American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume I: From Lexington and Concord to the Louisiana Purchase, 1775–1803

Edited by Alys Beverton

This volume charts the establishment and early growth of the American empire, exploring how people in the United States collided with others who jeopardized the realization of their imperial ambitions, principally Native Americans and rival European colonists. It also considers the ideas which underpinned this process—ideas which insisted that the United States could build an empire which would promote the spread of republican government in the New World.

American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume II: From Lewis and Clark to the Annexation of Texas, 1804–1845

Edited by Edward Mair

This four-volume collection brings together a diverse array of primary sources that help contextualise the impacts of American imperialism across the long nineteenth century. These fascinating volumes chart the motivations for, and reactions to, the growth of the United States from the American Revolution to the end of the First World War. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, the collection provides a valuable resource for those seeking to explore the causes, course, and consequences of US imperialism from 1775 to 1919.

American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume III: From the Mexican-American War to the Spanish-American War, 1846–1898

Edited by Adam Burns

This volume navigates the course of US imperialism between two major wars – the Mexican-American War (1846–1848) and the Spanish-American War (1898) – both of which saw significant US territorial expansion, and explores the so-called “winning of the West,” the controversial Alaska Purchase of 1867, early US intrigue in the Caribbean, and the nation’s expansion into the Pacific in the years leading up to the formal annexation of the Hawaiian Islands in 1898.

American Imperialism in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History, 1775–1919

Volume IV: From the Treaty of Paris to the Paris Peace Conference, 1898–1919

Edited by Alex Bryne

This volume documents the formation of the United States’ colonial and informal empire in the Pacific, Caribbean, and Central America at the turn of the twentieth century. Taking the cessation of hostilities with Spain as its starting point, this final volume traces the evolution of United States imperialism through to the end of the First World War. A host of historic perspectives are presented through a range of source material, including letters, government documents, and published material.

Electric Power in Victorian Britain

Volume I: Electric Power Imagined

Edited by Nathan Kapoor

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

The materials in this volume cover the works of the natural philosophers, mathematicians, engineers, and entertainers for whom electricity became a vessel to say new things about energy and create a new means of generating motive force. The papers, books, and experiments explore the ways in which electricity transforms from a force of nature into a source of energy. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students and scholars of the History of Science.

Electric Power in Victorian Britain

Volume II: Electric Power in Practice

Edited by Nathan Kapoor

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

The materials in volume two explore how the transformation of electric power imprinted on the political landscape of Great Britain and the Empire. Outside the lecture halls and laboratories, electric power became a source for inventors, politicians, economists, and the public to explore, define, and lament how energy consumption should look. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students and scholars of the History of Science.

Electric Power in Victorian Britain

Volume III: Electric Power, Politics and Culture

Edited by Nathan Kapoor

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

This volume of primary sources examines electric power, politics and culture in Victorian Britain. The materials review the formalization of electric power infrastructures or "grids" as they took shape on a local, national, and imperial scale, and explore how citizens, novelists, doctors, politicians, and electrical engineers imagined electric power networks impacting the present and future.

Gothic Print Culture, 1789-1900

Volume I: Novels

Edited by Jennifer Camden, JoEllen DeLucia

This volume centers on gothic novels popularized by William Lane's Minerva Press and other circulating libraries. Lane and his competitors, such as Thomas Hookham, are considered as key to understanding how the print market changed to meet the needs of an increasingly literate public; this volume understands the gothic novel as part of this shift. The volume also includes images related to each text, including frontispieces, title pages, illustrations, and advertisements. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this title will be of great interest to students of literature.

Gothic Print Culture, 1789-1900

Volume II: Chapbooks

Edited by Jennifer Camden, JoEllen DeLucia

This volume centers on gothic literature in chapbooks and bluebooks. Chapbooks and bluebooks capitalized on the popularity of gothic novels by publishing much shorter and cheaper pamphlets. Many bluebooks were abbreviated or adapted versions of popular novels, while others were composed specifically for this format. Both the adaptations and original compositions constitute a reworking and extension of the gothic to an even broader audience. This volume will provides select images of these texts and their copious illustrations. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this title will be of great interest to students of literature.

Gothic Print Culture, 1789-1900

Volume III: Miscellaneous Magazines

Edited by Jennifer Camden, JoEllen DeLucia

This volume centers on gothic literature in the periodical press. Periodicals, magazines, and penny papers broadened access to gothic fiction; in addition, they illustrate how serial gothic fiction interacted with the foreign and domestic news, advice columns, and travel accounts it was often published alongside in periodicals and magazines. This volume focuses on gothic serial fiction, culminating in the Victorian penny dreadful and will feature rarely reproduced illustrations. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this title will be of great interest to students of literature.

