM, and other hybrid processes of EDM. Miniature parts fabrication, making typical shapes and features, machining of thin parts, microfabrication, using EDM for coating are the primary topics covered in this book. This book is aimed at researchers and graduate students in manufacturing technology, mechanical engineering, materials, and metallurgy.

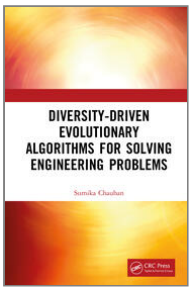
Diversity-Driven Evolutionary Algorithms For Solving Engineering Problems



Sumika Chauhan

Diversity-Driven Evolutionary Algorithms For Solving Engineering Problems explores optimization algorithms and their applications across diverse engineering domains. It presents a comprehensive exploration of both classical and modern optimization techniques, emphasizing their role in solving complex, real-world problems. The book bridges theoretical foundations with practical implementation, providing readers with the knowledge to understand, analyze, and apply these algorithms effectively.

Dynamic State Estimation for Power Systems under Unconventional Measurements

Bogang Qu , Zidong Wang Brunel Uni, UK, Do Shen

This book presents advanced Dynamic State Estimation (DSE) methodologies across three power system classes: quasi-steady power systems, synchronous-generator-based multi-machine systems and renewable energy microgrids. The work tackles unconventional measurements including time-delays, multi-rate measurements, event-triggered transmissions, outliers, and sensor saturations including complex factors. The nine-chapter structure progresses from fundamentals through specific applications to future research directions. This book is aimed at graduate students and researchers in electrical engineering, power systems, control systems, and signal processing.

Eco Friendly and Sustainable Coatings for Wear Prone Industrial Applications

Edited by Jimmy Mehta , Manikant Paswan , Pallav Gupta

Series: Recent Advances in Materials for Nanotechnology

This book proposes eco-friendly and sustainable coating solutions as both a remedy and a revolution. Each chapters covers different facets of such coatings including advancements in coating technologies, their potential to extend the life of wear-prone materials while adhering to sustainability principles, and innovative development and application of biodegradable materials for coatings. It discusses new materials' fabrication techniques, transformation methods, and environmental implications with an overview of their sustainability and effectiveness. This book is aimed at graduate students and researchers in materials engineering, industrial chemistry, and professionals.

Eco-Mineral Recycling 4.0 and 5.0

A Sustainable and Intelligent Path to Meeting Clean Energy Needs

Samuel Chukwujindu Nwokolo University of Calabar, Nigeria, Edson L. Meyer , Chinedu Christian Ahia

This book examines the novel idea of eco-mineral recycling 4.0 and 5.0 as an environmentally friendly approach to address the increasing need for renewable energy. It seeks to convert waste materials into valuable resources for the generation of renewable energy sources using innovative technologies and procedures. Further, it presents a pioneering strategy for tackling environmental issues and fostering economic growth by thoroughly analyzing the current obstacles in mineral extraction and energy production. This book is aimed at researchers and graduate students in metals, energy technology, and environmental engineering.

Electric and Hybrid Vehicles: A Solution to Green Transportation and Resilient Grid

Electrified Transportation

Edited by Mohd Rizwan Khalid , Farhad Ilahi Bakhsh , Sanchari Deb , Mohammad Amir , Irfan A. Khan

Series: River Publishers Series in Transport Technology

This book presents electric vehicle technology, highlighting the research gap and bottlenecks, while laying the roadmap for future research. This will lead to the success of technology and creating a green, intelligent, smart, and sustainable society along with a resilient grid. It is intended for academics and researchers who are working in the field of electric vehicles for net-zero transportation.

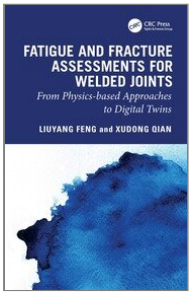
Fatigue and Fracture Assessments for Welded Joints

From physics-based approaches to Digital Twins



Liuyang Feng , Xudong Qian

This sets out experimental results for fracture resistance, assessment of ductile tearing and brittle fracture, and new approaches to estimate welded joints under high and low cycle and combined actions. It also presents a digital twin for fatigue crack sizing and life assessment, with the example of an offshore structure. It bridges the gap between material fracture resistance and fracture resistance for realistic cracks such as surface cracks in welded joints under high and low and combined cycle fatigue. It suits as a graduate textbook for students and a practitioner reference for structural, mechanical, and marine and offshore engineering.

Fluid Mechanics

Fundamentals, Advanced Concepts, and Smart Technologies

Edited by Raj Kumar Arya , George D. Verros , J. Paulo Davim University of Aveiro, Portugal

The book begins with an exploration of the fundamental concepts, properties, and behaviors of fluids. It further presents an in-depth discussion on laminar and turbulent flows, fluid behavior in various geometries, and boundary layer theory. It then covers advanced topics in fluid mechanics, ranging from space applications to smart fluid systems. It offers practical applications that highlight how fluid mechanics plays a pivotal role in diverse industries. It is primarily written for senior undergraduates, and graduate students in diverse fields including mechanical engineering, manufacturing engineering, chemical engineering, aerospace engineering, and structural engineering.

Advances, and Applications

Edited by Gaurav Dwivedi MANIT Bhopal, India, Ashwani Kumar Technical Educational Department, UP, India, Sujeet Kesharvani Maulana Azad National Institute of Technology Bhopal, India

Series: Advances in Manufacturing, Design and Computational Intelligence Techniques

The text provides a holistic view to reduce the use of fossil fuels and move towards sustainable future transportation fuels like biodiesel, ethanol, and hydrogen fuels. It explores the compatibility of biodiesel with vehicles and its utilization across various transport modes. The text further analyses the performance metrics, efficiency, and environmental impact compared to conventional diesel. It is primarily written for senior undergraduates, graduate students, and academic researchers in the fields of mechanical engineering, energy engineering, environmental engineering, manufacturing engineering, industrial and production engineering, and automotive engineering.

Fundamental Optical Models

William A. Challener

Series: Series in Optics and Optoelectronics

This book addresses the theory of several fundamental optical problems and provides insights into converting theory into computer software. The book's nine chapters cover the optics of multilayer thin films, planar waveguides, multilayer conformal thin films on diffraction gratings, the method of lines for modeling more general waveguides, cylindrical waveguides (i.e. optical fibers) with multilayers, fields in the vicinity of the focus of a lens, near field-to-far field transforms, and scattered field finite difference time domain modeling. It is suitable for undergraduate and graduate students studying electromagnetism and optics, as well as industrial researchers.

Generative AI and Sustainability in Higher Education

Applications, Opportunities, and Challenges

Edited by Shrikaant Kulkarni Victorian Institute of Technology, Melbourne, Australia, P. William , Firas Tayseer Ayasrah Al Ain University

Series: Higher Education and Sustainability

The integration of generative AI into higher education presents a unique opportunity to enhance sustainability. AI-driven solutions can optimize resources and processes and provide tools to tap the potential of generative AI in creating more personalized, efficient, and sustainable educational environments. This book discusses the role of Generative AI in higher education and provides a clear vision on how to integrate AI technology within the framework of sustainability. It balances theoretical insights with practical applications and ethical considerations. Readers learn how to navigate the ethical and social implications, understand sustainability initiatives, and foresee trends.

Graphene and Beyond

Advanced 2D Materials for Energy Applications

Edited by Ram K. Gupta

Development of advanced 2D materials beyond graphene presents a paradigm shift in energy research, offering unprecedented opportunities to revolutionize energy storage, conversion, and efficiency technologies. But despite significant progress, there remains a need for a consolidated resource that integrates the latest research findings, technological advancements, and future prospects. Graphene and Beyond: Advanced 2D Materials for Energy Applications explores the synthesis, properties, and applications of advanced 2D materials, making it essential for academics, industry professionals, and policymakers harnessing their potential for sustainable energy solutions.

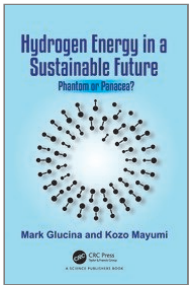
Hydrogen Energy in a Sustainable Future

Phantom or Panacea?



Mark Glucina , Kozo Mayumi

Hydrogen — the first element, clean burning and packed with energy — has been hailed as the fuel of the future for generations. Today it is cast as a linchpin of decarbonisation and backed by billions in subsidies. But is hydrogen really the net-zero breakthrough we've been waiting for, or a costly distraction? This book cuts through the hype, unpacking the science, economics, and politics of the hydrogen economy with clarity and precision. Drawing on decades of energy research, it shows where hydrogen might truly deliver — and where it won't. A sharp, timely guide to the new hydrogen gold rush.

