Susan E. Schwartz talks about Absence, Psyche, and the Unseen Forces that Shape Us.

A deep dive into her celebrated writings and her upcoming release, Absent Fathers, Yearning Sons: A Jungian Analysis of the Father–Son Dynamic (May 2026).

I write on many topics from the perspective of Jungian analytical psychology with its in-depth approach to the personality and outer relationality to culture. This approach includes the unconscious made conscious through complexes, archetypes and symbols appearing in life events, personal and collective relationships, and dreams. Each reveals the origins, the potentials and paradoxes, the issues and problems and their release and resolution. The personality is imagined, issues perceived, and their solutions come to us through books, media of all kinds, mythology, fairy tales, movies and literature. Depending on each culture and era, the various roles and images reflect our collective and personal psyches.

My books evolved from being privy to the numerous stories told in Jungian analytical treatment. They derive from colleagues, friends and personal experiences of emotional deprivations suffered from being without sufficient love and care. These are the common and necessary desires sadly unmet but passed down through the generations. From sitting with these stories of life lived and stifled, crushed and desired, the energy emerged to annotate and share the sufferings and the obstacles overcome. The absence, loss and accompanying melancholy and the residual lack are palpable through tracing the array of feelings and their effects.

The body and awareness of its care are integral to the functioning of psychological life. Many people report being numb and checked out of feelings, emotionally and physically. Throughout the life span, these are often forgotten as essential aspects of growth.

The books all include other approaches, including the perspectives of French psychoanalyst André Green on the dead father effect, British psychoanalyst Donald Winnicott on the false self, and the theory of abjection from French psychoanalyst Julia Kristeva. I include cross-disciplinary perspectives from the American philosophers Judith Butler and Martha Nussbaum. Of interest to therapy professionals are chapters addressing issues of transference/countertransference and the reflective, symbolic and transcendent functions in Jungian analytical treatment.

The problems reach to the intrapsychic depths and archetypal roots—issues of self and culture wherein lie the complex aspects and the patriarchal biases. My books are relevant for those wanting to understand the complex dynamics affecting personality development and developing the capacity to be authentically true to oneself. Each of the chapters addresses multiple responses, while each personal story has collective repercussions.

Our era is facing unexpected destruction and demise; the world as we knew it has crumbled.

The need is there to examine the interior processes, heighten awareness and enrich understanding. The tide to conform, not look or look away, is strong.

Why do people want to ignore, limit, freeze, believe the empty and arid promises and lies blithely tossed into the wind? This is a form of fascism touting the emptiness of a shallow life with automatic response against the anxieties, threats and terrors of destruction. Becoming conscious of the danger and accessing the personal and collective unconscious seems a way through.

The awareness of these inner psychological states and their effect on our lives depends on our emotional and psychological consciousness. Jungian analytical thought focuses on uniting with the unconscious, enlivening awareness.

The reality of the psyche, including the unconscious, fosters growth and development even amid despair.

The focus sheds light not only on the symptoms and problems but also on the treatment and hope. The chapters contain composite examples of personal narratives with their collective repercussions in the journey through dreams, interior reflections and relationships. These reflect how we live in the world, not separate from it. The narrations allow readers to identify with the private and intimate examples of the obstacles expressing life tensions and challenges and the possibilities for development. Interspersed are quotes from a variety of literary and philosophical writers.

In my research I focus on what has been absent, unexplored, the niches emerging from the Jungian, psychoanalytic and psychological genres. This means addressing issues about fathers, the puella personality type, narcissism with its lack of intimacy and defence of singularity, the concept of the 'as-if' personality so little explored since its psychoanalytical description in the 1940s. Each of the books is constructed with a theme and connection to the previous ones. They interweave a larger picture of life in the twenty-first century.

Looking backwards means coming forwards.

This is all laced with the hope to move out of old entrenched positions into new relationships.

The emphasis is on how to stay conscious of the hurt, cynicism, denial or avoidance and use experiences for development out of the absences.

This is the betrayal, the lack of fulfilling the good promises, the support and love deprived. It means emerging from the ashes to the creative. It means recognizing the pain in the lack, the spaces unrepaired and missing. But it also means by doing so the person realises their self-expression. Jung wrote in an essay entitled 'Women in Europe' that it was up to women to move the story onward. In doing that, these books attempt to expand from absence and lack to knowledge and assertion to take one's place as they see fit. The contexts of loss, rage, longing, wounds, despair and emptiness are significant entry gates to transformation.

Rather than engage in a return to what was the traditional pattern, the Jungian process of individuation is the process of personality becoming and recognizes the responsibility to understand what is lacking and move beyond it.

As Jung put it, 'Personality is the supreme realization of the innate idiosyncrasy of a living being... the absolute affirmation of all that constitutes the individual'. As the stories told in these books illustrate, the quandary of becoming a complete self entails transgressing beyond the traditional into the unexplored passions of life. The journey towards embracing a more embodied self, although fraught with uncertainty, leads to conscious repair, recognition of the unconscious, and a greater sense of solidity and internal soul connection.

The personality continues to search. Internal examination brings the conscious and unconscious into alignment, helps break the old traps, betrayals, abandonments and losses. Jungian analytical thought is an attempt to articulate a problem that is, or should be, preoccupying in our times.

To accept the reality of lack opens the door to new experiences. Filling the absence means going into and through the feelings and emotions playing havoc with one's mind, body and soul.

One walks a long road from illusions and wishes towards authenticity and reality. Integration occurs through encountering the oppositions between 'as-if' and the real and accepting the shadow and the abject in psyche and body. To do this, one must betray the collusion with the roles detrimental to one's individual style and find supportive ones. It takes time, often more than imagined, to acknowledge the personal and collective historical memories marked by unrequited desires and losses. Here is the psychological work to be done, part of which is consciously feeling the hurt to move through it.

I write to fill the gaps. The challenge is to be real and to access the reality of the psyche as Jung contended. This is most significant in our social media, digitalized and computer worlds. Analysis disturbs the enclosure in old narratives and upsets the former balance as it was imbalance. The purpose, therefore, is not to reconstruct what was but to regain another synthesis of psychological elements. New forms open ways to retranslate and discover what is now possible. It is a re-centring and receptivity to images, the creative, the other aspects within to be able to expand beyond the predictable. The process requires examining the past, finding ways for self-care and rebuilding related inner images. The person uses the acquired psychological flexibility and elasticity gained from the unconscious sources brought into conscious life. This is to carve out the new, to educate, to solve issues and find potentials beyond the previous and conventional.

