Emancipation and Vocational Education: Skills, Bildung and the Subject

Edited by Bill Esmond University of Derby, UK, Johannes K. Schmees Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Norway, Volker Wedekind University of Nottingham, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Vocational Education

This book challenges the economic neoliberal rationale for vocational education by drawing critically on emancipatory theoretical approaches, especially a body of German theory neglected almost entirely by contemporary accounts. This book will be of interest to scholars, postgraduate students, and researchers involved in vocational, technical, professional and adult education, the theory of education, and more broadly the economisation of education under neoliberalism. With potential to reframe debates concerning specific approaches to VET that can be applied in the global South, the book has undoubted international appeal.

Creating Equitable Literacy Learning Environments

A Transformative Model

Helen Adam Edith Cowan University, Australia

This groundbreaking book introduces the Model for Equitable Literacy Learning Environments (MELLE), a comprehensive framework that integrates evidence-based instruction with culturally responsive pedagogy to create truly equitable learning environments for all children. The author examines how three key dimensions – quality instruction, opportunity to read, and authentic representation in reading materials – must work together within supportive cultural and community contexts. Moving beyond polarised literacy debates, this book is a must-read for educators seeking practical solutions to create equitable learning environments that empower learners from a range of backgrounds.

Activating Students' Ideas in Science

Linking Formative Assessment Probes to Instructional Sequence in Grades 6–8

Patrick L. Brown , Page Keeley

This resource brings student thinking and instructional sequencing to the forefront of science teaching. Grounded in cognitive science and best practices in formative assessment, this book provides a practical approach to engage middle school students in doing science, not merely memorizing it. Each chapter vignette demonstrates how effective instructional sequencing can enhance students' understanding of science content. Chapters also include strategies for encouraging classroom discourse, promoting metacognition, and scaffolding for diverse learners. Ideal for science educators of grades 6-8, this guide supports your instructional design journey.

Climate Education and Sustainability in the Primary Classroom

Our World Their Future

Sophie Nelson , Lewis Morgan , Leigh Hoath

This engaging guide will empower primary school teachers to incorporate climate change and sustainability into their curriculum, enabling them to feel confident and competent in navigating this pressing global issue, without adding to teacher workload. Many teachers recognise the urgency of climate change and the need for pupils to engage with it but are unsure about how this should be approached in practice. Through a multi-disciplinary approach, this book provides the tools for teachers to educate and motivate their pupils to become active contributors to their school communities and beyond.

Teacher Autonomy

Where Has It Gone and Why We Need It Back

Sophie Smith-Tong

Teacher Autonomy is a compelling exploration of the erosion of teacher independence in an era dominated by high-stakes accountability, rigid educational frameworks, and a growing distrust of educators. Through the voices of educators, including teachers, teaching assistants, senior leaders, and early years practitioners, this book paints a vivid picture of the challenges faced by those on the frontlines of education. This book is a must-read for teachers, school leaders, and policymakers at any stage of their career, offering valuable insights into how to rekindle meaningful connections at the core of teaching, as well as navigate change in the current educational landscape.

A Curriculum of Courage, Conviction, Resolve

The Subjective Necessity of Nonviolence

William F. Pinar University of British Columbia, Canada

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

The world is periodically consumed in violence, in recent years by the Russian invasion of Ukraine, Hamas' October 7th terrorism in Israel, and by the genocide of Palestinians in Gaza by Israelis in response. To this world-historical situation, this book attempts a curriculum studies response. Drawing on foundational texts from Hongyu Wang, James B. Burns, Christopher Cruz, and Molly Quinn, as well as his own work on violence, Pinar considers nonviolence as a counterpart to the many forms of violence that are ever present in our modern world.

Critical Geographies in/of Education

Revisiting Discursive and Spatial Reckonings

Edited by Robert J. Helfenbein Tift College of Education, Mercer University, Hill Taylor

The volume demonstrates how spatial and discursive frameworks can fundamentally reshape our understanding of education across formal and informal contexts. By examining how spatial practices and embodied experiences configure learning environments, the chapters in this volume illuminate the profound impact of the "spatial turn" on educational discourse. Through compelling examples from schools, classrooms, and communities, they explore how spatial dynamics shape educational experiences and interactions.

Racism in the Enacted Curriculum

Agentic Ideas and the Spaces Between

Alexander Pratt University of Memphis, USA

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

Racism in the Enacted Curriculum chronicles the work of experienced and skilled antiracist educators to explore why even the best-intentioned curricula for resisting racism often fall short. The book highlights the challenges faced by teachers working to implement antiracist curriculum nationwide. To meet these challenges, the author develops a theory rooted in posthumanist and new materialist thought, which understands the role of ideas as agential forces in and of themselves. This forward-thinking and timely volume will appeal to researchers and educators interested in modern curriculum theory, posthumanism, teacher education, antiracism, and qualitative research methodology.