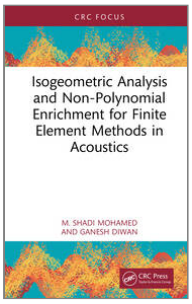
Isogeometric Analysis and Non-Polynomial Enrichment for Finite Element Methods in Acoustics



M. Shadi Mohamed Heriot-Watt University, UK, Ganesh Diwan FT Technologies, UK

The finite element method is limited in solving acoustical problems at high frequencies when a fixed level of discretization per wavelength is used, and the numerical error grows rapidly as frequency increases. This issue can be tackled by using high-order approximations in the method to significantly increase the range of frequencies that can be dealt with. Major gains come from incorporating exponential functions in the finite element approximation and the use of non-uniform rational basis spline. This book focuses on developments in these two directions where such elements are introduced and discussed in detail for different types of applications.

A Comprehensive Guide to Principles, Assessment and Mitigation

Edited by Andrea Koerdt , Judit Knisz Faculty of Water Sciences, University of Public Service, Hungary, Scott Wade , Elisabete R. Silva BioISI-Biosystems & Integrative Sciences Inst., University of Lisbon, Portugal

Series: Microbes, Materials, and the Engineered Environment

Microbiologically influenced corrosion (MIC) describes the negative influence that a microorganism has on a material, with severe consequences for humans, nature, and the economy. This book offers an interdisciplinary investigation of the interaction between materials science and microbiology to find solutions to adverse effects of MIC. It includes the state of the field, advances in technologies, and guidance for future challenges. Aimed at an interdisciplinary audience, this work is an essential reference for readers across the materials, chemical, environmental, and energy engineering fields as well as microbiologists and biotechnologists seeking to mitigate the impact of MIC.

Multimedia and Multimodal Intelligence for Sustainable Development

Edited by Vinay Kumar Srivastava , Priyank Khare , Divyanshu Awasthi , Lalit Garg University of Malta Faculty of Information and Communications Technology, Malta

Series: Multimedia and Multimodal Intelligence

The multimodal and multimedia data need to be secured and preserved properly in the present scenario. The methodologies proposed in the book will offer a new paradigm in AI-based techniques. With these approaches, the social good of modern society will be enhanced. Multimedia, multimodal data and intelligent systems will deliver insightful comments for sustainable development. Therefore, these challenges have proven exciting for multimedia and multimodal AI researchers.

Multimodal Artificial Intelligence in Precision Agriculture

Practices, Challenges, and Applications

Edited by Abhilasha Sharma , Vishwas Rathi , Anupam Biswas , Anil Singh , Omer Rana

Series: Multimedia and Multimodal Intelligence

The text explores the impact of artificial intelligence, machine learning, and deep learning over multimedia and multimodal data for agricultural automation. It focuses on identifying key challenges in utilizing artificial intelligence and addresses the challenges of using diverse data sources in precision farming applications. It is primarily written for senior undergraduates, graduate students, and academic researchers in electrical engineering, electronics and communications engineering, computer science and engineering, agricultural engineering, and information technology.

Nanocomposites and Nanomaterials in Biomedical Applications

Edited by Vivek Dave , Deependra Singh , Pallerla Naveen Reddy

A comprehensive overview of the developments and applications of nanocomposites in the biomedical field, highlighting their unique properties and versatile applications in healthcare. Discusses the mechanisms and various types nanocomposites, methods of preparation, recycled biomedical waste materials, etc. Special emphasis is placed on drug delivery systems, showcasing how nanocomposites can enhance the efficacy and precision of therapeutic interventions. Also covered are applications of nanocomposites for various diseases and cancer treatment, applications of nanocomposites for 3D and 4D printing for personalized medicine and tissue engineering.

Nanofluids for Efficient Energy Conservation and Process Intensification

Shriram S. Sonawane VNIT, India, Parag P. Thakur SVNIT, India, Manjakuppam Malika BVRIT, India

This book presents mathematical, numerical, and experimental methodologies of applying nanofluids in renewable and non-renewable energy conservation and process intensification. It explores the mechanisms for developing high-performance heat transfer and mass transfer hybrid nanofluids. Beginning with thermophysical and optical properties enhancement of nanofluids, the book covers nanoparticle synthesis, stabilization techniques, and life-cycle assessment (LCA). Researchers, graduate students, and industry practitioners studying the advances in applications of nanofluids within mechanical and chemical engineering will find this book a useful resource.

Nanoscale Devices

From Electronics to Photonics

Edited by Arpan Deyasi , Angsuman Sarkar

Showcases experimental methods and/or analytical/numerical techniques to tackle barrier-overcoming difficulties with the application of nanoscale device technology. Covers nanodevice design and applications, taking into account correct computation complicated band structure, composition of the heterostructure system, and more specifically the technique of computation in the manufacturing of low-dimensional structures.

Natural Language Processing and Artificial Intelligence

A Perspective Towards Current Trends, Challenges, and Applications

Edited by Vikas Khullar , Aryan Chaudhary , Sunil Kumar

Focuses on natural language processing (NLP), artificial intelligence (AI), and allied areas, discussing theoretical work and advanced applications, approaches, and techniques for computational models of information and how they are presented by language (artificial, human, or natural in other ways). It looks at intelligent natural language processing and related models of thought, mental states, reasoning, and other cognitive processes. It also explores difficult problems and challenges related to partiality, under specification, and context-dependency, which are signature features of information in nature and natural languages.

New Dynamic Event-Triggered Fault Diagnosis, State Estimation and MPC for Complex Networked Systems

Xiongbo Wan , Zidong Wang Brunel Uni, UK, Min Wu

This book introduces four novel Dynamic Event-Triggered Mechanisms (DETMs) for complex networked systems that optimize resource utilization while preserving system performance. These include hybrid dynamic variables-dependent ETMs, hybrid adjusting variables-dependent ETMs, bounded dynamic variable/time-varying threshold-dependent ETMs and terminal constraint set-dependent mixed time/event-triggered mechanisms. It explores applications across fault diagnosis in networked systems, finite-time state estimation for complex dynamical networks, and MPC implementation. This book is aimed at graduate students and researchers in control systems, computer sciences, and signal processing.

Next-Generation Heat Pump Technology

Cold and Thermal Utilization Technology to Achieve Carbon Neutrality

Edited by Kiyoshi Saito Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan

Kiyoshi Saito, a leading heat pump researcher, provides a comprehensive guide to this technology and its related trends, issues, and policies. Using a solutions-driven approach, this book provides a roadmap for building carbon-neutral and recycling-oriented societies with the help of heat pump technology. This book is an essential guide for graduate and postgraduate students as well as consumers and corporate engineers in the field. It is also an invaluable resource for governments and civil-society organizations working towards the realization of a circular economy.

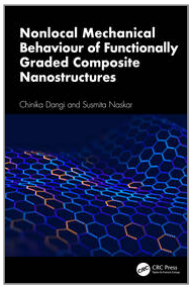
Nonlocal Mechanical Behaviour of Functionally Graded Composite Nanostructures



Chinika Dangi , Susmita Naskar Johns Hopkins University, MA, USA

This book delves into the unique properties and applications of functionally graded nanostructures, providing an in-depth understanding of the continuum theories that underpin these advanced materials. The authors explore both theoretical foundations and practical insights into the modeling and numerical simulations of the mechanical behavior of functionally graded materials and structures. By presenting a detailed and nuanced view of functionally graded nanostructures, this book equips readers in materials engineering and related fields with the knowledge and tools needed to understand the complex interactions and behaviors of these materials under various conditions.

Refining of Lignocellulosic Biomass to Bioenergy and Value-added Products

A Process Engineer's Perspective

Edited by M. Shyam Sunder , Sundergopal Sridhar Membrane Separation Group, Chemical Engineering Division, CSIR-Indian Institute of Chemical Technology, Hyderabad, India

This book covers different types of available lignocellulosic biomasses, their sources, characterization methodologies, and pre-treatment techniques to isolate lignin for making cellulose and hemicellulose available for saccharification to glucose. Various methods, including fermentation to obtain biofuel and value-added products from biomass, are also covered. The book delves into modern separation processes such as membrane technology that could facilitate sugar concentration, enzyme recycling, higher bioethanol yield, and treatment of bioprocess effluent. This book is aimed at researchers, professionals, graduate students in bioprocessing, chemical engineering, and biotechnology.

Fuzzy Sets and Triangular Norms

Aggregation in Decision-Aided Intelligent Systems

Edited by Mehmet Ünver , Gökhan Özçelik

Series: Intelligent Data-Driven Systems and Artificial Intelligence

This book is a comprehensive resource that covers theoretical foundations and practical applications of fuzzy sets, t-norms, and their integration into multi-attribute decision-making processes. It emphasizes the integration of fuzzy logic in various real-world applications such as healthcare, engineering, and environmental science. It further discusses advanced topics including hesitant fuzzy sets, interval-valued fuzzy sets, and emerging developments in fuzzy logic. It is primarily written for senior undergraduates, graduate students, and academic researchers in fields including engineering mathematics, industrial engineering, supply chain management, and applied mathematics.