A woman dreamt that before her were many old books and an iPad and iPhone, all mixed together, and she had an urge to explore each one. She could not wait to have the time for them all. She reflected the dream meant her continued enthusiasm to know more, to keep on no matter her age; her thirst for learning had neither ended nor had it been quenched. She felt free to hope, and even though she could recognize huge chunks had been taken from her with an absent father, she had moved from despair and deprivation into being inquisitive and curious for more self-knowledge. A quote from the French feminist Simone de Beauvoir provides an answer to the absence:

"I saw opening out before me a clearly marked field of activity, with all its problems, its hard work, its materials, its instruments, and its inflexibility. I no longer asked myself: what shall I do?

There was everything to be done, everything I had formerly longed to do . . . but everything was possible."

Absent Fathers, Yearning Sons

A Jungian Analysis of the Father-Son Dynamic

This fascinating book examines the profound psychological and cultural consequences of father absence, a topic often overlooked in Jungian explorations of the psyche, clinical studies and case examples. Through vivid vignettes, Schwartz delves into the generational trauma and neglected complexities of the father/son relationship. She highlights how the absence of a father figure shapes individual and collective experiences, offering insights into the psychological impact and the broader cultural implications.

Jennifer Bryan

talks about The Emotional Side of Organisational Change: How to Survive and Thrive

Change is emotional. Every shift in direction, every new system, every reorganisation triggers a surge of human feeling: fear, frustration, hope, confusion, excitement, resistance, and yet, in most organisations, these emotions are the very thing leaders feel least equipped to deal with.

This book lifts the lid on the part of change leadership that's so often overlooked: how people feel because change doesn't fail due to poor strategy or weak planning. It fails because leaders underestimate the emotional reality people are living through. It explores why emotions drive behaviour, how they shape reactions to change, and what leaders can do to turn emotional resistance into resilience and momentum.

The Emotional Side of Organizational Change: How To Survive and Thrive helps leaders and managers navigate complex change by using one key differentiator: it places emotion and the "end person in mind" at the centre of successful transformation. This book pulls back the curtain on the human impact of change and gives leaders the one capability they cannot afford to ignore: the ability to lead people through emotion with clarity, compassion, and confidence.

Sharing findings from some of the latest research conducted on the behavioural elements of leading change, the book is a practical guide with a unique approach that has been tried and tested in a multitude of organisations on how to lead people through complexity and uncertainty so they are resilient and the organisation is future ready.

Whether you're a functional business leader, HR professional, or change-maker, this book shows you how to navigate constant change with confidence, lead people through uncertainty, and build an organisation that's truly future-ready.

USPs:

- Doesn't shy away from the key issue around change – emotion!
- Digestible and easy to read. It gives the reader practical examples and steps to follow without a lot of jargon.
- Presents change from a holistic perspective that enables organisations to be ready for the future.

Endorsements

"The Emotional Side of Organisational Change boldly delves into one of the often-overlooked, misunderstood, and messy aspects of change – the people bit! As we attempt to navigate a volatile and fast-moving future world of work, this book provides practical, actionable, and solidly researched strategies to build the necessary structure, vision, and support to win collective hearts and minds."

*- Dr Nicola Millard, Principal Innovation Partner at
BT Business CTO*

"Drawing on her extensive practical experience and academic expertise, Jennifer delivers another must read on the topic of change. Approaching change with structure and pragmatism, this book serves as a valuable springboard for anyone managing, implementing, or navigating organizational change."

- Mark Catchlove, Director - Insight Group, MillerKnoll Global Research & Planning

"As a professional that has dedicated her career to helping organizations through change, Jennifer's insights are spot on. Change is about navigating people, and their emotions, forward. So those factors cannot be ignored. As the speed of change increases, so must the skill with which we enable it."

- Kay Sargent, Director of Thought Leadership, Interiors, HOK

"This book doesn't just discuss change—it dives deep into the human experience behind it! Jennifer Bryan understands that transformation isn't just about strategy or execution; it's about people. Too often, leaders discount the paramount importance of human-centered change and that's why this book is a wake-up call. Jennifer's approach is a real, practical, and urgently needed. If you want to drive change and create meaningful impact, every leader should read this before leading their next transformation!"

*- Lou Robey, Award Winning Lead Change Manager at BBC
(APM Award 2013 & Change Awards 2024), Keynote Speaker &
Presenter of Podcasts 'Voices on the Edge of Change'.*

"Jennifer has written a book that directly addresses the most important challenge of our era - in an age of perpetual societal and technological change - people still matter most! The Emotional Side of Organizational Change cuts through the noise of change theory to deliver practical, honest, and achievable insights. It should be on every leader's desk who wants to turn uncertainty into opportunity through empathy and clarity."

- Guy Sorrill, Managing Director of Sysdoc

"Right now, we need leaders who can 'Stop, Breathe, Listen' like never before. Jennifer's book pragmatically offers us an approach to change that foregrounds the emotions and enables us to make wiser choices."

- Megan Reitz, Associate Fellow at Saïd Business School, Oxford University and Author of 'Speak Out, Listen Up'

"What an insightful, practical, and relevant guide to keeping your people and supporting them through change. Jen brings a wealth of experience across sectors, highlighting what truly works—as well as the often unseen blind spots—so we can all benefit from her hard-won insight. Definitely recommended if you're leading or navigating change."

- Melanie Stancliffe, Employment Partner at Cripps

"Jennifer Bryan highlights the critical aspects of human behaviour that few dare to address—emotions matter when leading people. Refreshingly direct and practical, The Emotional Side of Organizational Change, challenges the status quo and offers essential solutions for leading positive change. Bryan's message is vital; without it, we risk leading from a place of ignorance".

Robin Landa

talks about The Secret to Getting Stuff Done,
The Non-Negotiable Mindset

Most productivity advice focuses on motivation and willpower. But daily, we negotiate with ourselves: call the client now or later, write the proposal today or tomorrow. Research on decision fatigue shows that every choice depletes mental energy, increasing procrastination. By the time you've debated whether to act, hesitation has decided for you.

The Secret to Getting Stuff Done reveals something counterintuitive: high-performers don't rely on discipline—they design it out. The Non-Negotiable mindset eliminates hesitation by transforming critical actions into pre-commitments, removing internal debate. Unlike traditional habit formation, which depends on repetition, this method begins with automation: behavioral design applied to productivity.