Planning for Outdoor Learning

A Practical Guide for the Early Years

Helen Bilton University of Reading, UK

Series: Bringing Outdoor Learning to Life

Planning is key to creating rich outdoor learning experiences, where children, educators and the environment can work together. This book supports practitioners working with children aged 2-6 (including Reception and Year 1) develop a flexible, observation-led approach to planning that places children at the heart of the process. This book empowers early years practitioners to design outdoor learning experiences that truly meet children's needs. By focusing on the 'why' and 'how' of planning, it ensures that day-to-day practice is guided by meaningful aims and objectives – allowing educators to spend less time on paperwork and more time engaging with the children.

Trisha Lee Artistic Director of Make-Believe Arts, UK

Covering everything from introducing the idea of storytelling, to scribing children's words and bringing their ideas to life through acting, this second edition of Princesses, Dragons and Helicopter Stories provides a practical, step-by-step guide to using the Helicopter Stories approach with young children. Full of real-life examples and practical ideas, and featuring a foreword by Vivian Gussin Paley, this updated edition also includes new insights, photographs, and lessons learned over a decade of practice. It is essential reading for anyone working with young children who believes in the power of stories to unlock language, imagination, and connection.

Theorizing the Quiet Power of Forest School

A Posthuman Framing of Regular, Repeated, Unstructured Practice in Nature

Joanna Hume Northumbria University, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Early Childhood Education

This highly novel volume reframes the popular, yet sorely under-theorised international education movement known as forest school, offering an interdisciplinary framework with which to set apart forest school from other outdoor education programmes and child-led pedagogies. Offering a new appreciation of the quiet power of forest school and an understanding of it as a significant emergent pedagogical practice, this book will be of interest to scholars, researchers and postgraduate students involved with forest school, early childhood education, the philosophy of education, and theories of learning more broadly.

Trauma-Informed Practice in Early Education

Making a Lifetime's Difference

James McTaggart

Many young children experience trauma – how can we help them? Every child will one day face challenges as an adult – how can we prepare them? Research shows that early educators can make a lifetime's difference for both groups of children, and this book is about how. Trauma-informed practice is effective educational practice for all children, and trauma-informed settings have happier, more effective and resilient adults working in them. This book offers a hopeful vision of the power of early education to change lives and is essential reading for all trainee and practising early years educators.

Designing and Applying Experiential Learning in Higher Education

Colin Beard

Series: Critical Practice in Higher Education

This insightful text is aimed specifically at educationalists and HE lecturers who wish to adopt a more balanced, holistic and inclusive approach to designing learning experiences. As lecturers are urged to adopt research-based teaching, it recognises the complexity of student learning and explains how knowledge can be constructed in various ways, not just socially and culturally but also, for example, psychologically, emotionally, sensorially, biologically, and cognitively. The Critical Practice in Higher Education series provides a scholarly and practical entry point for academics into key areas of higher education practice.

From Public Schools to Privatization

Urban Teachers on the Front Lines

Kathleen Nolan Princeton University, USA

From Public Schools to Privatization provides an in-depth and up-to-date critical analysis of the marketization and privatization of urban public schools in the United States. The book argues that both major political parties in the U.S. have embraced marketization and that, in the current moment, we are experiencing an effort to dismantle public education entirely through privatization. Nevertheless, the author suggests that there is hope in the resistance of urban teachers, social justice unionism, and the promise of organizing a broad multiracial, pro-democracy, pro-worker social movement.

Gaslighting School Educational Policy in a Post-Truth World

Systems, Schools and Society

Grant Rodwell Charles Sturt University, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Education Policy and Politics

Focusing on current educational systems in the US, UK, and Australia, Grant Rodwell examines the politics of gaslighting within school educational policy and how this links to political motives in a post-truth world. Using sustained comparative description and analysis, Rodwell provides up-to-date research on how gaslighting impacts school educational policy. As gaslighting is a complex term, the book gives a framework of how to comprehend it relative to school educational topics and issues. This book is a foundational resource for tertiary institutions, educational policy students and researchers, politicians and parents concerned with gaslighting policies and practices.

Bodies of Learning

How Embodiment Science Transforms Education

Guy Claxton, Emily Poel

Bodies of Learning is a bold reimagining of education through the lens of embodiment science. Claxton and Poel challenge outdated assumptions that separate mind and body, revealing the interconnectedness of the 'bodymind'. Drawing on cutting-edge research in embodied cognition, this book integrates heart, gut, brain, feeling and action into the learning process, reshaping how we think about intelligence, learning, and teaching. Packed with actionable ideas and reflective exercises, Bodies of Learning is essential reading for educators, as well as anyone passionate about creating a truly holistic and effective education system for the future.

Designing Lessons in the AI-Infused Classroom

A Five-Stage Framework for Educational Intelligence

Christopher Miller

Designing Lessons in the AI-Infused Classroom shows middle and high school teachers how to redesign their lessons and units with intentional use of artificial intelligence. In a world where students can use tools like ChatGPT to complete traditional assignments without actually learning anything, our new challenge is to design learning experiences that AI can't do for them. Teachers, teacher-leaders, and school technology coordinators will be better prepared to rethink traditional instruction and use AI to complement rather than replace human interaction and self-expression.