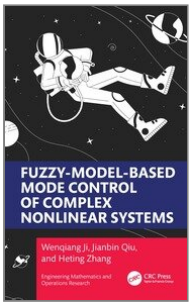
Fuzzy-Model-Based Mode Control of Complex Nonlinear Systems



Wenqiang Ji , Jianbin Qiu , Heting Zhang

Series: Engineering Mathematics and Operations Research

This book presents recent theoretical findings on Sliding Mode Control (SMC) issues for various classes of complex nonlinear systems based on Takagi-Sugeno (T-S) fuzzy models. Research results and controller design methods are presented and show how the methods can be used in various practical systems. This book finds its audience as a reference to researchers and engineers that are engaging in the areas related to fuzzy modeling and control and SMC with its applications.

Handbook of Industrial Engineering

Concepts, Tools, Case Studies, and Applications

Edited by Arturo Realyvásquez-Vargas Professor, Department of Industrial Engineering, Tecnológico Nacional de México, Instituto Tecnológico de Tijuana, México, Jorge Luis García-Alcaraz Research, Department of Industrial Engineering, Universidad Autónoma de Ciudad Juárez, México, Guadalupe Hernández-Escobedo Professor, Department of Industrial Engineering, Tecnológico Nacional de México, Instituto Tecnológico de Tijuana, México

Companies across all industries face operational challenges that impact their competitiveness. Industrial Engineering offers dynamic solutions through diverse concepts, methods, and tools designed to solve problems, streamline processes, and improve quality across sectors. This handbook presents current industrial engineering knowledge. This comprehensive handbook is tailored for practicing engineers, students, and consultants engaged in the field of Industrial Engineering, with a focus on quality, logistics, ergonomics, lean manufacturing, product design, and supply chain concepts, tools, case studies, and applications.

Sustainable Innovations and Performance of Organizations in the Age of Digitalization

Edited by Sonia Umair , Umair Waqas , Beata Mrugalska Poznan University of Technology, Poznan, Poland

Series: Industrial and Systems Engineering Series

The digital era leverages blockchain and IoT technologies to revolutionize sustainability by enabling real-time resource monitoring, reducing waste, and providing transparent supply chain verification. This book examines sustainability and organizational transformation through comprehensive analysis supported by tables, charts, and references, offering practical guidance for modern sustainable business practices. A valuable resource for students, graduates, educators, researchers, and professionals in logistics, supply chain management, green logistics, production, leadership, organization, sustainability, and digitalization.

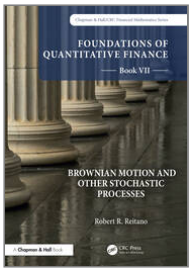
Foundations of Quantitative Finance, Book VII: Brownian Motion and Other Stochastic Processes



Robert R. Reitano

Series: Chapman and Hall/CRC Financial Mathematics Series

This is the seventh book in a set of ten published under the collective title of Foundations of Quantitative Finance. This book introduces and develops properties of Brownian motion, arguably the most famous of stochastic processes, as well as two other classes of stochastic processes: Markov processes and martingales. For some with more experience, this book will be the place to start in the series, while others will find that Books I-VI are a needed foundation. The book is for researchers and practitioners of quantitative finance.

Mastering Geometry Puzzles

Paulo Ferro

Series: AK Peters/CRC Recreational Mathematics Series

This book will challenge mathematical skills in a totally different way from the usual geometric puzzles. Across 5 chapters, there are 120 visually intriguing puzzles, each one corresponding to a level of difficulty, from the very easy to the very hard. There are different types of geometry puzzles in the book, such as simple shapes consisting of triangles and circles; puzzles shaped as objects such as a hamburgers or birds; and Japanese shape-based puzzles such as a samurai or bonsai. The puzzles are designed for beginners right through to more experienced puzzlers seeking a challenge. Solving these fun puzzles will enhance the reader's understanding of mathematics.

Prescriptions for Quant Traders Using R

Videos & Scripts

Jason Guevara , Oskars Linares

Unlock the full potential of quantitative trading with Prescriptions for Quant Traders Using R—a practical, hands-on guide for turning data into trading decisions. This book is written for quantitative traders, financial analysts, and data scientists who want more than theory. Organized into ten structured parts, it delivers step-by-step "prescriptions" using R—script-driven tasks that solve real-world trading problems. Each prescription is designed to be immediately actionable, so readers can move from concept to implementation without guesswork. What makes this book different is its clarity, utility, and its link to online video walk-throughs of R scripts.

A Second Course in Complex Analysis

Peter V. Dovbush , Steven G. Krantz Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri, USA

Series: Textbooks in Mathematics

Few other books purport to be a second course in complex analysis.This book differs in that it covers more modern topics and is more geometric in focus. Topics covered include: harmonic measure, extremal length, Riemann surfaces, uniformization, automorphism groups, the Schwarz lemma and its generalizations, analytic capacity, the Bergman theory, invariant metrics, Picard's theorem, and the boundary Schwarz lemma. A second course will benefit students and introduce these new topics that they might not otherwise experience. The goal is to expose the reader to unfamiliar parts of the subject of complex variables and perhaps to pique interest in further reading.

2ND EDITION

Convex Analysis

Steven G. Krantz Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri, USA

Series: Textbooks in Mathematics

This textbook, now in its second edition, introduces analytic tools for studying convexity and provides analytical applications of the concept. It includes a general background on classical geometric theory, revealing a glimpse of how modern mathematics is developed and how geometric ideas may be studied analytically. The book presents an analytic way to think about convexity theory. The reader with only a basic background in real analysis (and perhaps a little linear algebra) can get a lot out of this book. This book is a definitive introductory text to the concept of convexity in the context of mathematical analysis and a suitable resource for students and faculty alike.

2ND EDITION

Elements of Topology

Series: Textbooks in Mathematics

Now in its second edition, this book is an ambitious but optimistic treatment of the subject of topology. It gives an introduction to algebraic topology, a treatment of manifolds, a discussion of function spaces, some ideas of knot theory, a presentation of graph theory, and some ideas from dynamical systems. Even the exciting new topic of the Jones polynomial is covered. Topic coverage has been reduced in this new edition, and exercise sets have been added at the end of each section. Today's students need a text that speaks to them in their own language, and at a pace with which they are comfortable. That is the goal of this edition.

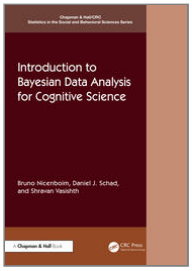
Introduction to Bayesian Data Analysis for Cognitive Science



Bruno Nicenboim Tilburg University, Netherlands, Daniel J. Schad Health & Medical University, Germany, Shravan Vasishth University of Potsdam, Germany

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Statistics in the Social and Behavioral Sciences

This book introduces Bayesian data analysis and Bayesian cognitive modeling to students and researchers in cognitive science (e.g., linguistics, psycholinguistics, psychology, computer science), with a particular focus on modeling data from planned experiments. The book relies on the probabilistic programming language Stan and the R package brms, which is a front-end to Stan. The book only assumes that the reader is familiar with the statistical programming language R, and has basic high school exposure to pre-calculus mathematics; some of the important mathematical constructs needed for the book are introduced in the first chapter.

Introduction to Machine Learning Algorithms

Basic Principles and Mathematics

Vinod Kumar Khanna

Mathematics is the foundation of machine learning algorithms. To understand the shortcomings of existing algorithms and develop more effective methods, it is essential to understand the mathematical concepts underlying these algorithms and their operational principles. This book serves as an introductory resource, outlining the preliminary concepts and offering insights into the mathematical foundations and operational mechanisms of machine learning algorithms. It describes the basic equations and interrelates the questions arising during practical applications of machine learning with the basic mathematical picture of the algorithms used.

Mining Complex Networks

Bogumił Kamiński , Paweł Prałat , François Théberge

Series: Advances in Applied Mathematics

This book concentrates on mining networks, a subfield within data science. The field has seen significant advancements since the first edition was published. Changes and updates to this edition include: new material and examples on random geometric graphs, new tools and techniques on mining hypergraphs, and a chapter on fairness in network mining models. Mining complex networks to understand the principles of the organization and behavior of such networks is crucial for a broad range of fields of study, including information and social sciences, economics, biology, and neuroscience. This book is suitable for an upper-year undergraduate course or a graduate course.

Real and Complex Analysis

Christopher Apelian , Steve Surace

Series: Textbooks in Mathematics

Now in it second edition, this unique book develops the subject of analysis organically, by presenting techniques and concepts that apply more generally to functions of various types. By considering these various function types together (real-valued functions of a single or several real variables, vector-valued functions of a single or several real variables, and complex functions), the student can better appreciate what is common to all of them, and what is distinctive to each. Now split into two volumes, other changes include more flexibility to instructors and 800 additional exercises in total, with both embedded and end-of-chapter supplementary exercises.