Gothic Print Culture, 1789-1900

Volume IV: Gothic Drama

Edited by Jennifer Camden, JoEllen DeLucia

This volume tracks the evolution of gothic drama through nineteenth-century print culture. By including a volume on drama, this collection not only makes available rare plays and associated advertisements and posters, but also bridges the gap between Romantic and Victorian gothic fiction and early gothic film, providing a fuller picture of the development of the gothic across genres and media. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this title will be of great interest to students of literature.

Meteorology in Nineteenth-Century Society

Volume III: Meteorology and Religion

Edited by Aitor Anduaga University of the Basque Country

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

This four-volume set of thematically focused and curated primary sources examines meteorology in nineteenth-century society. Knowing the history of meteorology and climatology since their inception as physical sciences in the nineteenth century is fundamental to understanding the causes and historical patterns of the severe weather and climate change that greatly preoccupy today's society. Thematically focused collections of primary sources support the research and study needs not only of scholars, but also graduate and postgraduate students. To this end, the volumes contextualize and explain the contents of these sources.

Nineteenth-Century British Pornography: Sources and Materials

Volume I: Textual Cultures of Pornography

Edited by Kathleen Lubey

This volume provides background texts for the early modern origins of pornography including its philosophic and literary foundations. By the early nineteenth-century, pornographic publications came out of the radical milieu during the global age of revolutions. In England, publishers wrote political philosophy and pornography in tandem. The age of revolutionary pornography ended in the 1860s, when William Dugdale, the doyen of them all, died in prison, sentenced to hard labour for obscenity.

Nineteenth-Century British Pornography: Sources and Materials

Volume II: Pornography and Science

Edited by Sarah Bull

This volume details scientific pornography during the long nineteenth century. Though there is little overlap between pornography and sexual science currently, in the past pornographers played up scientific credentials to reassure readers while the state used the ambiguity between categories to censor information about birth control and sexual nonconformity. This volume provides evidence from the mid-century years during which time many of the main producers of pornography were affiliated with anthropology, geography, bibliography, and medicine.

Nineteenth-Century British Pornography: Sources and Materials

Volume III: Pornographic Literature and the Underground Book Trade, 1880s-1910s

Edited by Colette Colligan

This volume examines the growth of high-end literary pornographic productions that took place towards the final quarter of the nineteenth century and were largely published on the continent where control of production was lax. These publications were published and circulated for the elite. Publications that came from this group and period include The Pearl, My Secret Life, Romance of Lust, and The Sins of the Cities of the Plain; or, The Recollections of a Mary-Ann, with Short Essays on Sodomy and Tribadism. The volume includes Home Office and Foreign Office records that detail the methods attempted to limit the spread of pornography.

Nineteenth-Century British Pornography: Sources and Materials

Volume IV: Mass Market Pornography

Edited by Lisa Z. Sigel

This volume concerns itself with arrival of mass pornography at the end of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the twentieth. This volume details the rise of cheap, readily available, and much maligned materials such as postcards, pamphlets, and photographs. Mass pornography expanded the market to include women, children, the poor, and people of colour in Great Britain and across the British Empire. The volume documents imperial and international attempts to curtail the spread of pornography that took place between the 1880s and 1914 and provides examples of who suffered as a result.

Photography and Science in Victorian Culture

Edited by Jordan Bear

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

This is a volume of primary sources that speak to the relationship between photography and science in Victorian culture. It will guide readers by selecting and situating a group of texts that register the most significant of these debates in engaging ways. It will provide scholars working in a variety of fields—the history of science, literary studies, and art history, to name only a few—with access to overlooked but critical sources that can stimulate their own inquiries. Students will be immersed in the most vivid disputes of scientific culture, and will benefit from the skills developed by analyzing and situating primary sources.

Physical Disability and Deformity in Nineteenth-Century Britain

Edited by Claire L. Jones

Series: Nineteenth-Century Science, Technology and Medicine: Sources and Documents

Throughout the nineteenth century, Britain witnessed a remarkable transformation in the ways in which individuals with physical impairments experienced the world and the ways in which they were perceived, treated, and represented. Offering historical primary sources that outline both medical and experiential perspectives of physical disability, this volume provides frequently mentioned but rarely provided documents, ranging from medical accounts, personal testimony, literary representation, advertisements, ephemera, and images.

Scottish Art in the Industrial Age, 1800-1914

Volume I: Painting, Travel and National Identity c.1800-1860

Edited by John Morrison

This volume examines the ways in which Scottish identity was expressed through visual and material culture in the early to mid-nineteenth centuries, culminating in Victoria's romanticisation of Scotland, or 'Balmorality'. Key artists included Sir David Wilkie, Alexander Nasmyth and Henry Raeburn and later Horatio McCulloch who helped to perpetuate the myth of Scotland as a retrogressive, highland nation. In 1826, the Royal Scottish Academy was established in Edinburgh, providing artists with the opportunity to train and exhibit their work. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students of Art History and Scottish History.