Evidence and Insights to Inform Early Years Practice

Edited by Anne Keary Monash University, Australia, Lucas Walsh Monash University, Australia, Janet Scull Monash University, Australia, Susanne Garvis Monash University, Australia

Despite widespread calls for evidence-based improvement in education, until recently little has been known about using research and other types of evidence to inform teaching and learning of young children, particularly in early childhood education and care settings, and the first years of formal schooling. This book will appeal to researchers, early years professionals and policy-makers, and provide directions for how research and other evidence can better inform practice from local to international settings.

Exploring Elite Schools and Inclusive Child-centred Sex and Relationships Education

Bourdieu and Heteronormative Power Structures

Matthew Round University of Portsmouth, UK

Series: Routledge Research in the Sociology of Education

Contributing to the body of literature that applies Bourdieu to the study of educational institutions, this novel volume considers how elite schools could incorporate inclusive equitable RSE within the existing mechanisms of CPD to provide a programme based on the needs and discomfort of both students and teachers. Calling for schools to develop cultures of conversation and dialogue rather than pedagogies of exposure and discomfort in the context of both sex education and teacher training, this book will benefit academics and postgraduate students in the fields of sex education, research methods in education, and secondary education more broadly.

Learning Scientific Concepts

A Unified Theory of Conceptual Change

Tamer G. Amin American University of Beirut, Lebanon

Understanding important scientific concepts like matter, energy, force, and species is central to scientific literacy. But how do we learn scientific concepts? This book explains what research across distinct theoretical perspectives has taught us, then cuts through the diversity to offer a novel integrated account and a unified theory of conceptual change. This book serves as a comprehensive guide for researchers, advanced students, and practitioners, and suggests a way forward for researchers and offers practitioners a coherent and comprehensive story of what kind of instruction and curricular design is effective and why.

Holistic Financial Literacy Education

Laying the Groundwork with Equitable Instructional Strategies

Edited by Thomas A. Lucey Illinois State University

Holistic Financial Literacy Education provides a scholarly foundation for a holistic vision of financial literacy, as well as instructional strategies for its teaching. It promotes discussions of the social principles and contexts that inform financial literacy and global human well-being, as well as the social consequences for a reductionist perspective of personal finances. Combining theory with practice, this book offers classroom strategies, lesson plans, and practical guidance for teaching financial literacy and challenging current societal norms.

Latina Pedagogies of Care

How Cariño Can Give Tired Teachers Power and Hope

Ale Babino, Rocío Almanza

Series: Equity and Social Justice in Education Series

Despite decades of educational reform, many teachers and students still remain under-resourced and underserved. In this important new book, award-winning educators Ale Babino and Rocío Almanza show how teachers can reclaim their humanity in a system that oscillates between toxic positivity and cynical despair. With stories, dichos, and actionable strategies, Babino and Almanza invite readers to name the pain of the herida abierta—the open wound of educational harms—and respond with care that re-humanizes and re-tools students and their teachers. Educators, teacher educators, and scholars alike will benefit from this book's tender witness, personal testimony, and pedagogical tools.

Teach like a Community Organizer

Practical Tools for Community-Building, Civic Engagement, and Progressive Change

Jacob Goodwin

This book is an invitation to participate in the "world as it is" with your students. When you teach like a community organizer, you help your students to notice the world as it is and to dream about the world as it should be. For teachers who have been witness to attacks on public education in the past few years and feel like something needs to change, this book provides tools and examples for direct application to the classroom. The book encourages teachers to try organizing methods in their teaching, building community in the classroom and beyond. This is an excellent resource for any teacher who has the desire to create a more holistic vision for teaching.

The Social and Emotional Core of Equity Leadership

A Guide for Driving Change in Schools

Gianna Cassetta

Series: Equity and Social Justice in Education Series

The Social and Emotional Core of Equity Leadership is a practical guide for educational leaders committed to creating inclusive schools where all students feel a sense of belonging. Challenging traditional approaches to social and emotional learning (SEL), this book argues that adult SEL must be rooted in equity and justice, not compliance or neutrality. Through vivid case studies, research-informed frameworks, and a structured reflection tool, readers explore how inner work must fuel outer work. Written for principals, district leaders, and school leadership teams, this book is ideal for those navigating real-world pressures while striving to lead with clarity and conscience.

Exploring Equitable Community-Campus Relationships

Edited by Karla Bird, Suchitra V. Gururaj, Sara B. Moore, Andrea Robles, and Cindy Vincent Claar

This volume offers replicable approaches for centering equity as a core value in campus-community relationships. Through interrogation of contemporary practice, chapter authors examine the many ways in which equity is deliberately centered in community relationships, practices, research, and pedagogies, thereby accounting for how equity is defined, perceived, and shaped across diverse cultures, perspectives, and institutions. This book will be an essential resource for academics and communities alike, particularly community partners, graduate students, scholars, and faculty who seek to center equity within their community engaged work.

Holistic Admissions as a Global Phenomenon

Improving Higher Education Practices and Policies

Edited by Michael N. Bastedo

This edited book brings together leading scholars to share ongoing research on the diffusion of holistic admissions practices around the world. Many countries have adopted holistic admissions practices, and some have used them for incoming students for over two decades, but these developments have been rarely noted in policy and media discussions about university admissions. Chapters in this volume explore the similar challenges global institutions face related to college access, admissions transparency, and the potential for corruption, and how their admissions practices affect equity, access, and student diversity.