Survival Analysis

Principles and Applications in Clinical Trials and Beyond

Song Yang National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute, National Institutes of Health, Clarksburg, MD, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

Survival Analysis provides an up-to-date and reader-friendly account of topics progressing from the log-rank test, stratified analysis, and Cox regression to more advanced analyses. Heuristic arguments are used, leaving rigorous results to the appendices. The book dedicates separate chapters to critical topics like clinical trials basics, modeling and analysis for non-proportional hazards, testing and summarizing treatment effects, trial design and interim monitoring, and the analysis of terminal and non-terminal events. A separate chapter is also devoted to detailed martingale heuristics beyond what is typically offered in other texts.

Alpha Calculus

Svetlin G. Georgiev , Muhittin Evren Aydin

Readers may question why non-Newtonian calculus should be used when Newtonian calculus is already available and many scientists are familiar with it. This book attempts to answer this question, similar to why mathematicians use polar coordinates instead of Cartesian coordinates to represent points in a plane. Many other mathematical examples can also be given to demonstrate the advantages of using non-Newtonian calculus. This book provides researchers in any field with the opportunity to use a calculus that is compatible with an arithmetic system suited to their work.

Denis Rustand CEMSE, KAUST, Thuwal, Saudi Arabia, Janet van Niekerk CEMSE, KAUST, Thuwal, Saudi Arabia, Elias T. Krainski CEMSE, KAUST, Thuwal, Saudi Arabia, Håvard Rue

This book provides a comprehensive and practical guide to fitting complex Bayesian survival, longitudinal and joint models using the Integrated Nested Laplace Approximations (INLA) methodology, a powerful and computationally efficient alternative to traditional MCMC methods. Aimed at graduate students, researchers, and applied statisticians in biostatistics, epidemiology, and public health, this book addresses the critical challenge of analyzing high-dimensional and correlated data. It demonstrates how to move beyond the computational limitations of conventional methods, enabling the analysis of sophisticated models that were previously out of reach.

Complex Population Dynamics

Theory and Data

Shandelle M. Henson , Robert A. Desharnais , J. M. Cushing , Brian Dennis , R. F. Costantino

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Mathematical Biology Series

This book brings together over two decades of research and reflection on experimental nonlinear population dynamics. The broad theme is the interface of population data and mathematical models. The authors establish a cornerstone example of a low-dimensional mathematical population model for which quantitative predictions, often unexpected, were borne out in controlled and replicated experiments. The book offers an invaluable resource to professional ecologists and applied mathematicians. Although primarily a reference text, it is written to be accessible and engaging to a student audience and could be used as supplementary reading in an advanced ecological modeling class.

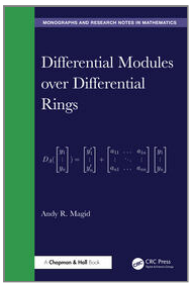
Differential Modules over Differential Rings



Andy R. Magid The University of Oklahoma, Norman, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Monographs and Research Notes in Mathematics

This book provides an introduction and reference for researchers in commutative and differential algebra and could be used as the basis for a graduate course or seminar. The book is best suited to an audience for whom the terminology of rings, modules, homomorphisms, and categories is already familiar. Although the topic is rooted in differential algebra, and the book should be of interest to workers in that area, no particular prior knowledge of differential algebra is assumed. When it is necessary to use specialized results from differential algebra, especially Picard—Vessiot theory, the necessary definitions and theorems are supplied.

Maps Preserving Products and Derivations

Advances in Algebraic Structures

Edited by Vahid Darvish , Nadeem ur Rehman Aligarh Muslim Uni, India, Mohd Arif Raza , Junaid Nisar

This volume explores the preservation properties of maps in complex algebraic structures. It covers semiprime rings, matrix algebras, and von Neumann algebras, focusing on the conditions that allow maps to preserve products and derivations, both linear and nonlinear. By exploring how these maps impact the structure and behaviour of rings and algebras, the book provides valuable insights into product preserving and derivation preserving maps, as well as their significance in the theory of algebraic symmetries.

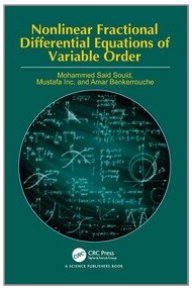
Nonlinear Fractional Differential Equations of Variable Order



Mohammed Said Souid , Mustafa Inc , Amar Benkerrouche

The book explores the theory and applications of fractional differential equations with variable order. It delves into the mathematical foundations, including notations, definitions, and key theorems, while also addressing practical applications in various fields. The book will guide readers from basic concepts to advanced topics, making it suitable for both researchers and graduate students in mathematics, engineering, and applied sciences. Each chapter includes illustrative examples and numerical applications to reinforce theoretical concepts. The book also emphasizes stability analysis and the use of fixed-point theorems in solving fractional differential equations.

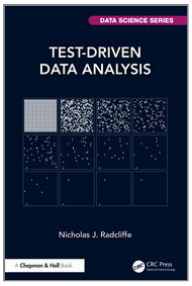
Test-Driven Data Analysis



Nicholas J. Radcliffe

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Data Science Series

Test-driven data analysis is the synthesis of ideas from test-driven development of software to data-intensive work including data science, data analysis, and data engineering. It is a methodology for improving the quality of data and of analytical pipelines and processes. It can be thought of as data analysis as if the answers actually matter. Extensive checklists are provided that can be used to improve quality before, during, and after analysis. Test-driven data analysis can be thought of as a sibling to reproducible research, with similar concerns, but greater emphasis on automated testing, and less requirement for a human to reproduce results.

What's the Question?

Deciding What You Really Want to Know

David J. Hand

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Data Science Series

Describes the challenges and pitfalls implicit in deciding what we want to know and what we want to do when using those tools, and thus how we can those tools effectively. The book is a guide to all statisticians and data scientists who are concerned with using their expertise to analyse data to obtain insights or to choose actions.

A Practical Guide to Integrating Generative AI into HR Management

Ketan Sanjay Desale , Soumi Majumder Sister Nivedita University, West Bengal, India

Series: Knowledge-based Engineering for Innovation

This book is a practical guide to integrating of generative AI into human resources, covering use cases across recruitment, onboarding, training, and retention. It covers AI-driven applications in talent acquisition, onboarding, employee engagement, career development, and decision-making, while addressing key concerns such as algorithmic bias, data privacy, and regulatory compliance. The book provides a structured approach to evaluating and integrating generative AI tools within HR systems. This book bridges the gap between AI technologies and HR operations to help organisations build agile, ethical, and employee-centric workplaces.

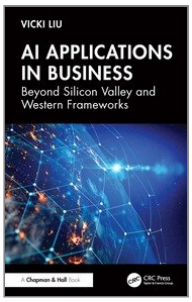
AI Applications in Business

Beyond Silicon Valley and Western Frameworks



Vicki Liu

This book offers a unique perspective on how ancient philosophies hold the key to AI success. From Chinese wu wei (effortless action) to Japanese kaizen (continuous improvement) to South African ubuntu (interconnectedness), time-tested wisdom offers powerful frameworks for navigating AI's promises and pitfalls. Whether you're a CEO, manager, or entrepreneur, this book provides cultural insights and practical frameworks you need to deploy AI thoughtfully, strategically, and successfully.

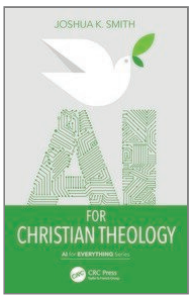
AI for Christian Theology



Joshua K. Smith

Series: AI for Everything

What if theology was never meant to be static? What happens when the act of faith is reimagined across generations, cultures, and now, code? How can diverse theological perspectives work together to build ethical AI? This book explores how AI offers a new lens for understanding faith, challenging communities to see theology as a dynamic, creative process rather than a static tradition. This book examines how Christianity itself is a tradition of reimagining and reinventing. From Scripture woven from fragments of law, prophecy, and poetry to Christ as the Logos made flesh, faith has always been transmitted, transformed, and re-voiced in response to new contexts.

AI for the Ordinary

A Non-technical Playbook for Citizens, Students, and Managers

Raghu Vijay Kowshik , Peter Jay Sorenson

AI for the Ordinary is a timely and accessible guide that demystifies artificial intelligence for everyday citizens and non-technical professionals. It makes a compelling case that AI is no longer the exclusive domain of coders and technologists – it is a civic, economic, and personal imperative. It shows how AI literacy is now essential for life and leadership in the 21st century. It is designed for students, professionals, and lifelong learners. It is ideal for business, public policy, and liberal arts programs seeking to integrate AI across the curriculum, and it supports corporate learning and executive education initiatives with a pragmatic, human-centered approach.

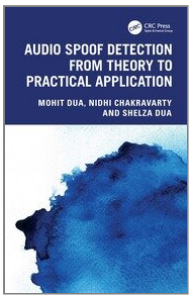
Audio Spoof Detection from Theory to Practical Application



Mohit Dua , Nidhi Chakravarty , Shelza Dua National Institute of Technology Kurukshetra, India

Audio Spoof Detection (ASD) systems play a pivotal role in evaluating whether the input speech signal has been manipulated by an imposter attempting unauthorized access to an authentic user's account or if it genuinely originates from the declared user. Primarily used for person authentication, these systems strive to verify the speaker's claimed identity. Despite substantial technological advancements, recent testing has revealed persistent vulnerabilities to spoofing, commonly referred to as a spoof attack.