The four-step framework:

- Identify what matters to your Future Self
- Focus on the critical actions that move the needle
- Act consistently, regardless of motivation
- Make it non-negotiable: no debates, no hesitation, no excuses

By replacing self-negotiation with structured follow-through, readers reclaim time, sharpen focus, and boost productivity.

International Market Appeal

Globally, professionals face unprecedented change. As AI takes on routine work, the competitive advantage lies in judgment and reliable execution. In 2026, success won't hinge on who has the best idea, but on who acts while others deliberate.

This book speaks to that moment. It's productivity redesigned for the attention economy, offering a culturally adaptable framework that transcends borders: a system that guarantees follow-through.

For international audiences seeking sustainable productivity amid constant distraction, this book reframes the problem: when action becomes non-negotiable, results follow.

Key Selling Points

- Counterintuitive approach: Replaces willpower with behavioral design
- Practical framework: Four concrete steps, not abstract theory
- Research-backed: Grounded in decision fatigue and behavioral science
- Culturally adaptable: Universal principles applicable across global markets
- Timely relevance: Addresses productivity challenges in the Attention Economy
- Expert author: 27+ books, published in Fast Company, Harvard Business Review, Inc.

Endorsements

"In this remarkable guide, Professor Landa distills the complexities of personal and professional growth into a clear, step-by-step framework, empowering readers to navigate obstacles and achieve what truly matters. A must-read for anyone ready to turn ambition into accomplishment.

Robin Landa's latest book, The Secret to Getting Stuff Done: The Non-Negotiable Mindset, is as illuminating as it is actionable. In this remarkable guide, she distills the complexities of personal and professional growth into a clear, step-by-step framework, empowering readers to navigate obstacles and achieve what truly matters. Professor Landa's insights, combined with anecdotal wisdom and actionable strategies, make this book an indispensable resource for anyone eager to meet their future self with confidence and purpose. It is a must-read for those committed to turning ambitions into accomplishments.

Through her methodical approach and drawing on what's worked in her own creative, academic, and business life, she bridges the gap between intention and action, guiding readers to adopt a mindset that prioritizes what truly matters. The book unfolds as a practical roadmap, urging individuals to confront self-imposed barriers and take definitive steps toward their aspirations. By blending anecdotal wisdom with actionable strategies, Professor Landa nurtures a transformative experience that resonates deeply with those striving for meaningful change."

- Dr. Chris Stout, psychologist and Founding Director, Center for Global Initiatives

"Landa's will "help you get stuff done!" She identifies the pain points that stand in the way of productivity and offers actionable strategies for building the momentum needed to get going and achieve your long-term goals."

*- Aaris Sherin, Professor of Graphic Design,
St. John's University, NY*

"In the age of infinite scroll and 6-second attention spans, focus is basically an endangered species. Robin Landa slices through the chaos with clear advice that actually works. A must-read for setting your future self up for success.

We're all out here pretending we'll start fresh Monday. Robin gets it. This book is the no-BS, culturally-aware kick you need to break the negotiation cycle and finally get things done."

- Brooke Roderick, Creative Director, Red Antler

"Every day, we are confronted with choices - both monumental and inconsequential - that seem to rob us of our autonomy. The Secret to Getting Stuff Done: The Non-Negotiable Mindset is not solely a book about action; it is a tool to hijack your internal code and reshape it for the life you know you deserve but may be afraid to pursue. Robin's approach strips fear of its grip and allows us to arrive."

He has written many specialist articles, has been editor and contributor to several books, and is author of three books: Strategic Stakeholder Engagement, Who Needs Nuclear Power, and Desalination and Water Security.

Chris Anastasi

talks about Lifetime Carbon Debt

The evidence that our climate is changing and that this is caused by increasing emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases is compelling. The question is what actions are needed to reduce emissions and to minimise the risk of greater global warming and further disruption to our environment going forward.

Government, along with industry and the wider business community, are key stakeholders in our efforts to decarbonise economic activity. The former set emissions targets for their countries and bring in policies and measures to encourage industry and other organisations to help deliver them. The individual is involved, albeit indirectly, as a consumer of goods and services that result in carbon emissions and as a taxpayer to help fund climate mitigation activities, but they are much less involved directly in emissions reduction. This book attempts to empower the individual to take responsibility for their own greenhouse gas emissions.

Individuals accumulate 'carbon debt' throughout their lives. The polluter-pays principle is well established for environmental issues but is usually applied to companies; less well-established is the idea that individuals that have benefited from the use of fossil fuels should be the ones to help address the associated greenhouse gas emissions. To do this an individual must first estimate the carbon emissions from their normal activities; they may initially focus on their annual emissions, or they may decide to address their lifetime emissions, or both. Armed with this information, they will then want to explore their options to repay their annual or lifetime debt consistent with their personal circumstances.

Lifetime Carbon Debt addresses these issues, providing the information and analysis to empower the individual to act where they are in a position to do so. It also highlights the major contribution a community of like-minded individuals in a country, or in concert with similar communities in other countries, can make in our efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, and limit the effects of climate change.

Emmanuel Gobbillot

Described as 'the first leadership guru for the digital generation' and 'the freshest voice in leadership today', Emmanuel has advised organisations across the globe on developing leaders, establishing teams, and changing cultures.

One of Europe's most sought-after leadership speakers, he is the author and co-author of 8 UK and US bestselling books. 2024 saw him released a fully updated version of his seminal book The Connected Leader published by De Gruyter, along with a new book This is Not a Leadership Book published by Routledge which sealed his place as one of the world's foremost management thinkers. His new book Alive Inside – Unlocking Your Leadership Advantage in the Age of AI will be released in January 2026.

For over 20 years his work has been based on his mantra – 'there must be a better way and together we can find it'.

A French National, Emmanuel moved to the UK in 1985. He holds an International Baccalaureate from the United World College of the Atlantic, a MA (Hons) from the University of St. Andrews and a Diploma in Management Science from the Nottingham Trent University.

talks about Alive Inside: Unlock Your Leadership Advantage in the Age of AI

In Alive Inside I offer a counter-narrative in a market saturated with books that either worship or fear AI. Instead of debating the technology, I wanted to reframe the crisis.

AI is not replacing us. We are replacing ourselves.

The threat of AI isn't that AI is becoming more human, nor that it, or the leaders who use it, will replace those who don't. The real threat comes from leaders out-automating themselves.