Scottish Art in the Industrial Age, 1800-1914

Scottish Art in the Industrial Era, 1850–1900

Edited by Freya Spoor

This volume introduces key artists such as the Scottish Pre-Raphaelites and the Glasgow Boys and engages with the critical debates and artistic theories that were circulating in the second half of the nineteenth century. This was a period when Scotland was experiencing huge growth and economic expansion and centres such as Edinburgh and Glasgow saw the emergence of the Glasgow Institute for the Fine Arts and of smaller artists' clubs, providing new opportunities for women. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students of Art History and Scottish History.

Scottish Art in the Industrial Age, 1800-1914

Volume III: Arts, Crafts and the Celtic Revival c.1880-1914

Edited by Elizabeth Cumming

This volume focuses on artists and writers associated with the Arts and Crafts movement, Scottish Symbolism and the Celtic Revival. During the period, Glasgow flourished as an artistic centre under the leadership of Fra Newbery at Glasgow School of Art. This period saw the rise in importance of the decorative arts and the emergence of a number of women designers. The leading artists at the turn of the century enjoyed an international reputation, exhibiting at the Vienna Secession in 1900. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students of Art History and Scottish History.

Scottish Art in the Industrial Age, 1800-1914

Volume IV: Collecting, Philanthropy and the Art Market c.1800-1914

Edited by Frances Fowle

This volume examines the emergence of a market for Scottish art among Scotland's wealthy industrialists in the mid-nineteenth century and in the period leading up to the First World War. As well as considering key mercantile collectors, the volume focuses on major art dealers who gave artists their first solo exhibitions. In Edinburgh Scottish artists were supported initially by Alexander Hill and later by Peter McOmish Dott at the Scottish Gallery, who supported the Scottish Colourists in the early 20th century. Accompanied by extensive editorial commentary, this collection will be of great interest to students of Art History and Scottish History.

An Economic History of the British Building Industry 1815–1979

C.G. Powell

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

An Economic History of the British Building Industry 1815–1979 (1982) looks at the crucial role the building industry plays in the national economy, not only as a major direct contributor to GNP, but also its effect on a variety of areas from institutional finance to the DIY market. The nature of this effect forms the theme of this study which examines and documents the interplay of new materials and technologies, costs and the changing social and economic forces that affected decision-making over what kinds of buildings to construct – or indeed to knock down – in which locations, and when.

Crisis in the East European Economy

The Spread of the Polish Disease

Edited by Jan Drenowski

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Crisis in the East European Economy (1982) is a collection of essays, written by leading specialists in centrally planned economies, examining developments in late-stage Soviet-style economies in East European countries. The case of Poland is given special attention as the disorder was most spectacular there and started a political upheaval which shook the foundations of the Soviet-style system – the term ‘Polish disease’ becoming synonymous with Eastern European decline. Economic, political, social and institutional factors are examined across Eastern Europe to determine the inherent features common to all Soviet-style economies.

Growth in the British Economy

A Study of Economic Problems and Policies in Contemporary Britain

Political and Economic Planning

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Growth in the British Economy (1960) examines the slow rate of growth in the British economy and evaluates the view that Britain is lagging behind other industrial countries. It points to aspects of Britain's economic performance which could have serious implications for the country's future. Among the factors which may have been responsible for Britain's relatively poor showing, the report looks particularly at the influence of government policy on the level and distribution of investment, and at the way in which policies to deal with inflation and the balance of payments have influenced long-term prospects.

Investment Economics

J.L. Carr

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Investment Economics (1969) examines the process of investment decision-making in firms, looking at the theory of investment and the details of investment theory in business practice. The study of investment theories, prompted by the government and by nationalised industries, led many businesses to utilise more sophisticated techniques to analyse the impact of investment on their day-to-day running and their profits. This book takes an overview of the theories, techniques and their impacts.

Marketing in a Competitive Economy

Leslie W. Rodger

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Marketing in a Competitive Economy (1965) is a scientific study of marketing in the Western world, taking as a starting point a competitive economy and freedom for consumers. As marketing moved from an exercise in profitably disposing of excess goods, to being primarily concerned with producing goods as a result of market opportunities, so the field became more complicated and in need of a comprehensive analysis and overview.

Planning and Economic Growth

A.K. Das-Gupta

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Planning and Economic Growth (1965) is an analysis of the problem of unemployment in an over-populated, under-developed economy, and of the relation of investment to employment. It goes on to look at the effect of planned economic development on relative prices, in terms of intersectoral expenditure flows, as well as dealing with certain international aspects of economic growth, with special reference to the problem of balance of payments in a developing economy.

Politics and Production in the Early Nineteenth Century

Clive Behagg

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Politics and Production in the Early Nineteenth Century (1990) addresses debates in social history concerning the nature of the labour process under early capitalism and the language of politics. It challenges the standard interpretation of the social relations of production in the workshop sector. Conflict over work reorganization involved very particular constructions of the social world by both employers and workforce. It argues that the social, economic and political facets of these constructs are not separable and casts new light on the context within which different notions of political representation evolved in Britain.