Cognitive Security for Industrial IoT

AI-Driven Approaches to Industry 4.0

Edited by Sudan Jha CHRIST University, India, Vijender Kumar Solanki CMR Institute of Technology, India, Maurice E. Dawson Associate Prof., Illinois Tech, USA

Series: Internet of Everything (IoE)

Industry 4.0 has greatly enhanced the intricacy and interconnectedness of industrial operations. Industrial Internet of Things (IIoT) systems allow for smooth communication and collaboration among machines, devices, and sensors, leaves IIoT networks vulnerable to a wider array of cyber threats, requiring more advanced security protocols. This comprehensive resource explores cutting-edge trends and future prospects in IIoT security. Readers will find step-by-step guidelines and proven best practices for implementing cognitive security in industrial settings, providing both practitioners and organizations with ways to effectively combat evolving cyber threats.

Cumulative Effect

Cyber Security Guide for Directors and CEOs

Vladas Leonas

Series: Security, Audit and Leadership Series

Historically, cyber security was always a "poor relation" in the eyes of the majority of Boards and CEOs, considered inferior, less important, or not as well-regarded as other issues or compared to them and treated as an annoying cost centre requiring more and more money that could potentially have been spent "better" elsewhere. This is a result of inertia, a cumulative effect of multiple factors and, more importantly, a lack of understanding of how the landscape has changed in the last 25 or so years.

Ethical AI and Data Science

Building Trustworthy and Transparent Systems

Edited by Tereza Raquel Merlo , Jay Liebowitz Harrisburg University of Science and Technology, Pennsylvania, USA

Series: Data Analytics Applications

Responsible AI, particularly in Data Science, is an essential contribution to the Data Analytics Applications series, providing a comprehensive guide to the ethical and safety challenges in artificial intelligence (AI) and data science. This book offers a balanced approach to understanding the complex ethical dilemmas, regulatory frameworks, and practical solutions for responsible AI deployment, and a timely reflection on how it affect business and decision-making. By bridging the gap between theory and application, it equips industry professionals, researchers, and policymakers with the tools to develop and implement AI systems that are ethical, transparent, and safe.

Fire Brigades to Firewalls

A Public Safety Guide to Cybersecurity

John Kuforiji

Series: Security, Audit and Leadership Series

Fire Brigades to Firewalls: A Public Safety Guide To Cybersecurity is written by John Kuforiji, a seasoned cybersecurity strategist, educator, and advocate. The book's core message is that cybersecurity isn't scary—it's learnable, visual, and even fun. Kuforiji, who has over 15 years of experience and holds certifications like CISSP and CCSP , seeks to bridge the gap between complex cybersecurity principles and everyday experiences. The book simplifies digital defense by drawing on analogies from public safety—ranging from fire prevention to neighborhood watch—to explain how everyday safety principles can defend the digital frontier.

Game AI Uncovered

Volume Five

Edited by Paul Roberts

Game AI Uncovered: Volume Five continues the series with another collection of chapters from twenty-three of the top game AI professionals and researchers, from around the world. Each chapter includes wisdom, ideas, tips and tricks that were used in the development of video games. Beginners to the area of game AI, along with professional developers, will find a wealth of knowledge that will not only help in the development of their own games but will spark ideas for new approaches.

This book lays a systematic foundation for professionals, researchers, and industry readers who are interested the applications and implications of generative AI for cybersecurity. It covers the latest advances in generative AI and its applications, risks, and opportunities in cybersecurity. The contents of this book are appropriate for a wide range of readers from general readers to industry experts and scientists. Because it bridges the gap between generative AI and cybersecurity, experts from both fields will benefit from the information presented within. Students with a background in either area will also benefit from the approach that leads from general to specific applications.

Generative AI for Remote Sensing of the Environment

Algorithms and Applications

Edited by Vishakha Sood Scientist (IIT) Ropar, Punjab, Arun Lal Srivastav Chitkara University, Ravneet Kaur Chandigarh Univeristy, Neha Bhati AVN Innovations

This book explores the cutting-edge integration of generative AI techniques to enhance environmental remote sensing, providing a comprehensive guide from foundational algorithms to practical applications. It explains how advanced AI technology can be used to improve the way we monitor and understand the environment from a distance, such as through satellites or drones. It starts with an explanation of basic algorithms behind generative AI and gradually moves to complex algorithms showing how they can be applied to real-world environmental issues, such as tracking climate change, monitoring deforestation, and predicting natural disasters.

How to Thrive in the Games Industry

The Long Game

Harvey Newman

This book is a candid, practical, and inspiring look at building a sustainable, fulfilling career in game development. Drawing on over twenty years of experience across AAA studios and indie teams, Harvey Newman shares the real lessons learned from inside the trenches—covering everything from breaking into the industry to navigating layoffs, leadership challenges, studio politics, and burnout. The book is written for game developers of all levels: students, juniors seeking their first role, mid-level professionals trying to grow, and veterans aiming to stay motivated and adaptable in a fast-changing field.

2ND EDITION

Pattern Language for Game Design

Christopher Barney

Christopher Barney's Pattern Language for Game Design builds on the revolutionary work of architect Christopher Alexander to show students, teachers, and game development professionals how to derive best practices in all aspects of game design. Using a series of practical exercises, designers can observe and analyze the failures and successes of the games they know and love to find the deep patterns that underlie good design. From an in-depth look at Alexander's work to a critique of pattern theory in various fields, to a new approach that challenges your knowledge and puts it to work, this book seeks to transform how we view building interactive experiences.

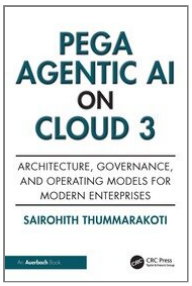
Pega Agentic AI on Cloud 3

Architecture, Governance, and Operating Models for Modern Enterprises



Sairohith Thummarakoti

This book discusses agentic AI in architecture, governance, and operations. Agents are presented as services with defined service level objectives (SLOs), budgets, controls, and responsible parties. The text provides guidance on implementing these principles in practice.It also explores how Pega Cloud 3 leverages Google Cloud Platform (GCP) and Amazon Web Services (AWS) to build scalable Software as a Service (SaaS) platforms. It explains the architecture of Pega Cloud 3, its Kubernetes-based pod structure, and how it differs from Pega Cloud 2. It provides readers with insights into microservices and their impact on application performance

Perceptive Machines

The Future of Feeling AI and What It Means for Humanity

Rocky Scopelliti

This book offers a compelling look into the future of artificial intelligence, where AI systems are no longer limited to just processing information, but can perceive the world through synthetic senses. The author explores how this shift from purely cognitive AI to embodied sensory experiences is blurring the lines between human and machine intelligence. It's a deep dive into how multisensory AI, powered by breakthroughs in areas like haptics and neural interfaces, will fundamentally alter what it means to experience, connect, and ultimately, to be human.

The Z Garbage Collector

In JDK 25

Erik Österlund

This book explains how the Z Garbage Collector was designed, why it was designed this way, the common pitfalls to avoid when using ZGC in JDK 25 and how to get useful information from the garbage collector. The book goes into detail and covers core algorithm concepts of ZGC, as well as showing how all of this works. It explains how the JVM evolved certain features to be able to accommodate ZGC, and covers the importance of each of the various GC heuristics and how they function. With a unique angle right between academia and industry, this book is useful for computer science students and Java developers alike.

Uncertain Data Analysis

Fuzzy Vector Algorithms

Sansanee Auephanwiriyakul

This book studies different classification, detection and decision fusion algorithms, and helps practitioners deal with uncertainty in their data sets. Data uncertainties are considered as a collection of linguistic / fuzzy vectors, or a vector of fuzzy numbers and fuzzy algorithms are used to analyze these data sets. There are many theories and applications developed based on fuzzy set theory. This book serves as a guide for practitioners, such as robotics engineers, computer scientists and researchers working on computational intelligence. It is also suitable for graduate courses on fuzzy theories and fuzzy techniques.

2ND EDITION

Exploratory Data Analysis Using R

Ronald K. Pearson GeoVera Holdings, Inc., CA, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Data Mining and Knowledge Discovery Series

Exploratory Data Analysis Using R provides a classroom-tested introduction to exploratory data analysis (EDA), and this revised edition is accompanied by the R package ExploreTheData. The primary focus is on identifying "interesting" features - good, bad, and ugly - in a dataset, why it is important to find them, how to treat them, and the use of R to explore and explain datasets and the analysis results derived from them. The book is designed for both advanced undergraduate, entry-level graduate students, and working professionals with little to no prior experience. Exercises conclude most chapters, and an instructor's solution manual is available.