Drawing on vivid historical storytelling, cutting-edge AI research, global case studies, and over two decades advising CEOs around the world, I argue that the age of automation demands radical humanity rather than technical superiority. Leaders have spent decades optimising and polishing themselves to such an extent that they resemble the very systems they now fear.

In Alive Inside I diagnose this drift and provide a compelling roadmap back to the human capacities AI cannot imitate (intuition, moral courage, emotional resonance, presence, and narrative meaning making).

The seven principles that anchor the book along with their supporting case studies, blend neuroscience with the drama of real leadership. What emerges is not just a philosophical provocation, but a deeply practical manual, showing leaders how to reclaim agency in a world of nudges, resist performative perfectionism, cultivate authentic connection, and lead with clarity in ambiguity.

The age of AI doesn't need super-humans but humans willing to show up fully alive. Alive inside is what AI can never be, what organisations need you to be and what too many leaders have forgotten how to be.

For publishers, I wanted Alive Inside to sit at the intersection of the leadership, psychology, and future-of-work/AI categories. With a warm, accessible tone that is readily translatable, the book's message is universal: every society wrestling with AI is simultaneously wrestling with the question of what human leadership should now be.

Alive Inside is not a book about surviving technology. It is a book about what must survive it. I hope editors seeking a timely, distinctive, and globally resonant leadership title, will agree that it is a compelling and urgent addition to any list!

talks about Happy Grow Lucky: Build a Thriving Career and Find Happiness at Work for Life

Careers are like relationships; they are complex, critical, and you don't often get a second chance to get it right. Happy Grow Lucky give readers that chance.

Happy Grow Lucky's insights are built on in-depth interviews with 45 global Chief Human Resources Officers (CHROs) from some of the biggest companies on the planet totalling over $1 trillion in revenues. It showcases these senior leaders' life-tested career stories as they candidly share their mistakes, learnings, and best practices, giving readers an unprecedented look into their career journeys.

The book's scope is truly global and features CHROs from across the world. Besides being from English-speaking markets like the US, the UK or India, four are from France, three from Latin America, two from Japan, and two from Germany. The group interviewed include a dozen CHROs of Fortune 500 companies such as adidas, Heineken, Panasonic or UPS.

Along the way, the book's research busts conventional career management myths and lays out the best practices that drive long-term professional success. It introduces the concepts of Career Health and Career Therapy and provides a practical and actionable method to help readers (re)build a successful and fulfilling career, at any stage of their life.

Happy Grow Lucky is for readers who want to play the long game and build a global career over years and decades. It is a book that you come back to every couple of years for a lifetime, even as you get into your legacy years. It is also a book you gift to your junior colleagues to set them on the right path and to your friends to help inspire them.

Happy Grow Lucky is a Masterclass in career-building and will benefit any professional who is looking to learn from the best while building their global career.

talks about Why Nature Matters: Supporting Children's Learning and Wellbeing Through Nature

Why Nature Matters is a call to rewild children alongside the call to rewild the planet. It provides a compelling narrative for why children need nature connection for wellbeing and development, and why any plans for sustainability and regeneration should include them.

Grounded in evidence-based practice and scientific research, Why Nature Matters gives voice to children everywhere who are increasingly suffering from nature deficit disorder. The book provides a clear framework in the Nature Connection Pyramid which outlines how to bring nature back into the lives of children in simple yet profound ways, building foundational, pre-verbal connections with nature which mimics the developmental stages of the brain. Neuroscience shows how important early brain development is and how vital it is to nurture it for a successful, sustainable and healthy future for each child.

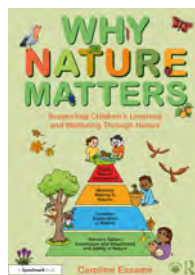

Alongside the theory, the book suggests practical, fun activities for teachers, parents and carers to engage children in the natural world. It shows exactly how children benefit from splashing in puddles, climbing trees and rolling down hills; why they grow with every seed they plant and flower they tend; and how forests and hills, rivers and seas, gardens and parks are the perfect playground for their minds and bodies to thrive.

It is not an argument for a return to the countryside; but rather to recognise the need for people – particularly children – to have access to the natural world. This can be full immersion in forest bathing; or a pot-plant on a windowsill. Why Nature Matters adds one more voice to the growing call for change, reconnecting children with nature to make a positive difference to themselves and to the world.

What people are saying about the book:

"The book is timely. The best antidote to the distractions of the virtual world is immersion in nature. This book is important, engagingly written, and a must read for all of us concerned about raising better humans."

- Lord Jim Knight, former UK Schools Minister

author of Teacher Autonomy: Where Has It Gone and Why We Need It Back, is a primary teacher, wellbeing consultant, and founder of Mindfulness for Learning. She advocates for greater autonomy in education while supporting the wellbeing of educators, families, and children.

Her commitment to improving the lives of teachers, parents, and pupils began during her years working in inner London primary schools, where she witnessed a growing decline in mental health and overall wellbeing. With over a decade of teaching experience, half of it as a Mental Health and Wellbeing Lead, she has developed a deep understanding of the pressures faced by school communities.

Sophie has trained in mindfulness with the Mindfulness in Schools Project and the Oxford Mindfulness Foundation, developing both a personal practice and the skills to teach others. She now supports schools, educators, and families through conference speaking, writing, 1:1 online sessions, and producing and hosting her wellbeing-focused podcast.

talks about Teacher Autonomy: Where Has It Gone And Why We Need It Back

Teacher Autonomy: Where Has It Gone And Why We Need It Back is an exploration of how educators can retain their autonomy in a system defined by high-stakes accountability and increasing prescription. After nearly sixteen years in education, I have never experienced such troubled times. Educators are leaving the profession in alarming numbers, the wellbeing of both staff and children is at an all-time low, and prescription and fidelity to schemes have become the norm rather than the exception.

As a child, I remember the excitement of encountering a wide variety of teachers, each with their own personality, passions and ways of bringing learning to life. As an educator, I still hold that same excitement about sharing unique parts of myself with the children in my care. Teaching should be rich in variety, experience and individuality. These are the qualities that allow us to connect, to build warmth and trust, and to make school life fun, ever-changing and genuinely engaging.

Yet the rise in high-stakes accountability, the diminishing trust in educators, and the relentless push for standardisation are steadily draining the life out of our profession. The over-reliance on schemes and scripted approaches is leaving both educators and children bored, disconnected and unmotivated. When we remove the human element, the creativity, the responsiveness and the personality—we lose what makes teaching and learning meaningful.