Mindfulness and Contemplative Interaction for Higher Education

Reflections on Transformative Learning and Connectedness

David N. Sable

Series: Routledge Research in Higher Education

This book situates mindfulness and contemplative interaction at the heart of transformative learning for a more sustainable and compassionate world. Drawing on a mixed methods study of a specific set of reflective learning activities introduced to undergraduates in Canada, the book highlights the importance of critical thinking and the necessity of the underlying affective dispositions to transformative learning. It argues that contemplative practices can play a central role in creating an unexpected sense of connectedness even among students who do not agree with each other, who may come from widely different backgrounds, and who may not speak English as a first language.

Universities and the Purpose of Higher Education

Expansion and Development in Post-War Britain

Josh Patel

Series: Research into Higher Education

This thought-provoking book addresses the persistent anxieties surrounding the purpose and direction of higher education, offering a nuanced historical perspective on its transformation. Using Cold War Britain as a lens, the book challenges the prevailing narrative that marketisation was an external imposition, revealing instead how the dynamic priorities of social democratic higher education inadvertently paved the way for their own supersession. This is essential reading for students, academics, policymakers, and anyone seeking to understand the moral principles underpinning higher education and their influence on its future.

Trust in and through Academic Development

Edited by Gabriela Pleschová , Kathryn A. Sutherland , Peter Felten , Rachel Forsyth , Mary C. Wright

Trust matters in higher education, yet it is often taken for granted. This book shows how trust—between students and teachers, faculty and academic developers, or individuals and institutions—shapes the ways we teach, learn, and work together. Drawing on fresh research and first-hand accounts from across the world, this book reveals that trust is not static but a dynamic, reciprocal process. It is cultivated gradually through care, credibility, and openness, and it enables people to share vulnerabilities, take risks, and imagine new possibilities for teaching and learning.

My Daddy is Not Autistic (But My Mummy is)

A Picture Book Exploring Neurodiverse Families and Celebrating Difference

Elias Grace , Joanna Grace

In this imaginative book, four-year-old Elias depicts his experiences growing up in a neurodiverse family. Using bright and colourful drawings, Elias thinks about what it means to have different kinds of brains and shares his encounters of the differences between his parents on a day-to-day basis. Elias' story is accompanied by his Mummy Joanna's commentary where she explores parenting across the neurodivide and how we can promote understanding of difference. The book provides a unique perspective on growing up in a neurodiverse household and is a valuable, often humorous, and joyful resource for all people seeking to explain and understand difference, regardless of age.

Special Education and the Juvenile Legal System

Connecting Policy, Research, and Practice to Address the School-to-Prison Pipeline

Natasha Strassfeld

This book addresses a critical gap in our education system: ensuring that youth in the juvenile legal system receive the special education and related services they need. This comprehensive guide provides both the legal framework and practical solutions to help address these systemic failures. By examining the unique struggles of youth at the intersection of multi-systemic involvement, this book serves as essential reading for university students, scholars, practitioners, and policymakers working in special education, educational policy, criminal justice, and social work who seek to understand and improve outcomes at this critical juncture.

Fix the Plan, Not the Teaching

Aligning Curriculum, Instruction, Assessment, and Support

Erma Anderson

When great teaching doesn't lead to great learning, the problem often lies in fragmented planning—not teacher performance. This book shows educators how to align curriculum, instruction, assessment, and support into unified learning progressions. It includes ready-to-use templates for immediate classroom implementation, including specialized tools that integrate UDL, SEL, and disciplinary practices into lesson design. This isn't another initiative—it's a practical framework for creating educational experiences where every component works together, empowering K-12 educators to shift from improving instruction to designing coherent learning systems that ensure all students succeed.

A Case-Based Approach

Carol Koch

This textbook, born from years of teaching graduate-level courses in pediatric speech sound disorders, serves as a comprehensive resource for instructors, students, and practicing speech-language pathologists. It combines foundational knowledge, clinical theory, evidence-based practice, and practical strategies for managing articulation and phonological disorders in children. The book emphasizes case-based and problem-based learning to foster critical thinking and clinical application, with an introductory chapter outlining their role in speech-language pathology.

Exploring Genres and Text Formats in Children's Literature

Supporting Students' Engagement and Understanding

Miriam Martinez, Rebecca Stortz, Janis Harmon

This children's literature textbook is based on the textual response framework which recognizes that, while readers' personal experiences and knowledge shape their understanding of literature, readers' knowledge of format and genre conventions is equally important in reading literature. We recognize that textual knowledge includes more than genre knowledge; it also includes knowledge of what is distinctive about different formats of literature. This book helps preservice teachers understand the distinctive features of picturebooks, chapter books, novels in verse, and graphic novels, and what these distinctive features mean for supporting students as they read different formats.