Fundamentals of Quantum Computing

Solving Problems with Quantum Algorithms and Practical Qiskit Coding

Kaveh Bashiri

This book provides a practical guide to solving problems with quantum algorithms and hands-on Qiskit coding. It introduces the theoretical foundations of quantum computing in a concise and accessible way, enabling readers to quickly grasp the essentials and apply them to real-world programming tasks.

Python for Accounting and Finance

A Mind-Mapping Approach

Michael Xin Guo

Python for Accounting and Finance is an innovative textbook written for accounting and finance students and professionals with no prior coding experience. It introduces Python programming through a mind mapping approach that presents complex concepts in a clear and structured way to support understanding and retention. The book is organised into four parts: Python Basics, Data Analysis and Visualisation, Automation, and Machine Learning. Enhanced with Google Colab notebooks, this book creates a highly supportive learning experience, equipping students of accounting and finance with essential programming skills for their speciality.

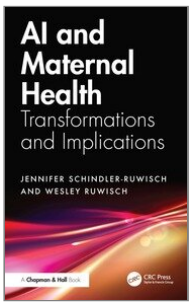
AI and Maternal Health

Transformations and Implications



Jennifer Schindler-Ruwisch , Wesley Ruwisch

This book engages with complex questions about how AI can complement or supplement the work of healthcare providers. It draws on the latest data and research to explore AI's role across a range of med-tech applications, including chatbots, electronic medical records, virtual coaching, and social media. Through evidence-based analysis, it considers how these technologies might prevent maternal morbidity and mortality, and promote health equity. The book also takes a carefully balanced approach, acknowledging the risks of AI - such as algorithmic bias - and evaluates when and how AI is most or least effective in meeting patient needs.

AI for Time Series

Volume 1: Unlocking Patterns with Deep Learning

Edited by Min Wu , Emadeldeen Eldele , Zhenghua Chen , Shirui Pan , Qingsong Wen , Xiaoli Li

This book provides a thorough exploration of the latest innovations in AI for general time series analysis, distribution shift and foundation models. It offers an in-depth look at cutting-edge techniques and methodologies, using advance algorithms that are transforming time series analysis across industries. The book can be used as a supplementary reading for graduate students taking advanced topics/seminars on advanced deep learning and foundation models.

Artificial Intelligence for Cancer Diagnosis and Treatment in Africa

Wasswa Shafik

This book discusses the recent development of the integration of artificial intelligence (AI) and digital health technologies within oncology care systems across Africa. It investigates how data-driven technologies, including machine learning, natural language processing (NLP), telehealth, and mobile health (mHealth), can transform cancer detection, diagnosis, treatment, survivorship, and palliative care in African settings. The book addresses epidemiological, infrastructural, ethical, and implementation challenges, offering practical insights into applying AI and digital innovations to oncology care.

Before, After, and Beyond AlphaGo

Woosuk Park

This book is a unique exploration designed for both philosophers and Baduk (Go, Weiqi) players, bridging two worlds that rarely intersect. AlphaGo, the groundbreaking AI, has been both a challenge and a revelation for these communities. As someone who belongs to both groups, the author feels a profound responsibility to connect them and share insights that resonate across disciplines. This book is not just for philosophers or Go players—it is for anyone seeking to understand the profound implications of AI on human thought, interaction, and the future of our species.

Contemporary Animation Research in Spain

Edited by Maria Pagès

This book emerges from the pressing need to consolidate animation studies within the Spanish academic landscape. While Spain boasts a thriving animation industry, recognized globally for its creative output and economic impact, scholarly engagement with this dynamic field remains relatively underdeveloped. This volume addresses this gap by mapping the current state of animation studies in Spain, evaluating existing research, and fostering new synergies among scholars. This book will be of great interest to all those learning and researching within the field of animation.

Generative Adversarial Networks for Cybersecurity:

Protecting Data and Networks

Edited by E. Chandra Blessie , Pethuru Raj , B. Sundaravadivazhagan

This book explores the application of diversified generative adversarial network (GAN) models in the fields of intrusion detection, anomaly detection, and cybercrime. It covers the cybersecurity concept and discusses how GANs can be smartly applied to pinpoint vulnerabilities, viruses, malware, and security attacks. The book explores how GAN-based security systems help to detect cyber threats and how advanced GANs can be realized by seamlessly interacting with other digital technologies, such as the Internet of Things (IoT), cloud-native computing, edge analytics, serverless technology, and blockchain. It also discusses GAN-based security's ethical and privacy concerns.

Handbook of Security, Quantum Computing and Internet of Things (IoT)

Edited by Usha Jain , Anu Sayal , Anchit Bijalwan

The Handbook of Security, Quantum Computing, and Internet of Things explores the critical intersection of IoT, security, and quantum technologies. As IoT devices multiply, ensuring robust protection has become urgent. The book begins with IoT security standards, highlighting vulnerabilities and strategies like SQL Injection Defence (SQLi-DS). It addresses architectural challenges and stresses adaptive frameworks to withstand evolving cyber threats. The role of AI and ML in strengthening IoT security is emphasized, including hybrid ML-based attack prevention and IP reputation validation in isolated networks.

AI, Data Analytics and Digital Transformation

Edited by Abejide Ade-Ibijola University of Johannesburg, Solomon Oyelere , Jude Osakwe

Series: Artificial Intelligence, Data Analytics, and Digital Transformation for Sustainable Development in Africa

This book explores how AI, blockchain, and machine learning are transforming industries, particularly in Africa. It addresses how these technologies can drive sustainable development, improve governance, and solve challenges in sectors like education, agriculture, and finance. With practical examples, it provides insights into their potential while discussing risks such as cybersecurity and data privacy. Machine Learning for Healthcare Informatics

Techniques and Applications

Edited by Nazmul Siddique University of Ulster, Magee, UK, Mohammad Shamsul Arefin , Mohammad Abu Yousuf , M. Shamim Kaiser Institute of Information Technology, Jahangirnagar University, Bangladesh

This book explores how advanced machine learning techniques are transforming healthcare, highlighting innovative applications in disease diagnosis, treatment, and healthcare management. It shows that adaptation of machine learning can bring significant benefits for the sustainability of healthcare informatics in the era of 4.0 IR. With contributions from researchers and field experts, the book covers key topics such as predictive analytics, medical image processing, and personalized healthcare. Designed for those seeking to apply machine learning in healthcare and to advance healthcare informatics, this book is a valuable resource for researchers, professionals, and students.

Metaverse Datafication

Technologies, Definitions, and Futures

Edited by Chris Hesselbein , Paolo Bory , Stefano Canali

This book explores the most pressing questions and concerns that are emerging in tandem with the development of metaverse platforms and technologies. It focuses on the central question of how the gallop towards 'bigger' and 'richer' data will extend and intensify current drives towards datafication and commodification. The essays combine conceptual reflection on as well as empirical engagement with the topic of metaverse datafication and its political, infrastructural, and social implications.

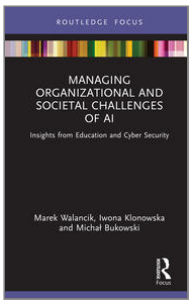
Managing Organizational and Societal Challenges of AI

Insights from Education and Cyber Security



Marek Walancik , Iwona Klonowska , Michał Bukowski

The book looks at how AI, IoT and Big Data are changing the way security is managed, what risks the new technologies pose, and how education should adapt to effectively prepare society for the changes ahead. Presenting real-world use cases of AI in education and emergency management, it discusses both the positive examples and the limitations of the technology and shows what challenges need to be solved for AI to truly support security and education. The book presents key findings and suggested actions that can help state, educational and private institutions to use AI effectively, while minimizing the associated risks.

Mitigating the Risks of AI Deepfakes

Edited by Tarek Moulahi , Malka N. Halgamuge , Pascal Lorenz

Artificial intelligence (AI) has become deeply embedded in modern life, with autonomous systems now controlling many crucial functions in healthcare, transportation, and industry. However, the incredible power of AI also enables new forms of manipulation, deception, and harm. In our proposed book "Safeguarding Our Digital Future: Mitigating the Risks of AI Deepfakes," the chapters explore the dark side of AI and its dangerous implications for human wellbeing.

Medical Internet of Things

Perspectives, Impact and Challenges

Edited by Shabnam Kumari , Amit Kumar Tyagi

The potential of MIoT to revolutionize healthcare is vast, offering unprecedented opportunities for improved patient care and operational efficiency. As MIoT continues to evolve, balancing innovation with privacy and security will be crucial to fostering trust, ensuring compliance, and maximizing the benefits of this technology in healthcare.

Next-Generation Smart Cities

The Integration of AI, Blockchain, IoT and Emergent Networks

Mahmoud Elkhodr

This book offers a forward-looking analysis of emerging technologies converging in next-generation smart cities, examining both their opportunities and challenges. The audience for this book includes doctoral and master's students in computer science, electrical engineering, urban planning, and related fields who are investigating how technologies such as AI, blockchain, IoT, and advanced communications can address complex urban challenges.