This book ignites an urgent conversation about autonomy. It examines why it matters, what happens when it is eroded, and how we can begin to reclaim it even within restrictive systems. Rather than simply criticising current structures, it offers practical, grounded solutions for challenging or working with the forces that suppress independence in schools.

Ultimately, this book is a manifesto for educators who want change and who want their independence back. It aims to give readers the confidence and language to question what is happening around them and to make choices that protect their professional identity. A reminder that teaching can still feel human, varied and genuinely our own.

talks about High Performance Learning: How to Become a World Class School, 10th Anniversary Edition

Are we educating our students in a way that fits them for life in the modern world? Most people think not. 10 years ago, Deborah Eyre challenged educators to rethink education in the light of overwhelming research evidence that suggests we can educate students in a way that makes them future proof; academically successful, happy, enterprising and with the intellectual confidence to enable them to face challenges ahead. Plus, crucially, we can achieve this for every student not just some students. Everyone can become a high performer if we systematically grow their brains.

In the first edition of this bestselling book the ground-breaking, pedagogical model High Performance Learning was introduced to schools. This curriculum-neutral model takes what we know from research about how the most successful learners think and learn; creating schools who deliberately focus on building mastery of the key 'success' competencies in every student and in every lesson. 10 years later this approach is being used in multiple countries and school leaders in schools around the world have found they can achieve amazing results for students and a more positive yet ambitious culture across the school.

This 10th Anniversary Edition brings the ideas up to date. In addition to the original content it includes the latest learning science research, plus case studies drawn from numerous schools implementing the HPL model, including practice examples, quotes from leaders, teachers, students and parents as well as robust impact data. This new book also reflects on lessons learned through working with schools over this period and how to get the best out of High Performance Learning.

talks about The Ball: Regaining Your Focus on What Matters Most in Work and Life

The Ball breaks the mold of the typical professional development book. Instead of giving leaders lists of strategies that they must enact, it uses a thoughtful, engaging parable to grab readers' attention in a fresh new way and make learning fun.

Presented as a beautifully designed short story, The Ball tells about a veteran teacher who reconnects with a former student who manages her local grocery store. The store has fallen on hard times. The teacher and former student reunite and confront the separate and unique challenges that have knocked them off course. Through each other, they find their way back on track. The lessons they learn during their journey will resonate with everyone.

The book's takeaways are timeless and universal and will apply to leaders in any kind of school setting, large or small, urban or rural, across the world. The takeaways also apply to business leaders and leaders in other settings. Readers can use the book for their own inspiration, or to kick off staff meetings with their school or organization. The tale will help staff reengage with their priorities and consider what they value most, while feeling inspired along the way.

The new edition is accompanied by a three-part study guide that will help individuals and teams get the most out of the book. The first questions are for personal reflection. Then there are questions for professional reflection. And finally, there are questions for team reflection, so teams can work on the book together if desired. The Ball makes a great book for people to buy individually, or to buy copies of for your whole team, or to buy as a gift to someone on your staff or even in your family who could use an extra boost of inspiration.

talks about Trauma-Informed Practice in Early Education: Making a Lifetime's Difference

Early in the book I offer the world's worst "spot the difference" competition. On the left, me at 4 months expressing extravagant displeasure; on the right some lambs of similar age from next door. Of the obvious differences – woolly, sweet – one really matters. Those lambs are almost independent little sheep. I'll need years more to get to that level. The reason for this tells us why there are no sheep at the North Pole or on space stations, but also why early trauma can have impacts that cross generations, and why early educators – just by doing what they do well – can make a lifetime's difference.

Humans are born unfinished. Over the following years information from our experiences tells us what kind of world we are born into, and we develop a brain and body suited to that world. This makes us adaptable and therefore so successful and resilient as a species, compared to the more restricted options of a "one sheep fits all" approach. But it has costs and trade-offs. A child who (even before birth) is exposed to difficulty and threat will develop to match this. Perhaps action is prioritised over lots of language, self-reliance over social skills, rapid switching attention over steady cognition.

That helps survival – literally for some children – but has long term costs. Metabolically, that kind of brain and body is at higher risk of later health issues. And that child adapted to difficulty and danger is not so well shaped for the safer and more stable worlds of school or workplace. They might stick out as "disordered" with frequent fight, flight, freeze and flop responses that interfere with learning or get misunderstood as poor behaviour.

This is where early educators come in. We can provide a different world. Not one of difficulty and threat, but of interest, stimulation, joy, kind company, conversation and welcome – for children and their families. It changes the script, changes the outcomes, changes the lives. My book is about how to do it, and how staff can look after themselves and each other while they do.

talks about why guidance on developing literacy skills is so vital and timely for teachers and educators in Literacy Essentials for Every Teacher

Literacy skills underpin success in every subject; they shape life chances, and right now they represent one of the defining challenges facing schools and teachers.

Every day, teachers see students struggling to read complex texts, articulate ideas clearly, or write extended responses with confidence. Reading habits are in decline, and children's language development is increasingly under threat, with artificial intelligence introducing new pressures and uncertainties for the future of literacy.

Falling national reading and writing trends, the unchecked spread of misinformation across digital media, alongside the lingering impact of COVID-era disruption, have combined to create a perfect storm for schools. Teachers and leaders recognise the literacy barriers that hold pupils back but often feel less sure about why these issues arise or which practical steps will make the greatest difference.

This book aims to offer a sustainable solution for securing high standards in reading, writing, vocabulary, and talk across every classroom. Designed for busy teachers and leaders, Literacy Essentials for Every Teacher provides a comprehensive, accessible guide to the literacy knowledge and practices that educators need to know.

The book is built around four crucial strands: reading, writing, talk and vocabulary. Each section addresses What teachers need to know and What teachers can do. Additional chapters explore literacy assessment, as well as literacy and special educational needs.

Too often teachers learn about literacy development in theory but struggle to translate it into daily practice. This book bridges that gap. From spelling and handwriting to reading fluency and explicit vocabulary instruction, Literacy Essentials connects the foundational skills that lead to advanced academic success.

Drawing on extensive work with hundreds of schools and colleges, and a robust body of research evidence, the book concludes with a powerful vision: literacy not as a bolt-on initiative, but as an accessible daily habit embedded in every classroom. With examples spanning early years to college, it offers the practical insight educators need at a time when literacy challenges are rising.