Fostering Critical Pedagogy in the ELA Classroom

Mentoring, Networking, and Supporting English Teachers

Meghan E. Barnes, Lucy Arnold, Heather Coffey

This book presents the story of the Critical English Educator Collaborative (CEEC) – a teacher-guided, informal learning community focused on supporting prospective and practicing ELA teachers' understandings of critical pedagogy. Three ELA teacher educators guided a cohort of novice ELA teachers in monthly virtual conversations relative to the challenges facing public school teachers today. CEEC is a place where participants can be vulnerable and feel safe to share their concerns, experiences, and successes without fear of retribution from school administrators, parents, or faculty. CEEC's story gives individuals tools to engage in the process of becoming critical educators.

Foundations in Adult Literacy Education

Edited by Daphne Greenberg Professor and Director, Adult Literacy Research Center, Department of Learning Sciences, Georgia State University, USA.

A foundational text, this edited collection provides an accessible entry and thorough understanding of adult literacy education for undergraduate and graduate students. Filling a gap in the literature on adult literacy, chapters cover key topics including the history of adult literacy, assessment and interventions, technology, adult English language learners, diversity and inclusion, and more. Upon completion of reading this book, individuals will gain knowledge about the field of adult literacy, its stakeholders, instructional contexts, as well as suggested methods for teaching adults who have low literacy skills.

In this book, literacy, language, and educational researchers, teacher educators, and educators offer novel conceptualizations theorizing (game)play as a teaching practice and research approach. The contributors of the book, known as the (Game)play Collaborative, generate new understandings of the interplay of literacy, language teaching, and research, and the intersectional identities of children and youth rendered more visible through (game)play with families, peers, community members, and educators. This is a great resource for academics and educators in the language and literacy fields, educational technology and game studies, media literacy education, and multicultural education.

Identity, Criticality, and Advocacy in Young Adult Literature

Training Teachers to Empower Students in the ELA Classroom

Edited by Steffany Comfort Maher, Alice Hays

Identity, Criticality, and Advocacy in Young Adult Literature explores ways to incorporate YA literature as a tool for developing identity, criticality, and advocacy in and out of English language arts classrooms. Censors are stripping young people of the powers to read and learn about the world. To combat this, we share how teachers engage adolescents with YA literature and address issues of identity, criticality, and advocacy. Chapters include topics such as race and identity, technology and artificial intelligence, environmental issues, LGBTQIA+ history, mental health literacy, and more. These teaching methods are relevant for pre-service, middle, and high school teachers.

Quechua Language Instruction and Assessment Across the Americas

Challenges and Solutions

Edited by Marilyn S. Manley, Chad Howe

Series: Routledge Research in Language Education

Quechua, with nearly 10 million speakers living primarily across the Andes, stands as the most widely spoken Indigenous language of the Americas today. Yet, this less commonly taught language (LCTL) continues to face significant challenges. This work illuminates and interrogates current barriers to Quechua language instruction and assessment within the United States, Ecuador, Bolivia, and Peru. Collectively, the contributions to this volume offer a way forward with suggestions and solutions aimed at building the capacity of Quechua language stakeholders.

The Heart of Fiction

Reading for Character, Theme and Craft

Kate Roberts

Reading fiction is at the heart of our classrooms. It's what we love. It's what we want our students to love—whether whole class novels, book club texts, or independent choices. But to love fiction, kids need to be able to and hopefully want to read without our constant guidance and instruction. How can we coach students towards more proficient, independent practice when they read? The Heart of Fiction is about more than skill building. It's also about the conditions we can set up in our teaching to make this work stick, and for our students to truly grow into themselves as readers. It's about the lifeblood of our classrooms.

The Phonics Handbook

A Comprehensive Guide for Reading Teachers

Mary Jo Fresch

The Phonics Handbook provides a comprehensive guide to phonics by outlining the 44 sounds of English and how they work with its 26 letters to make reading and writing happen. Having a strong knowledge base around these sounds and patterns puts every teacher at an advantage for teaching and assessing how students apply the “code” when they read and write and can amplify their skillful phonics instruction, regardless of the curricular program used. This knowledge also provides a roadmap for understanding and supporting students who might be struggling in reading or writing, thus providing real-time assessment.

Becoming a Responsive Mathematics Teacher

Centering Student Thinking in K-8 Classrooms

Caroline B. Ebbly University of Pennsylvania, USA, Brittany Hess, Lindsay Goldsmith-Markey, Lizzy Pecora, Jennifer Valerio, Joy Anderson Davis

This resource presents a responsive mathematics teaching model for elementary and middle grades, developed through the RMT project. It equips educators with tools to enhance instruction and increase equity for underrepresented students. Chapters combine research-based practices with real examples to show how this model can be implemented in actual schools. Topics include the components of a responsive mathematics lesson, lesson planning guidance, and classroom community building. Whether you are a teacher, educator, or leader, this book helps reframe responsibilities, challenge math norms, empower student problem-solving, and cultivate joy in mathematics teaching and learning.

Creative Thinking Through Mathematics

A Student's Guide to Mathematical Explorations

Mika Munakata, Eliza Leszczynski

This book engages students in interactive explorations that encourage creative thinking in mathematics. Organized around five themes, fifteen quests invite students to notice, wonder, and draw upon mathematical reasoning as they connect mathematics to other disciplines and everyday situations. The quests foster creativity by posing open-ended questions, encouraging reflection, inviting playfulness and curiosity, and connecting to research-based traits of creativity. Project ideas and additional online resources encourage students to personalize their learning. Written for undergraduates and pre-service teachers, this book celebrates the idea that everyone can explore mathematics.