Quantum Artificial Intelligence

Technologies, Algorithms and Programming

Edited by Deepika Ghai , Suman Lata Tripathi LPU, India , Ramandeep Sandhu , Sardar M. N. Islam (Naz)

This book explores the transformative potential of Quantum computing in artificial intelligence and its impact on various fields. It delves into the foundational concepts, mathematical frameworks, and algorithmic paradigms, providing a roadmap for interdisciplinary research of Quantum computing in artificial intelligence. With a focus on practical applications and prospects, this book bridges the gap between theory and practice, empowering readers to harness the transformative power of quantum technologies for societal and technological advancement. It is a reference work for academics, scholars, and researchers interested in Quantum computing in artificial intelligence.

Quantum Computing

Research, Applications, and Advances

Edited by Arun Sekar Rajasekaran , Suganyadevi S. , Fadi Al-Turjman Near East Uni., Nicosia

Series: Innovations in Intelligent Internet of Everything (IoE)

The book offers a comprehensive overview of quantum mechanics principles that form the basis of quantum computing, simplifying complex concepts like superposition, entanglement, and quantum gates for readers of all backgrounds. Through clear language, it ensures that even newcomers can grasp the fundamentals. Covering everything from foundational principles to cutting-edge research, the book examines the race for quantum supremacy, scalable hardware, and the latest breakthroughs. It also explores practical applications in cryptography, optimization, and drug discovery, bridging theory and practice for both beginners and experts.

Quantum Computing for Multimedia Processing, Teleportation, and Secure Networks

Edited by Ahmed A. Abd El-Latif EIAS Data Science Lab, College of Computer and Information Sciences, Prince Sultan University, Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, Abdallah Slaoui , Xianhua Song

Series: CRC Press Series on Quantum Information Processing and Computing

Quantum Computing for Multimedia Processing, Teleportation, and Secure Networks offers a comprehensive exploration of quantum-enhanced technologies across multimedia, communication, and cryptography. Bridging foundational theory with cutting-edge applications, this book systematically addresses how quantum computing transforms classical approaches to data representation, transmission, and security. By leveraging the unique properties of quantum mechanics—such as superposition, entanglement, and no-cloning—this work provides scalable solutions to challenges in computational complexity, secure transmission, and robust multimedia systems.

Quantum Machine Learning

Concepts, Algorithms, and Applications

Edited by Syed Nisar Hussain Bukhari

The book explores quantum computing's transformative impact on artificial intelligence and machine learning. This book provides a roadmap to understanding how such quantum principles as superposition and entanglement can enhance learning algorithms and processing. Beyond theoretical knowledge, the book emphasizes practical implementation and offers code samples and real-world case studies. Readers are guided through hands-on projects in fields ranging from healthcare to finance, where quantum machine learning is poised to make significant contributions.

Real-Time Artificial Intelligence (AI)

Key Motivations, Technologies, Platforms, and Use Cases

Edited by Pethuru Raj , B. Sundaravadivazhagan , V. Kavitha , B. Narendra Kumar Rao , Hannah Vijaykumar

Discusses how real-time artificial intelligence services and applications are indispensable for setting up and sustaining real-time enterprises, using historical as well as runtime data to extract actionable insights in the needed time, leading to real-time insights. It explains the trends and transitions happening in the AI space and how those innovations are being used for bringing in real transformation in the cybersecurity space. Chapters showcase the applications of real-time artificial intelligence in diverse sectors with a variety of case studies. The book explores the future of AI-powered applications in chatbots, evaluates the role of AI in digital transformation, and more.

Redefining Auditing in the Digital Era

Global Perspectives on Technology, Security, and Leadership

Edited by Abdelmounim Bouziane

Series: Security, Audit and Leadership Series

Redefining Auditing in the Digital Era: Global Perspectives on Technology, Security, and Leadership explores how digital transformation is reshaping the audit profession across industries and regions. This book brings together leading scholars and practitioners to examine the interplay between emerging technologies, organizational governance, cybersecurity, and the evolving role of auditors in a world increasingly driven by data and automation. Through a series of empirical studies, theoretical analyses, and case-based insights, the book provides a comprehensive understanding and other digital tools are influencing audit methodologies.

Research Advances in Intelligent Computing

Edited by Anshul Verma Banaras Hindu University, India, Pradeepika Verma IIT (BHU), India

As computers and intelligent machines evolve at an unprecedented pace, the quest to replicate human intelligence in software and systems has become a defining challenge of our time. Research Advances in Intelligent Computing: Volume 3 explores this dynamic field, where artificial intelligence (AI) and computational models converge to create systems capable of learning, reasoning, and problem-solving. Drawing inspiration from human cognition, intelligent computing (IC) integrates AI techniques such as machine learning, neural networks, deep learning, evolutionary algorithms, and swarm intelligence to build adaptive, efficient, and autonomous systems.

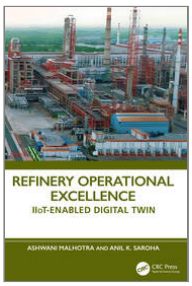
Refinery Operational Excellence

IIoT-Enabled Digital Twin



Ashwani Malhotra , Anil K. Saroha

Refineries face challenges in improving energy efficiency, crude availability, and process safety, with excessive energy use being difficult to address. This book examines the integration of Chemical Engineering principles with Industrial Internet of Things (IIoT) technologies, such as AI and ML, to optimize refinery operations. Organized into four sections—Introduction, Equipment Twin, Instrumentation, and Refinery Applications. It highlights the use of digital tools and engineering fundamentals to enhance equipment design and operational efficiency. It targets graduate students, researchers in chemical engineering including refinery professionals.

Integrative Approach to Fungal Infections and Bioprospecting for Drug Discovery

Series: Medicinal Plants and Natural Products for Human Health

Research into plant-based antifungals offers a viable alternative to discover potent, eco-friendly, and sustainable treatments. Natural antifungal compounds offer a promising solution, as they tend to have fewer side effects and reduced risk of resistance development compared to synthetic alternatives.This book delves into the application of metagenomics in identifying and harnessing the microbial communities associated with medicinal plants. By integrating bioprospecting techniques with cutting-edge genomic technologies, this work opens up promising new avenues to provide insights into the potential of natural products for developing novel antifungal therapies.

Medicinal Properties and Molecular Mechanisms of Thai Traditional Herbs

Edited by James M. Brimson FAHS, Chulalongkorn University, Thailand, Tewin Tencomnao Chulalongkorn University, Ciro Isidoro Dept. of Health Sciences, UPO, Italy

Series: Natural Products Chemistry of Global Plants

With a focus on the unique cultural and ecological of aspects of Thailand, this latest title in the popular series, Natural Products Chemistry of Global Plants, offers invaluable insights for researchers and healthcare professionals interested in exploring the potential of Thai herbal medicines in the broader context of global health and wellness. It also appeals to individuals seeking natural and traditional alternatives to modern medicine. The book provides a bridge between the modern pharmacology and the traditional medicinal practices, thereby bringing Thai traditional herbal medicines into the mainstream, while giving a critical explanation of their efficacy and safety.

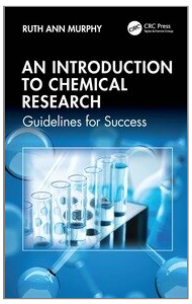
An Introduction to Chemical Research

Guidelines for Success



Ruth Ann Murphy

This user-friendly student text presents a comprehensive and novel approach to preparation for chemical research. It can be adopted as a textbook for research courses, but also for individual study. Useful details such as ordering supplies and dealing with granting foundations are included. Even working with maintenance crews is discussed. The text saves research directors valuable time in the development of courses and it even highlights foundational material with examples and case studies from the research world. It serves as the 'go-to' text and first resource in the exciting field of chemical research.

8TH EDITION

An Introduction to Radiation Protection

Alan Martin , Sam Harbison Health & Safety Consultant, Kent, UK, Karen Beach , Peter Cole

The eighth edition of this book continues to cover the technical principles underlying the control of radiation hazards, radiation detection and measurement and the biological effects of radiation, followed by a consideration of industry-specific radiation protection issues. Specialised topics include risk assessment, waste management and radiological emergencies. A highly-readable account of the nature of the hazards presented by ionizing radiations and the methods of protection against such hazards, the book is an ideal introductory text for those new to the field, and for the non-specialist, and a useful ready reference for more experienced radiation protection professionals.

This volume provides information about herb-drug interactions that may arise as a result of the increasing interest in medicinal plants or herbal products and the concomitant use of conventional drugs. Medicinal plant-drug interactions are inevitable, especially when the elderly use medicinal plant products in addition to polypharmacy. Concurrent consumption of herbal products and conventional drugs is a serious concern. Over-the-counter herbal drug's doses can inhibit the metabolism of conventional drugs, increasing plasma levels of the drug. This book highlights evidence on herb-drug interactions from a systematic review, providing rapid access to information on their clinical use.