When teachers embed great literacy practices, they equip every child with the skills to thrive in school, college, and a rapidly changing world.

talks about The Brain that Loves to Laugh: A Visual Guide to Humour and Human Connections in the Early Years

This highly accessible and deeply engaging book presents a groundbreaking exploration of the transformative power of laughter, joy, hope, and human connection in early childhood development and education. Far from being frivolous, these emotional experiences are positioned as essential drivers of cognitive growth, emotional wellbeing, and resilience in children.

Grounded in interdisciplinary research from neuroscience and psychology to education and child development, the book argues that emotional connection, particularly through humour and play, is fundamental to how children learn, communicate, and thrive. Through compelling case studies, expert interviews, and original research, the author shows how laughter reduces cognitive load, hope fosters motivation, and relationships build the neural architecture required for learning.

The book journeys through the developmental stages from birth to early school years, showing how humour evolves and supports brain development at every age. It covers the anatomy of laughter, the science of brain synchrony, the biological impact of smiling, and the interplay between emotion and memory. Practical examples from classrooms, family life, and media illustrate how emotionally attuned environments enhance creativity, social bonds, and executive function.

Chapters also explore systemic change, including play-based learning environments, solution-focused practices, and a "Curriculum of Hope", advocating for educational structures that prioritise curiosity, agency, and inclusion. Innovative methods highlight the message: joy is serious pedagogy.

Practical and action-focussed: Ultimately, this book is a call to action - urging educators, caregivers, and policymakers to reframe laughter not as a distraction, but as a critical ingredient in the recipe for human flourishing. In the context of childhood learning and development... it's time we took that seriously.

Expert authorship: As an author and researcher, I took a deep dive into interrelated areas of work and conducted my own research as a background to the content contained in this interactive book. The generosity of other researchers throughout the world underpins it with a multitude of credible viewpoints presented via case studies and videos.

Unique: it immerses the reader in the world of academia without overwhelming them with unnecessary jargon that can often impede meaning.

Brandy Tackett

is a veteran educator, turnaround principal, and experienced school leader with more than two decades of service in high-needs communities. She has served as a teacher, instructional coach, assistant principal, and principal, successfully transforming multiple low-performing schools through a blend of emotional intelligence, instructional expertise, and an unwavering commitment to students and staff.

Brandy's leadership is rooted in the belief that emotionally intelligent leaders create emotionally safe schools - and that culture, not compliance, drives lasting success. Her work is known for being practical, transparent, and deeply relational. Throughout her career, she has raised school performance, strengthened MTSS systems, rebuilt cultures impacted by burnout, and implemented sustainable structures that empower teachers to improve student outcomes.

In addition to her school leadership roles, Brandy has provided professional development for educators and school teams, as well as district leaders with a focus on resilience, communication, meaningful feedback, and creating positive school cultures. She continues to mentor and support emerging leaders through coaching and collaborative learning.

Brandy lives in Florida with her husband, children, and grandchildren, and continues to serve her community through education, advocacy, and leadership development.

Brandy Tackett

talks about Emotionally Intelligent School Leadership: Lead with Heart, Transform with Purpose

Emotionally Intelligent School Leadership: Lead with Heart, Transform with Purpose fills a critical gap in the literature on school leadership by centering emotional intelligence not as an optional soft skill, but as the core driver of effective school improvement - especially in high-needs and turnaround environments. Written by a veteran educator and principal with more than twenty years of experience transforming struggling schools, the book blends research, practical strategies, and lived experience to show leaders how to build schools where staff, students, and families thrive.

The book was inspired by the author's leadership experiences in high-poverty schools - places where teacher burnout was high, systems were fractured, and students needed more than compliance and routine. Through trial, error, and deeply personal reflection, she discovered that the most significant shifts occurred when she led with emotional intelligence: improving communication, fostering psychological safety, addressing culture killers, giving meaningful feedback, and modeling the behavior she hoped to see in others. This realization became the spark for a framework that has reshaped the climate and performance of multiple schools under her leadership.

What sets this book apart is its combination of authenticity, practicality, and emotional depth. Each chapter tackles real challenges school leaders face - negativity, resistance, conflict, ineffective communication, loneliness in leadership, and the complex emotional labor of helping others grow. The scenarios and tools are rooted in real school experiences, giving readers insight they can immediately apply. The book also uniquely addresses the emotional needs of the leader themselves, helping them regulate, reflect, and stay grounded while managing the demands of a high-stakes environment.

Internationally, this book meets a growing demand for educational resources that support teacher retention, positive school culture, and humane leadership practices. As schools worldwide navigate increasing mental-health needs, workforce shortages, and community pressures, Emotionally Intelligent School Leadership offers a timely, relevant approach that empowers leaders to transform their schools - starting with themselves.

talks about Fail Better: How Teachers Can Help Students Overcome Failure, Perfectionism, Procrastination, Imposter Syndrome and Test Anxiety

As a teacher and senior leader who has spent nearly two decades working in schools, I've sat through countless talks that attempted to inspire and motivate students to reach for the stars. Invariably, the message from the speakers was a simple one: we learn more from failure than success.

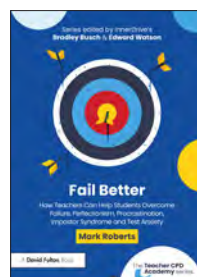

Yet my experience told me otherwise. I'd seen too many students paralysed by a fear of making mistakes. I'd seen too many students crushed by a poor test score. I'd seen too many students self-sabotage by leaving revision till the last minute. I'd seen too many students opt out of challenging, but potentially more rewarding, tasks.

I scoured the internet for an accessible and practical book that would help teachers support students struggling to overcome failure. But there wasn't anything like this out there. So, I decided to step in and fill this big gap in the market.

Having read the academic research around failure, it became clear that my anecdotal experience was backed up by lots of evidence. Unfortunately, the reality is that many students view failure as a sign to switch their focus, lower their expectations or simply give in. Failure and other psychological conditions – like perfectionism, procrastination, impostor syndrome and test anxiety – cause emotional distress and impairs students' cognitive performance. But I also saw that it needn't be like this.

Faced with wave after wave of anxious and struggling students, teachers often tell me that they feel like there's little they can do to help. In writing Fail Better, I set out to challenge that narrative. With this book, I wanted to dispel misconceptions by giving teachers a clear and concise understanding of what exactly we mean when we talk about fear of failure, perfectionism, procrastination, impostor syndrome and test anxiety. And, most importantly, I wanted to outline the many practical things that teachers can do to help students to flourish academically by overcoming these psychological barriers.