2ND EDITION

Intentional Talk and Listening

How to Structure and Lead Productive Mathematical Discussions

Elham Kazemi, Allison Hintz

Math teachers know the first step to meaningful mathematics discussions is to ask students to share how they solved a problem and make their thinking visible; however, knowing where to go next can be a daunting task. In Intentional Talk and Listening, Elham Kazemi and Allison Hintz provide teachers with a practical framework for planning and facilitating purposeful math talks that move group discussions to the next level while achieving mathematical and social goals. This second edition explores the role of children's and communities' funds of knowledge in mathematics problem solving and focuses on supporting students' active participation as listeners and speakers.

Math Problem Solving Through Small Group Instruction

A Guide to Increasing Proficiency in Grades K-5

Dani Fry Jackson

Problem solving in math is complex. When students struggle, it can be difficult to diagnose where the breakdown is happening. This book defines how reading comprehension, math computation, and self-efficacy impact students' problem-solving abilities, and how you can support them in each area, with a particular focus on the use of small group instruction. Great for math educators of grades K-5, administrators, and math curriculum coordinators, this book will leave you feeling confident in identifying student behavior around mathematical problem solving and addressing it with detailed ways to respond with exactly what your students need.

STEM Matters

Your Guide to Educational Purposes, Policies, Programs, and Practices

Rodger W. Bybee, Patrick Brown

This resource is your guide to understanding STEM's place within K-12 education. Organized around Purposes, Policies, Programs, and Practices, this book clarifies STEM's meaning beyond the acronym, examines educational standards like NGSS, and provides practical implementation strategies for coherent school programs. Within each STEM discipline, the authors include concrete recommendations for designing instructional materials that focus on small, manageable changes. With educator stories, research references, and discussion questions, it serves as a valuable resource for teachers, professional learning communities, and administrators developing sustainable STEM initiatives.

Teaching Through Example-Based Problem Solving (TEPS) in Early Algebra

Contrasting Cases in Elementary Math

Cover Image
Not Available

Meixia Ding Temple University, USA.

This elementary mathematics resource outlines a pedagogical approach known as Teaching Through Example-Based Problem Solving (TEPS) and presents pre-service teachers with an effective way to instruct early algebra. Using contrasting cases to illustrate inverse relations and the basic properties of operations, it breaks down an often controversial "gatekeeper" for students' learning and strengthens their algebraic thinking. Ideal for use in pre-service elementary math methods courses, and for teacher professional development as a supplement to any elementary math textbook, this book empowers teachers to meaningfully engage students in an often daunting subject area.

Well Played, Grades K-2

Building Mathematical Thinking Through Number Games and Puzzles

Linda Dacey, Karen Gartland, Jayne Bamford Lynch

Students love math games and puzzles, but how much are they really learning from the experience? Too often, math games are thought of as just a fun activity or enrichment opportunity. Well Played, Grades K-2 shows how to make games and puzzles an integral and engaging part of the math classroom. This second edition offers twenty-five engaging games and puzzles which have all been field-tested in diverse classrooms. New full-sized appendices of all game boards, puzzles and other materials make preparing for play an easy task. Well Played, Grades K-2 will help you tap the power of games and puzzles to engage students in sustained and productive mathematical thinking.

Mutual Mentoring for Mid-Career Teachers

Trekking with Colleagues for Joy and Growth

Karen Weller Swanson, Micki M. Caskey Portland State University, USA

Mentoring shouldn't just be for new teachers! In this helpful resource, authors Karen Weller Swanson and Micki M. Caskey show how mid-career mentoring can rejuvenate your joy of teaching, plan for career progressions, and build a healthy work-life balance. The authors lay out a framework for mutual mentoring that uses a trekking metaphor and a choose-your-own-adventure style, which allows for individualized professional development focusing on topics most important to you. With this book, mid-career teachers will be able to thrive in a space that creates opportunities for them to embrace innovative and collaborative practices and explore their evolving personal and teacher identities.

AI-Enhanced Pedagogies

Rethinking Learning, Curriculum, and Human Potential in the Age of Intelligent Machines

Alexander M. Sidorkin California State University Sacramento, USA

AI-Enhanced Pedagogies argues that artificial intelligence has exposed deep flaws in modern education, which now demands a fundamental rethinking of teaching and learning. This book's purpose is to develop a theory of education suited to a world where humans and AI learn together. It proposes that learning should be understood as a collaborative process between people and intelligent tools rather than as an individual pursuit. Sidorkin shows that AI does not diminish human intelligence but expands it. Education must evolve from linear curricular progressions to flexible systems that foster creativity, discernment, and intellectual courage.