Handbook of Visual Optics, Volume One

Fundamentals and Eye Optics

Edited by Pablo Artal

This new edition of the Handbook of Visual Optics, Volume One, provides an authoritative and up-to-date overview of physiological optics. It spans the field from the physical foundations of light propagation in the eye to the biological and perceptual mechanisms underlying human vision. Building on the success of the first edition, this volume has been updated and expanded to reflect major advances in understanding the optical properties of the eye, visual performance, and fundamental measurement methods.This first volume establishes the essential basis for the companion Volume Two, which addresses ophthalmic instrumentation and applications.

2ND EDITION

Handbook of Visual Optics, Volume Two

Instrumentation and Vision Correction

Edited by Pablo Artal

This new edition of the Handbook of Visual Optics, Volume Two, presents an authoritative survey of modern ophthalmic instrumentation, vision-correction technologies, and the optical foundations of visual performance. Building upon the theoretical framework established in Volume One, it explores the science and technology of advanced imaging systems, laser-based diagnostics, adaptive-optics platforms, and surgical and corrective devices, that have transformed clinical practice over the past decade.It integrates contributions from leading experts across optics, engineering, and vision science.

Hybridisation of Renewable Energy

Edited by Subhasis Roy , Asit Baran Biswas

This book addresses the burgeoning need for innovative and sustainable approaches to energy generation. It aims to bridge the gap between theoretical advancements and practical applications in renewable energy by leveraging hybrid engineering techniques. Topics covered include solar hybrid systems and energy storage; hybrid systems for smart grids; hybrid thermochemical renewable energy conversion; hybrid biochemical renewable energy conversion; and energy storage. Case studies are supplied throughout, and other important factors such as economic impact are also briefly discussed. This book will be of interest to environmental physicists, engineers, and environmental scientists.

Modelling Practical Problems in Complex Systems

Simulation, Forecasting and Management

Hugo Fort

Navigating complexity requires a unified mathematical framework that moves beyond traditional linear models. This book provides that essential toolkit, offering a robust, interdisciplinary approach to simulation, forecasting, and management across engineering, economic, and environmental fields. This book is an indispensable resource for researchers, quantitative analysts, and advanced students in complexity science, evolutionary economics, quantitative finance, and ecological modeling. It provides the theoretical depth and practical, data-driven methods necessary to analyze and manage the world's most challenging complex systems.

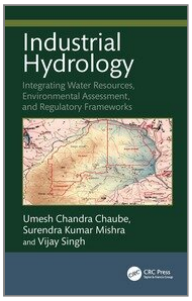
Industrial Hydrology

Integrating Water Resources, Environmental Assessment, and Regulatory Frameworks



Umesh Chandra Chaube , Surendra Kumar Mishra , Vijay Singh

Industrial Hydrology serves as a comprehensive reference designed to bridge the knowledge gap between traditional hydrology and the specific water-related challenges of industrial development. The book serves multiple stakeholders involved in industrial site infrastructure development, including regulatory agencies, hydrologists, pollution control authorities, and those in affected communities. It provides essential knowledge on regulatory requirements for establishing and operating water-dependent industries, with particular focus on environmental flow assessments, water supply regulations, and monitoring of hydro-environmental impacts during construction and operation.

Handbook of Digitalization and Big Data in the Water Sector

International Case Studies (Volume 3)

Edited by Tonni Agustiono Kurniawan , Abdelkader Anouzla Hassan II University, Morocco

This 3-volume set delves into the intersection of cutting-edge technology and environmental science to address pressing challenges in the water sector and develop digitalization solutions that can have practical implementation in decision making and management of wastewater treatment. Volume 3 pursues real-world applications in water supply, wastewater treatment and flood management through a host of diverse and well-researched case studies. Ideal for water engineers, researchers, policymakers, and sustainability practitioners, this handbook serves as an essential guide for professionals and is equally valuable for graduate students, academics, and technology innovators.

Nanotechnology and Emerging Contaminants in Drinking Water

Advanced Solutions for Purification

Edited by Sesan Abiodun Aransiola , Yakubu Alli , Kondakindi Venkateswar Reddy , Naga Raju Maddela Uni. College of Eng. Sci. and Tech, India

This book delves into the cutting-edge application of nanotechnology for the detection, removal, and degradation of emerging contaminants in drinking water. It covers a wide range of nanomaterials detailing their synthesis, functionalization, and deployment in water treatment processes. It presents case studies and pilot projects that demonstrate the scalability of these technologies, providing valuable insights into the challenges and opportunities associated with integrating nanomaterials into existing water infrastructure. This book is aimed at graduate students and researchers in environmental and chemical engineering, and water treatment.

Nature-based Solutions and Circularity Perspectives in the Built Environment

Multidisciplinary Approaches

Edited by Hasan Saygın , Hasan Volkan Oral , Kaveh Dehghanian , Tevfik Denizhan MüftüoĞlu

The main purpose of this book is to examine the applications of nature-based solutions (NBS) and circularity in the built environment from a multidisciplinary perspective, but with a focus on energy, civil, and environmental engineering. This book is important reading for researchers and professionals in civil engineering, water engineering, coastal engineering, sustainable infrastructure design and urban planning.

Rivers Beyond Borders

Environmental Sustainability in South Asia's Transboundary Waters

Edited by Mehebub Sahana Dept. of Geography, University of Manchester, UK

This book explores the intricate challenges and potential solutions in managing transboundary rivers in South Asia, a densely populated and ecologically diverse region. It examines the significant impacts of population growth, climate change, and political conflicts on transboundary river basins, posing substantial risks to large areas. The book highlights the critical need for multi-sectoral, multidisciplinary, and cross-country perspectives to formulate collaborative policies that support sustainable development goals. Through specific case studies, the book addresses hydro-politics and flood hazards in countries like India, China, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, and Bangladesh.

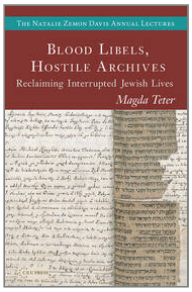
Blood Libels, Hostile Archives

Reclaiming Interrupted Jewish Lives



Magda Teter

Series: The Natalie Zemon Davis Annual Lectures Series - CEU Press

This book explores how scholars can recover glimpses of ordinary Jewish lives from hostile archives—archival evidence created explicitly to manufacture malicious tales against Jews—which may be the only remaining records documenting Jewish existence in certain places. The work examines two towns, Trent in northern Italy and Sandomierz in eastern Poland, both sites of anti-Jewish blood libels (in 1475 and 1698/1710 respectively), where extensive archives from the persecutors remain and the legacies of these false accusations continue to reverberate today despite neither town having an existing Jewish population.

Women and the Environment in the Long Nineteenth Century, 1775–1925

Volume IV: Science, Medicine, and Natural History

Edited by Jillmarie Murphy Union College, USA

This volume features a variety of primary sources by nineteenth-century women from around the globe, whose work focuses on the varied interconnections between gender and the environment. The collection considers the role women writers and artists in the long-nineteenth century that have played in the areas of natural history. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this volume will be of great interest to students and scholars of Women's History and Environmental History.

Physical Disability and Deformity in Nineteenth-Century Britain

Edited by Claire L. Jones

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

Throughout the nineteenth century, Britain witnessed a remarkable transformation in the ways in which individuals with physical impairments experienced the world and the ways in which they were perceived, treated, and represented. Offering historical primary sources that outline both medical and experiential perspectives of physical disability, this volume provides frequently mentioned but rarely provided documents, ranging from medical accounts, personal testimony, literary representation, advertisements, ephemera, and images.

Nineteenth-Century British Perspectives on Spanish America

Volume II: Enterprise and Exploration

Edited by Marisa Palacios Knox

The sources in this volume concentrates on British investments in Latin America including new opportunities for tourism. Excerpts from the narratives of British entrepreneurs provide insight into the heady speculative and exploratory enthusiasm of these individuals, and the ensuing disappointments of many of their commercial schemes. Accounts of expeditions in pursuit of the "El Dorado" legend overlap with examples from the genre of travel narratives, including writings from the "wild women travellers" in Latin America who were able to capitalize on their tourist experiences in the literary marketplace.

Celebrating the 25th Anniversary of Routledge Classics

The Routledge Classics series was launched in 2001, taking the cream of Routledge's prestigious backlist and presenting it to a new generation of readers.

It now includes over three hundred titles and has sold over three million copies. It is proud to contain some of the most innovative, ground-breaking and important books of modern times; books that are, by popular consent, classics in their field.

In 2026 we are delighted to celebrate the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the Routledge Classics series, with new titles by Patricia Hill Collins, Jacques Derrida, Paul Preston and Karl Popper. All include new Forewords, Prefaces or Introductions.

A Routledge Classic inspires, challenges and educates in equal measure and can be read by anyone.

We hope you enjoy this selection of exciting new titles to mark the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the series.

> It's a remarkable series. These are the books that helped shape the intellectual life of the 20th century.
> – Al Alvarez

> Routledge Classics is more than just a collection of texts...it embodies and circulates challenging ideas and keeps vital debates current and alive.
>
> – Hilary Mantel