Public Opinion, Ideology and State Welfare

Peter Taylor-Gooby

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Public Opinion, Ideology and State Welfare (1985) provides a comprehensive explanation of the patterns of ideas about the welfare state held by both academics and by the general public. It argues that the crisis in the welfare state in the 1980s was misunderstood by most writers in the UK – both on the left and on the right. It presents an alternative account of current developments both in the welfare state and in popular and academic thinking. The author reviews the state of popular thinking about the welfare state, the development of welfare policy since the Second World War, and the 1980s crisis – using new evidence to support his arguments in all these areas.

Social Clauses and International Trade

An Economic Analysis of Labour Standards in Trade Policy

Göte Hansson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Social Clauses and International Trade (1983) provides a comprehensive survey of working standards in international trade: the clauses in international trade agreements that call for minimum standards for those working to produce the goods being traded. The author looks at the historical background to social clauses and goes on to analyse clauses affecting trade union rights, wages, child labour, hours of work and safety at work. This is followed by a comparison of social clauses with alternative trade policy measures. The economic effects of social clauses are evaluated, as is the equivalence between these and other more traditional forms of protectionist policy.

State and Economy in Contemporary Capitalism

Edited by Colin Crouch

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

State and Economy in Contemporary Capitalism (1979) bridges the gap between practiced concerns and the abstract nature of theories surrounding the function of the state in advanced capitalist societies. Representing different intellectual traditions and ideological standpoints, the contributors are united in their attempt to understand the combination of political, social and economic forces which together have made the position of the state in contemporary capitalism so problematic. These are the problems of state intervention in economic policy of industrial relations and planning; those of public spending, collective consumption and Keynesian strategies.

State Enterprise

Business or Politics?

David Coombes

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

State Enterprise (1971) examines nationalized industries and their political control. It looks at their objectives, and the guidance given to the politicians tasked with running these industries, as well as the qualifications needed, and the performance demanded of them. Many of the contributions to the debate about government-board relations in the nationalized industries were made by economists, but the author concludes, through a thorough analysis of the attempt to apply new methods of economic decision-making, that the results of this debate have not done much to settle the basic problems of running nationalized industries.

State Responsiveness and State Activism

An Examination of the Social Forces and State Strategies that Explain the Rise in Social Expenditures in Britain, France, Germany and Italy, 1870–1968

Jerald Hage , Robert Hanneman , Edward T. Gargan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

State Responsiveness and State Activism (1989) compares social changes and the role of the state. It evaluates which models – economic, modernization, political mobilization, class conflict – best predict the growth in social welfare and in educational expenditures; determines how much the political and administrative centralization of the state, centralization of the administration of social welfare and of education, and institutional autonomy affect state responsiveness to various models; and studies how much state activism in the creation of social welfare and in its centralization affects the political process and the role of class conflict in determining public spending.

States of Emergency

British Governments and Strikebreaking since 1919

Keith Jeffrey , Peter Hennessy

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

States of Emergency (1983) examines the co-ordinated Government planning in Britain to counter major strikes in vital industries, an effort that began in earnest during the aftermath of the First World War. Contingency planning by Whitehall ministers and officials aims to calculate the point at which trade union demands plunge the country into chaos, and how best to mitigate the effects of stoppages in essential services and industries. The dilemmas faced by Lloyd George were familiar to Callaghan and Thatcher, and in addition to being a full investigation into this hidden factor of state power, this book is a real contribution to the administrative history of Britain.

Technological Growth and Social Change

Achieving Modernization

Stanley A. Hetzler

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Technological Growth and Social Change (1969) examines the changes to society brought about by rapid developmental changes. The failure of traditional concepts to explain a rapidly changing social world calls for a redirection of effort, for the opening of new avenues of inquiry. This book represents such an attempt, and challenges the conservative Western concepts of development, classical economics, and the Western economic order.

Technology and the Welfare State

The Influence of Technological Change upon the Development of Health Care in Britain and America

Stephen Uttley

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Technology and the Welfare State (1991) explores the relationship between technological innovation, welfare and levels of economic activity. Drawing on a wide literature spanning many disciplines, it explores the influence of technological change upon the development of health service production in America and Britain since the mid-nineteenth century. The analysis is based upon a broad perspective on technological innovation which embraces changes in social organization. Particular attention is paid to the relationship between government action, long-term changes in economic activity and the course of innovation in health care.

The History of Trade Union Organisation in the North Staffordshire Potteries

W.H. Warburton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

The History of Trade Union Organisation in the North Staffordshire Potteries (1931) is an account, by a potter and trade unionist, of trade unionism in the pottery industry of North Staffordshire. It describes the efforts of a century to create a stable organisation capable of negotiating on equal terms with the employers from the first spasmodic struggles of 1825 down to the establishment of the powerful National Society of Pottery Workers in 1919. As well as being a study of the economic background and working conditions, it is also a study of the growth and organisation of the pottery industry.