The result is a book that not only develops teachers' awareness of these common barriers to learning but also gives them the tools to guide students towards success. Fail Better is a much-needed book that I'm sure teachers will find very useful.

is a UK-based educator, speaker, and writer specialising in masculinity, gender, and the experiences of boys in schools. After more than a decade working in the classroom, he now delivers training and keynote talks internationally, helping teachers, parents, and organisations better understand the pressures facing young men today. His work blends lived experience with research-led insight, offering a nuanced perspective on how the digital landscape, including the manosphere, shapes boys' behaviour, attitudes, and sense of identity.

Matt is the co-author of Boys Don't Try?, a widely acclaimed exploration of boys' underachievement that has influenced school policy and teacher training across the UK and beyond. His writing has been featured in national media, and he regularly collaborates with schools, trusts, and safeguarding teams on issues related to misogyny, online culture, and male mental health.

Known for his sharp clarity, warmth, and directness, Matt's work centres a simple mission: to help boys feel seen, supported, and equipped to navigate a world full of mixed messages about what it means to be a man.

talks about Unmasking the Manosphere: Tackling the Misogyny Crisis in Schools

Across the world, teachers are facing a rapidly growing challenge: the rise of toxic male influencers and the online "manosphere," a network of platforms where misogynistic ideas circulate at speed. These digital spaces are reshaping boys' attitudes, language, and behaviour, often leading to what many educators now describe as a form of misogynistic radicalisation. Unmasking the Manosphere offers schools a clear, practical, and evidence-based roadmap for tackling this issue head-on.

Drawing on the latest research, extensive school-based experience, and direct engagement with online communities, the book explains how misogyny shows up not only on social media and group chats, but in classrooms, corridors, and everyday interactions. It moves beyond alarmism to offer a grounded understanding of why boys are drawn into these spaces, how harmful narratives spread, and what schools can realistically do in response.

Each chapter blends personal anecdote, expert insight, and real-life examples from schools, providing concrete strategies that can be applied immediately. Topics include:

- What the manosphere is — and what educators can do about it
- The influence of online creators, internet pornography, and algorithm-driven content
- The impact of misogyny on boys and girls' wellbeing, relationships, and learning
- Practical approaches for addressing sexual harassment and sexist behaviours
- How to lead meaningful, effective discussions with boys about respect, identity, and masculinity

Written by Matt Pinkett - teacher, bestselling author, and internationally recognised expert on adolescent masculinity - Unmasking the Manosphere equips educators, school leaders, and parents with the tools to challenge harmful ideas while supporting boys in positive, constructive ways.

This book meets an urgent global need: helping schools understand and respond to online misogyny with clarity, compassion, and confidence. It offers not just analysis, but actionable solutions that can reshape school culture and safeguard young people in an increasingly digital world.

Dr Mary Miller

is an Executive Coach and Clinical Psychologist who specialises in helping leaders navigate complexity, strengthen performance, and lead with clarity and courage. Based in Aotearoa/New Zealand and working internationally, she shares her experience of supporting leaders across business, law, health, and education to build resilient teams and create cultures where people can thrive.

Dr Mary blends psychological insight with practical tools that leaders can apply immediately. Known for her warm, grounded style, Dr Mary brings a steady, reflective presence and humour to her coaching. Her work draws on evidence-based therapeutic approaches, including Compassion-Focused Therapy, to help people move beyond reactivity, communicate with impact, and make decisions that align with their values. She is co-director of Therapy Space, a multidisciplinary mental wellbeing clinic, and consults widely with organisations seeking to improve workplace culture, psychological safety, and sustainable leadership.

Through her coaching, consulting, and writing, she empowers leaders to step into their roles with confidence, authenticity, and a strong sense of humanity.

Dr Mary Miller

talks about Leading with Fierce Compassion: Practical Wisdom for Meaningful Change

Leading with Fierce Compassion explores the science of compassion in the context of modern leadership to offer a practical framework for navigating complexity. At a time when organisations across sectors are facing rising burnout, strained relationships, and rapid change, Dr Mary Miller offers a grounded response for leaders seeking a sustainable path forward. Leaders are increasingly expected to manage uncertainty, support diverse teams, and maintain psychological safety. This book provides a supportive framework for meeting those demands with strength and humanity.

Fierce Compassion is not just a “soft skill.” It boosts performance, builds trust, and creates workplaces where people feel safe to collaborate and innovate. It blends warmth with strength, empathy with boundaries, and care with accountability. This approach helps leaders stay calm under pressure, connect with different people, and act with courage.

Through examples from leaders, clear psychological explanations, and the N.E.W. reflective cycle, readers learn the skills needed to embrace compassion as a means for personal growth, resilience, and authentic leadership. Drawing on her experience as a clinical psychologist, executive coach, and facilitator, Dr Miller translates complex psychological concepts into accessible tools that leaders can apply immediately. Examples from across sectors illustrate how Fierce Compassion can transform team dynamics, support inclusion, and help leaders respond effectively to challenges. Each chapter includes reflective exercises to help readers integrate the approach into their own context.

The book offers practical skills for regulating stress, navigating conflict, improving communication, and creating environments where people feel seen, supported, and able to perform at their best. Through a blend of scientific research, therapeutic insights, and real-life stories, it provides tools for cultivating compassion for oneself and others.

Leading with Fierce Compassion will be a valuable resource for professionals from mid-level managers to senior executives across business, government, and non-governmental organisations. It will appeal to anyone interested in psychology or those wishing to strengthen their leadership to foster deeper and more meaningful connections with others.

Madhavi Nawana Parker

talks about The Friendship Blueprint

Imagine every child equipped from the start with a universal blueprint for friendship, kindness, and respectful communication. Picture students confident and empathetic, supported by adults who believe in their limitless potential.

Social-emotional wellbeing deserves a central place in our curriculum, equal to literacy, maths, and science. Connection is a key predictor of lifelong happiness and success (Cipriano & Christina, 2023; Durlak et al., 2011; CASEL, 2020).

The Friendship Blueprint is Madhavi Nawana Parker's answer to the changing social landscape in primary schools, where teachers now act as counsellors, social workers, and mediators for a generation with fewer natural opportunities to build social skills, resilience, and confidence.