Series: Routledge International Studies in the Philosophy of Education

This book explores the narrative of education being in a state of perpetual crisis and the motivations behind the historical and contemporary tendency to exploit the same. Written as a call for greater media literacy, the book recognises how and when "solutions" to the oft-acknowledged educational crises fail to address root causes, which only ends up maintaining the status quo. This book will be of value to academics, postgraduates and scholars of education interested in a solution centric re-orientation of the ongoing narrative and notions of education.

The Morality of the Mass Formal Schooling System

Education, Rights, and Resistance

Nicholas Parkin Auckland Montessori College, New Zealand

Series: New Directions in the Philosophy of Education

This book delves into a novel philosophical and moral analysis of the mass formal schooling system. In the light of the routine and unjust systemic harm to primary- and secondary-aged children caused by the mass formal schooling system, the book acknowledges the need for making efforts towards nonharmful educational alternatives. This book is of relevance to researchers of philosophy of education and education studies, academics, postgraduates and scholars of education, and anyone who is interested in moral analysis of the dominant education system of our time.

Could Do Better

A Journey to Improve Staff Wellbeing in Schools

Pippa McLean

How can we really look after ourselves and our staff teams in light of everything we face? What if people really valued staff wellbeing rather than staff well-doing? Could Do Better explores the myriad demands upon those working in schools, acknowledging the 'too much and not enoughs' of the climate in which staff work, and considering the impact this has on wellbeing throughout the school. It will be key reading for teachers in both primary and secondary settings, as well as school leadership teams and those in pastoral roles.

Digital Competence Development in Early Childhood Professionals

Harnessing the INSPIRE Model

Sarika Kewalramani Swinburne University, Australia, Weipeng Yang University of Hong Kong, Maria Dardanou UiT The Arctic University of Norway, Maria Hatzigianni University of West Attica, Greece

Series: Evolving Families

This book examines innovative recent developments in curricula and pedagogical discourses around early childhood professionals' digital competence development via professional development avenues. This will be a valuable resource for any academic or practitioner, whether beginning or expert, in understanding how digital competence development occurs through cultural learnings, is inclusive, not discipline-based, is holistic. In reframing early childhood professionals' digital competence development as a naturalistic process, it will inspire educators to integrate a range of digital and multimodal technologies in their everyday practices.

States of Mind

How Adults and Young People Can Work Together to Change Education and Mental Health Systems

Chris Bagley, Bea Herbert

States of Mind critiques and reimagines the traditional paradigms that shape our mental health and school systems, showing that, by embracing a different worldview, we can work with young people in a way that fosters belonging, personal growth and collective action. Education should support us, both individually and collectively, to co-construct ways of being, thinking and acting authentically. This book is essential reading for teachers, educational psychologists, advocacy organisations, thinktanks, and all those wishing to create more hopeful, humane mental health and education systems.

Teaching for Flow: Transforming Primary Education for Optimal Learning

Rebecca Meager

Flow in positive psychology describes a mental state of being fully immersed and energised in the successful performance of a task. Teaching for Flow explores a radical transformation of the primary curriculum with a look at adopting a thematic, investigatory approach based on the children's interests; exploring ways to foster the right conditions for children to enter into the optimal state for learning, known as 'flow' or 'being in the zone'. This is an essential resource for any classroom teacher or school leader looking to develop a more active, investigatory and child-centred approach to learning in their school that allows children to grow and flourish.

Voices of Opportunity: Oracy for Social Mobility in Education

Michael Gardner

In this book, the vital role of language in shaping the life chances of children from contrasting ends of the social ladder is explored. Grounded in the latest research and the contemporary experiences of educators, it highlights how oracy is a key driver of upward social mobility, especially for the most disadvantaged children. It contrasts the experiences of children from language-rich upbringings with those from language-poor backgrounds, showing how these differences affect access to learning, emotional wellbeing, and future life opportunities. This book is valuable for educators and school leaders seeking to understand the connection between oracy and social mobility.

A Bourdieusian Examination of the School Principal

Instructional Leadership vs Entrepreneurial Management

Shane Barnes

Series: Routledge Research in Educational Leadership

This book questions the role and function of the school principal as instructional leader and/or entrepreneurial manager. Combining Bourdieusian sociology and a Christian faith orientation, the work applies a unique lens to this educational leadership dilemma. Presenting an analysis of data generated from semi-structured interviews with CSA principals in South Australia, this text examines the core of the school principal role. This is an indispensable resource for researchers and postgraduate students working in education leadership.

Patterns of Analysis

Connecting the Conventions of Grammar to Analytical Reading and Writing

Holly Durham

In today's rapidly changing world, the ability to think critically and analyze complex texts is more essential than ever. Yet, too often, students struggle to bridge the gap between creative expression and analytical rigor. Patterns of Analysis provides a revolutionary approach to teaching analytical reading and writing—one that seamlessly integrates grammar and literary analysis to empower students to engage deeply with texts across genres. Perfect for English educators, curriculum designers, and anyone invested in fostering analytical thinkers, this book is more than a teaching framework—it's an invitation for students to see the world through a critical, thoughtful lens.