The Political Economy of Tolerable Survival

Edited by Maxwell Gaskin

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

The Political Economy of Tolerable Survival (1981) deals with economic issues such as inflation and unemployment in their social and political context and attempts both to isolate and suggest solutions to the problems which confront society. Worsening economic conditions lead to social tensions which are potentially politically disruptive, and this book suggests a varied course of solutions to social and economic stresses, assessing what is tolerable both from a moral angle and in terms of political freedom.

The Retail Environment

Ken Jones , Jim Simmons

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

The Retail Environment (1990) takes a fresh look at the American retailing system. It describes and explains retailing, with a particular emphasis on the problem of store location, and combines a spatial approach to consumer demand with a corporate and institutional view of supply. Linking the theoretical and applied traditions of location analysis, it uses a wealth of real-life examples to illustrate its theoretical points.

The U.S.S.R.

An Economic and Social Survey

S.P. Turin

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

The USSR (1948) examines the social and economic make-up of the Soviet Union in the years following the Second World War. It was a time of rapid industrial development as the economy expanded, and also a time when millions of demobbed servicemen desired rewards for the wartime sacrifices – the demand for greater individual freedom and industrial democracy, and for a higher standard of living were becoming more and more apparent. These factors played parts of large importance in the later development of the USSR in the 1950s.

Tradefull Merchants

The Portrayal of the Capitalist in Literature

John McVeagh

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Tradefull Merchants (1981) surveys the range of English literature from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries and explores the successive new lights in which the commercial character has been depicted in poetry, drama and fiction, and thus in society at large. As capitalism began to develop into the dominant organisation of social life during and after the sixteenth century in England, literature reflected and commented on the profound change in society's attitudes to trade and trading men. Through this survey of literature's attitudes to capitalism the author highlights the close relationship between imaginative writing and the material and social life of the country.

Youth Unemployment

Michael P. Jackson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics and Society

Youth Unemployment (1985) investigates the sustained rise in the level of youth unemployment in the 1980s. Young people are often seen as innocent victims when unemployment spikes, and it is also frequently the case that they are the most vulnerable of job seekers and the group for which unemployment is likely to have the most serious and lasting impact. This book examines the whole issue of unemployment and looks at the policies that were adopted to try and deal with the problem.

Continuity and Change in European Society

Germany, France and Italy since 1870

Martin Kolinsky

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Continuity and Change in European Society (1974) surveys the political and social development of France, Germany and Italy against the background of a wider Europe, showing the complex relationship between political change and social continuity. It deals with the impact of industrialisation on the political structures of each country. Fascism and Nazism are examined in detail, looking at common features and the wider sociological trends. Lastly, the book examines post-1945 Europe and the formation of the European Community. Social and political change in each country is separately charted and the continuing pattern of European social relations is examined.

Economic Divergence in the European Community

Edited by Michael Hodges, William Wallace

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Economic Divergence in the European Community (1981) looks at the widening differences between the economies of the member states of the European Community. The economic designers of the common market had confidently assumed that the removal of trade barriers would bring about a natural convergence among national economies, and an acceleration in the pace of economic growth. This book closely examines the assumptions and suggests ways in which the Community's limited financial instruments and capabilities for co-ordinating economic and monetary policies might better be used to promote these aims.

Economic Integration and Growth in Europe

A.J. Marques Mendes

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Economic Integration and Growth in Europe (1987) is an in-depth study of the economic effects of integration and an analysis of economic growth in the EEC. It develops an alternative framework to the conventional Customs Union approach to the theory of economic integration and uses this new framework to measure the effects of the European experience of economic integration. The main conclusions are that integration has had a large effect on trade and that the benefits of integration have mainly arisen from export growth.

Environmental Profiles of European Business

Dion Vaughan, Craig Mickle

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Environmental Profiles of European Business (1993) surveys the reactions of European businesses to environmental concerns. Basing their findings on detailed and confidential interviews with boardroom executives from the UK, Germany, France, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands, the authors examine leading business sectors, including the automotive, chemical, steel, metal processing and electricity industries. In each case the characteristics of the sector, the environmental pressures, government attitudes and industry responses are described.

Ethics & European Security

Edited by Barrie Paskins

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The alliance between the United States and its Nato partners has been strained severely in recent years. Ethics & European Security (1986) develops a broad understanding of the problem of European security and American backing based on Christian ethics. There are disagreements and differences of emphasis among the contributors but they have in common the view that an exclusive preoccupation with the military dimension is damagingly one-sided. Instead the contributors argue that moral and theological concerns are a vital part of the politics and mechanics of European security and must be incorporated in any effort to devise new policies for security in Europe and the West.

European Industrial Policy

Edited by Graham Hall

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

European Industrial Policy (1986) discusses the effects of industrial policy within a European context. It covers aspects of European industrial policy pursued by the EEC, as well as focusing on specific industries such as cable television, consumer electronics and defence industries. It looks at the attempts to stimulate investment and the role of the small firm sector.

European Technological Collaboration

Margaret Sharp, Claire Shearman

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

European Technological Collaboration (1987) traces the response to international technological competition by European industries and governments, in promoting greater collaboration both in research and development and in new manufacturing and marketing initiatives. It examines the relative position of European industry in high-technology sectors, and the move towards collaboration on the part of industrialists and governments, and it covers European Community programmes such as Esprit, Race, Brite and Eureka. It concludes with a critique of the case for and against collaboration at a European level.

Mental Health Care in the European Community

Edited by Steen P. Møgen

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Mental Health Care in the European Community (1985) is a study of the developments and constraints in the mental health policies of the full-member states of the European Community. Discussion is largely devoted to issues in the Sixties, Seventies and early Eighties, although the contributors have attempted to set each nation's policies in the wider historical context. Each case study links the expansion of psychiatric services 'in the community' to changes occurring in the health and welfare services generally. In so doing the authors describe and assess the scale of political, financial and planning constraints and outline the prospects for mental health care in the EC.

Europe's Domestic Market

Jacques Pelkmans, Alan Winters

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Europe's Domestic Market (1988) provides a critical analysis of the European Community's aim to achieve a unified European domestic market by 1992. It discusses the kind of common market which might be achieved and the economic benefits which might follow. It also explores how far other economic measures need to be undertaken, and the other conditions which may need to be satisfied, if governments, industries and public opinion are to endorse the steps necessary to make the European economy more dynamic. Lastly, some comments are proffered on the potential effects of a unified market on the British economy.

Nursing in the European Community

Edited by Sheila Quinn CBE

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Nursing in the European Community (1980) explains the content and implications of the EEC Nursing Directives in relation to the situation in each of the nine member states, and the context of directives for the other major health professions. The book also discusses freedom of movement of work within the Community and guidelines on the acceptable minimum standards of nurse education.

Free Trade and Competition in the EEC

Law, Policy and Practice

Helen Papaconstantinou

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

To what extent are Member states of the EEC bound to operate under principles of free trade and undistorted competition? How much of a free market really is the EEC in so far as the States themselves are concerned? Free Trade and Competition in the EEC (1988) examines these issues and attempts to establish the conditions under which a State may operate in the market. It looks at the extent to which Member States may intervene and regulate this market through general measures and tamper with free market forces without infringing the principle of free competition and whether state liability can be established.

Planning in Europe

Edited by Jack Hayward, Olga A. Narkiewicz

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Planning in Europe (1978) examines planning in West and East Europe. It gives priority to economic and financial planning, followed by industrial and administrative planning, and social and spatial aspects of planning. The main idea binding all the papers together is the attempt to inter-relate the problems on a national, international and inter-disciplinary basis.

The Barons of European Industry

Edited by Anthony Rowley

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Barons of European Industry (1974) examines the ownership and control of industry in the leading countries of Western Europe. In individual chapters on France, Germany, Britain, Italy, Benelux, the Netherlands, Ireland and Denmark, the authors describe the structure and operation of the large industrial empires of each country. It deals with the power structure and economic base of European industry, as well as with the influential individuals and organizations which dominate it.

The Common Fisheries Policy of the European Community

Mark Wise

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Disputes over fishing rights stir national feelings despite the modest socio-economic importance of fishing in most member states. The Common Fisheries Policy of the European Community (1984) takes an impartial view in examining the development of the European Community's Common Fisheries Policy from its obscure origins in the 1960s to its reform in the 1980s. It draws together the major characteristics of Europe's diverse national fishing industries, and not only sheds light on the complex and often poorly understood workings of the EC itself but also describes the almost insuperable political problems of allocating and conserving an important international resource.

Regional Development in the European Economic Community

Political and Economic Planning

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Regional Development in the European Economic Community (1962) examines the considerable disparities in economic development between the various regions in the original six countries of the EEC. It considers the principles basic to regional policies in general, how far in fact they are influenced by social and how far by economic reasons. Two of the less-developed regions of the Community, Southern Italy and South West France, are then discussed in detail and the various schemes put forward for their development are described and analysed.

Doreen Collins

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Operation of the European Social Fund (1983) examines the process of European integration at work by taking a detailed analysis of one particular area, namely the European Social Fund. It looks at the ESF in itself, its origins, objectives and finance, and the application of the Fund in Britain. A tentative conclusion is formed as to the success of the ESF in promoting British integration into the EC.