Unmasking the Manosphere

Tackling the Misogyny Crisis in Schools

Matt Pinkett

The rise of toxic male influencers and the manosphere means that all over the country, boys are at risk of misogynistic radicalisation. This book helps schools be proactive in their efforts to combat misogyny. It explains how misogyny shows up in classrooms, corridors, group chats, and, crucially, what we can do to challenge it. Combining the latest research, personal anecdote and expert advice, the book provides guidance on tackling misogyny in all aspects of school life from the curriculum and behaviour policies to the corridors and tutor time.

Closeness in Student-Teacher Relationships

Centering Children's Perspectives on Connection in the Classroom

Clio Stearns

This book centers children's perspectives on closeness in the classroom while giving teachers questions they can consider toward cultivating more mutually affirming social and emotional dynamics. Despite many educators' best efforts, today's norms around relationship development can be excessively adult-first and inattentive to the wishes and needs of school-age children. Using firsthand observations and interviews in schools, relevant autobiographical perspectives, and a thorough yet accessible evidence base, Clio Stearns prepares in-service teachers to explore their own vulnerabilities and challenge the prevailing notions of adulthood as a fixed state of knowledge and authority.

Teachers Pumping in Schools

Feminized Bodies, Firsthand Accounts, and Advocacy

Elise Toedt

Series: Routledge Research in Education

Teachers Pumping in Schools chronicles the daily, visceral experiences of U.S. teachers balancing infant feeding and full-time work. It documents teachers sharing their joys, frustrations, advice, and movements to change the structure of schools to become more friendly to the bodily needs of lactating employees. Grounded in feminist and social reproduction theories, the author illustrates how theory can be a practical tool for reimagining everyday practices within the current patriarchal, capitalist design of schools.

Leading the Next Era of Public Education

A Roadmap for Personalized, Student-Centered, and Equitable Schools

Taylor P. Wrye

Leading the Next Era of Public Education presents a comprehensive framework for transforming any school or district in our rapidly evolving, technology-rich world. Cognitive bias, institutional routines, and compliance cultures keep schools tied to what is familiar over what is effective. Are these legacy structures effectively serving teachers and students in the age of AI and XR? This book offers a practical roadmap for executive leaders, governing bodies, and school-level teams seeking to transition from incremental fixes to system redesign. The book aligns strategy, operations, and instruction to support districts in delivering equitable, student-centered outcomes.

Science Fiction and the Cultural Politics of Education

Mapping the Pedagogical Imagination

Edited by Graham B. Slater

Bringing together diverse perspectives, theoretical approaches, and texts, the book asks what science fiction can bring to cultural politics in education, and how the cultural politics of science fiction can transform educational futures. It also questions whether science fiction can guide educational projects that aim to foster visions of what Fredric Jameson called 'unimaginable futures' and if critical studies of science fiction guide scholars, teachers, and cultural workers to think about the purpose and potential of education in the current moment. This book was originally published as a special issue of Review of Education, Pedagogy, and Cultural Studies.

Emotionally Intelligent School Leadership

Lead with Heart, Transform with Purpose

Brandy L. Tackett

This timely book equips school leaders—principals, assistant principals, instructional coaches, and district administrators—with the tools to lead with both their head and heart. It provides actionable solutions for overcoming common leadership pitfalls, addressing toxic culture dynamics, and building an environment where teachers and students feel seen, supported, and motivated to excel. Emotionally Intelligent School Leadership serves as both a wake-up call and a roadmap for leaders who want to move beyond managing schools and instead inspire meaningful, lasting transformation.

2ND EDITION

The Ball

Regaining Your Focus on What Matters Most in Work and Life

Todd Whitaker Indiana State University, USA

Looking for a powerful, unique way to engage your staff or team? This parable from best-selling author Todd Whitaker offers a refreshingly different form of professional development. It is a short story about a veteran teacher who reconnects with a former student who manages her local grocery store which has fallen on hard times. They find their way back on track with a message that will resonate with everyone. The tale will help your staff reengage with their priorities and consider what they value most, while feeling inspired along the way. The new edition is accompanied by a robust study guide that will help you and your teams get the most out of the book.

The Instructional Leader in You

10 Strategies for Every School Leader

Danny Steele

As a principal, you wear many hats, including that of instructional leader. But it's impossible to be an expert in all areas of instruction, assessment, curriculum, and data analysis. Danny Steele takes the pressure off your shoulders and shows how you can add value to the instructional program of your school. He presents ten simple strategies that can help you on your journey as you work to balance the imperatives of building operations and instruction. He shows how each strategy plays out during the school day and offers real-life examples and inspiration from practitioners in the field. No matter your level of experience, you'll find simple ideas that you can implement immediately.

The Involved School Librarian

How to Increase Your Impact and Thrive

Hilda K. Weisburg

School librarians are often in a tricky position because they bear the brunt of political movements but also play a key role in the wider school community. Experienced librarian Hilda Weisburg offers a practical approach to help all librarians get more involved while overcoming resistance. Weisburg unveils the 5 Cs (Confident, Committed, Connected, Communicator, Change Agent), 5 Ps (Passionate, Purposeful, Planner, Professional, Powerful), and 3 Ls (Listener, Learner, Leader) to help you on your journey. New and experienced school librarians and media specialists will gain valuable ideas for strengthening their programs at a time when school libraries and librarians are under attack.