The Regions and the European Community

The Regional Response to the Single Market in the Underdeveloped Areas

Edited by Robert Leonardi

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Regions and the European Community (1993) analyses the role of sub-national institutions in the regional economic development process in the EC's less-developed countries: Greece, Ireland, Portugal, Spain and Italy. The advantages and disadvantages of the European single market are examined, as are the impacts of the EC's sectoral policies on the alleviation of regional disparities and an in-depth analysis of the Integrated Mediterranean Programme.

The Romanian Economy in the Twentieth Century

David Turnock

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Romanian Economy in the Twentieth Century (1986) surveys the country's resources and examines the development of the different sectors of the economy. It considers the economy at the different stages of its development, and shows how the depression of the 1930s hit particularly deep, and how this was followed by the destruction of the Second World War. It analyses the adoption of Soviet-style planning and discusses the various attempts to reform this system, as the country changed into the 1980s.

The Spanish Economy in the 20th Century

Joseph Harrison

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

The Spanish Economy in the 20th Century (1985) looks at the trials and tribulations of Spain, one of the most politically isolated and economically backward countries in Europe in the 20th Century. Monarchy, dictatorships, civil war, parliamentary republic – Spain experienced them all and it was not until the much-vaunted 'Spanish miracle' of 1961–73 that the country's economic fortunes began to turn around. Foreign tourists and emigrant remittances, together with foreign capital looking for cheap labour, brought a great deal of rapid economic development that was accelerated by Spain's entry into the EEC.

Western Europe

Technology and the Future

Stanley Woods

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Economics of the European Union

Western Europe (1987) looks at the 'technology gap' myth around the comparison of the high technology industries of Western Europe and those of the United States and Japan. It compares and contrasts the environment for innovation in the US, Japan and Western Europe, analysing differences in the respective technological bases, industrial structures, patterns of demand and government policies to find just where West European frailties lay.

Housing and Homelessness

A Feminist Perspective

Sophie Watson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1986 and written by two leading authorities on the subject, this book tackles the problems of housing, homelessness, and women in the family, from a feminist perspective. It explores how housing helps to reproduce women's role within the family, both today and historically. It looks at the way British society in particular (and western society in general) defines and creates housing 'needs'. It discusses the way housing is provided and allocated to exclude specific forms of household, and describes the experiences of a particular group – single women – upon whom these processes have profound impact.

A Social History of Housing 1815–1985

Second Edition

Professor John Burnett

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1986, for the second edition of this standard text (previously only covering up to 1970) in A Social History of Housing 1815–1985, John Burnett has extended his study to take account of the next fifteen years. It remains a comprehensive and important survey, covering over a century and a half of developments in housing conditions both urban and rural, public and private, and tracing the evolution of mass housing through by-law terraces, back-to-backs and the tower block to the low-rise, high-density estates of the 1980s.

Housing and Identity

Cross-Cultural Perspectives

Edited by James S. Duncan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1982, Housing and Identity: Cross-Cultural Perspectives represents an attempt by scholars in a number of different disciplines to bring a common social-psychological perspective to bear on the study of the house and its relation to the self and the nature of the social order. The house, it is argued, is an extremely important aspect of the built environment, embodying not only personal meanings but expressing and maintaining the ideology of prevailing social orders. The essays draw upon material from a wide variety of intellectual, cultural and historical contexts.

Housing and Family Wealth

Comparative International Perspectives

Edited by Ray Forrest, Alan Murie

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1995, this innovative collection provides a multidisciplinary and cross-national perspective on the links between housing, personal wealth and the family in contemporary society. Reasserting the role of the family and informal networks in housing provision, it counteracts a tendency to view housing issues in the narrow terms of market and state provision. The contributions include analyses from the USA, Japan, Hong Kong, Greece, France, Sweden and Hungary, and this highly international perspective allows the book to address important policy questions and offer new theoretical insights into the way housing is embedded in the wider social structure.

Housing and the State

1919–1944

Marian Bowley

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1945, the purpose of Housing and the State, 1919–1944 was to describe and explain some of the more important conditions which must be satisfied if certain types of housing policy were to be successful. It was this approach that led the author into a discussion of housing policy between 1919 and 1939. During these years the local authorities built over a million houses. This was perhaps the outstanding peace time experiment in state intervention in this country in the provision of a necessity of life, which had formerly been supplied almost exclusively by independent private enterprise. Today it can be read in its historical context.

Housing Policy and the Housing System

Alan Murie , Pat Niner , Christopher Watson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

In the 1970s, although factual information was widely available from the Census and other official sources, our understanding of the true nature of the British housing system – and the relationships at work within it – remained inadequate. Originally published in 1976, this book sets out, by careful examination of the complexities of the system, to improve that understanding and to discuss the implications for policy in the differing roles played by central and local government, developers, builders, the building societies and the voluntary housing movement.

In Search of a Home

Rental and Shared Housing in Latin America

Alan Gilbert

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

First published in 1993, this book filled a conspicuous gap in the literature on housing in the developing world at the time. For many years, self-help settlement and the owner-occupier had commanded the attention of governments and researchers, leaving huge numbers of tenants and sharers invisible. However, the assumption that every family both wished and was able to become an owner-occupier was now under scrutiny and it was becoming clear in many of the larger Latin American cities that there was a limit to universal home ownership, even of the self-help kind. Research activity had begun to respond to changes, and this book put the spotlight on rental and shared housing.

Housing Policy in Developing Countries

Edited by Gil Shidlo

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1990, Housing Policy in Developing Countries attempts an analysis of comparative housing policy – the study of how, why, and to what effect different governments pursue particular courses of action or inaction. Two main strategies can be identified – the demand-side and the supply-side. Policy makers opt for subsidies either to builders (whether they are formal or informal, profit making or non-profit making) or to consumers, or for a combination of both. This book analyses the consequences of those decisions in a wide cross-section of developing countries. Its conclusions will interest all those studying housing in the developing world.

National Housing Finance Systems

A Comparative Study

Mark Boleat

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1985, this book provided a broad review of the range of systems of housing finance used throughout the developed and developing world at the time. It surveys the development of housing finance and the ways in which individual countries, with different economic structures, have coped with the problems of housing finance in periods of severe inflation and fluctuating interest rates. The book opens with two theoretical chapters covering housing finance in developed and developing economies. The framework developed in these chapters is subsequently used to analyse the systems of various countries.

Housing, States and Localities

Peter Dickens , Simon Duncan , Mark Goodwin , Fred Gray

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

A continual problem in modern societies is how housing of a good standard can be provided for all those who need it. Some countries, and some local areas within any one country, have clearly succeeded better than others. Originally published in 1985, this book shows how and why success and failure in housing provision come about. It does this using comparative analysis of two countries – Britain and Sweden – and four localities within Britain – Sheffield, rural Norfolk, Crawley and Brighton. Variation in the levels and forms of housing provision are explained by variations in how housing is built, how state policies are formed, and how consumers react to their housing.

Public Housing

Current Trends and Future Developments

Edited by David Clapham University of Reading, UK, John English

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1987, public rented housing in Britain had undergone many changes in the decade before, which had been accelerated by the policies of the Conservative government since 1979. With financial incentives and the 'right to buy', owner occupation was being vigorously promoted as the 'normal' tenure for the bulk of households, while the public sector was increasingly confined to those on low incomes. At the same time, a severe squeeze on capital and maintenance expenditure was leading to a deterioration in the public stock, and was causing major problems for housing managers. The book surveys the current state of public housing at the time.

The Eclipse of Council Housing

Ian Cole , Robert Furbey

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

First published in 1994, this book explores the birth, growth and decline of public housing in Britain, weighing up its merits and weaknesses. It traces the development of a state housing policy and looks closely at council housing as a lived experience rather than merely as economic artefact. It examines the quality of housing offered by local authorities to their tenants and the responsiveness, democracy and efficiency of housing management, with emphasis on tenant experiences. The authors review New Right arguments for the final eclipse of state housing alongside current initiatives to reform it, and challenge the view that council housing should be consigned to the scrapheap.

The Rebuilding of Britain

W. Craven-Ellis

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

First published in 1935, the original blurb reads: "Believing the gravest of all our National problems is that of Unemployment the author has set himself the task of trying to find a solution which is capable of giving continuity of employment without interfering with or increasing the competition with existing industries. The Building Industry gives the opportunity conditional upon a policy of demolition equal to that of a new building being carried out simultaneously. Every class of property is affected in this scheme of Rebuilding Britain. All slums will definitely be cleared away, never to recur in future generations. ..." Today it can be read in its historical context.

The Economics of Housing Policy

David C. Stafford

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

In the late 1970s, the role of the state in the finance, provision and legal control of housing had increased enormously during the previous sixty years. But, despite massive government intervention in the housing market, the 'housing problem' was considered by many to be worsening. Originally published in 1978, this study critically appraises the nature, extent and economic rationale for government intervention in the private and public housing sectors, and explores the effects of policies through fiscal and social instruments in the specific housing markets. Individual chapters analyse the strategies applied to the owner occupied, private rented and public housing sectors.

The Myth of Home Ownership

Private versus Public Choices in Housing Tenure

J. Kemeny

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Housing

Originally published in 1981, in this controversial study Dr Kemeny aims to show that owner-occupation is not an inherently superior form of housing tenure to renting. He questions the overwhelming emphasis upon owner-occupation in English-speaking countries as reflected by most politicians and many academics, and argues that the deep emotional commitment to home ownership has prevented both the objective analysis of housing tenure and the emergence of environmental policies that maximise choice. In conclusion Dr Kemeny argues that English-speaking countries should abandon their one-sided policies and aim to develop real choice of tenure in their housing systems.