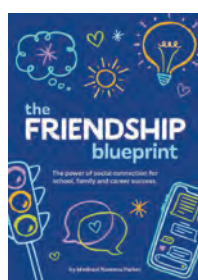

Broken relationships hinder growth (Bukowski et al., 2018). Children thrive when they feel seen, heard, and valued (Denham et al., 2003). Valuing every child unlocks their potential. When schools prioritise kindness and inclusion, everyone benefits (Prothero, 2025; Durlak et al., 2011). Great teachers change lives by fostering meaningful connections.

For some, school is their only refuge - a place of kindness and hope, even when resources are stretched thin. These educators are heroes, believing in every child's potential. One caring adult can make a world of difference (Denham et al., 2003). For our most vulnerable children, The Friendship Blueprint's tools can be a lifeline.

The Friendship Blueprint delivers practical, evidence-based tools essential for school, family, and lifelong success (CASEL, 2020; Durlak et al., 2011; Bukowski et al., 2018). These strategies empower young people to connect and create communities where everyone belongs.

Shaped by young voices, this book addresses real-world questions about friendship and belonging in today's changing world (Astonington & Jenkins, 1995; Bukowski et al., 2018).

Ideal for Reception to Year 7 and easily adaptable, The Friendship Blueprint equips educators and families with practical activities to address miscommunication, emotional struggles, and unkind behaviour (Denham et al., 2003; Gifford-Smith & Brownell, 2003).

Adam J. Schneider

talks about Psychoanalysis and Catholicism: From Freud to Francis

In Psychoanalysis and Catholicism: From Freud to Francis, Adam J. Schneider explores the censored history of psychoanalysis by the Catholic Church, reopening dialogue on key overlapping concepts to address contemporary needs. While the dialogue seemed to end following the Second Vatican Council, Schneider argues that Catholicism and psychoanalysis are both essential for conceptualizing and addressing critical issues facing the Church and the clinic today.

This book is organized into three parts. First, Schneider explores the historical relationship between psychoanalysis and the Church through key figures such as Sigmund Freud and Pope Pius XII. He then brings into conversation significant theological doctrines and psychoanalytic concepts including censorship/repression, original sin/unconscious desire, and the power of speech as examples of the fruitfulness of this dialogue.

To complete this research, Schneider was permitted access to the Vatican Apostolic Archives and the Archives of the Dicastery for the Doctrine of the Faith in Vatican City. He reviewed files on important but perhaps forgotten figures such as writer Maryse Choisy, psychoanalyst Dr. Angelo Hesnard, and priest and doctor Marc Oraison. The book applies his research findings to important theoretical and theological dilemmas to discover routes towards collaboration.

Finally, he applies this history, theory, and theology to contemporary issues like priestly and psychoanalytic formation and synodality within Lacan's four discourses. Schneider centers Pope Francis, whose papacy was a pastoral practice which reflected psychoanalytic ethics, as an orienting influence throughout the text. This application is professional as well as personal. Schneider analyzes his life story to demonstrate how his work as a psychoanalytic patient and his faith as a Catholic parishioner meld as he pursues the truth about himself, the world around him, and God.

Psychoanalysis and Catholicism will be of interest to readers seeking to understand how psychoanalysis and Catholicism edify one another, and how to apply these insights to clinical settings, seminary and clinical formation, and parish life.

Allen R. Dyer

talks about Madness and the Political Divide

Madness and the Political Divide draws on psychiatry and ethics in an attempt to understand and bridge the political divide. It merges philosophical inquiry with real-life narratives, distilling urgency from the epidemic of social fragmentation.

Allen Dyer explores meanings of 'madness' in different contexts, from the medical world to a contemporary society of 'alternate realities'. Madness can be understood psychiatrically as the inability to distinguish reality from nonreality, but metaphorically it may be the unwillingness to distinguish reality from nonreality. Underlying the denial of reality is the fear of unpleasant realities: existential threats such as global climate change, pandemics, war and financial insecurity, which increase anxiety and our vulnerability to the false promises of authoritarian leadership and to the erosion of democracy. With reference to psychoanalytic theory, psychology, ethics and philosophy, Dyer explores how we can balance emotions with reasoned action, not overwhelmed by fear nor underwhelmed by denial.

Dyer's engagement with justice and care provides a timely roadmap through fractured cultural terrain. This book will be highly relevant to readers interested in ethics, justice and human values as well as for academics and scholars in philosophy, history and literature. It will be of particular interest to psychiatrists, psychoanalysts, and those in other mental health disciplines.

Interspersed between the more philosophical and scientific chapters are a series of interludes, based on fairy tales, Shakespeare plays and archetypal figures from literature, which add lively commentary and an opportunity to rethink some of the assumptions of modern culture.

Iain Dolan

MC, is a psychologist and autistic adult whose professional practice is enriched by this distinct dual perspective. His career path changed irrevocably when he discovered he is autistic at age 29. This realization recontextualized years of unrecognized social masking as well as differences in emotional and sensory processing. Today he connects clinical theory with lived experience and specializes in neurodiversity-affirming assessments and psychotherapy for autistic adults.

Dolan follows the principle of being who he needed when he was younger. He works to remove systemic blind spots in healthcare that cause clinicians to misunderstand and misdiagnose autistic adults. His writing examines the complex intersections of autism with trauma, substance misuse, burnout, and more. He advocates for a model of care that prioritizes compassion, dignity, and authenticity.

A respected voice in the neurodivergent community, Dolan combines professional expertise with vulnerable storytelling to reduce stigma and improve clinical outcomes. He shares clinical resources, articles, and a podcast at www.ndpsych.com.

Iain Dolan

talks about Masking in Autistic Adults: A Clinician's Guide to Neurodiversity-Affirming Care

Clinicians frequently work with autistic adults without realizing it. These clients seek support for health concerns such as anxiety or burnout while their underlying neurotype often goes unnoticed by the professionals treating them. While their distress is authentic, the diagnostic label applied to them is frequently incorrect. Even after an adult has been identified as being autistic, clinicians can still face uncertainty, as adult presentations often differ from the models emphasized in clinical education. Masking in Autistic Adults provides a comprehensive guide to recognizing and supporting high-masking presentations that differ from historical stereotypes.

Written by Iain Dolan, a psychologist who learned he is autistic at age 29, this book connects clear clinical guidance with human experience. Dolan uses this dual perspective to make the lived experience of high-masking autistic adults accessible and clinically meaningful. He brings together evidence-based research, years of professional practice, and a candid personal narrative of his own experience of being autistic.

The book moves from initial concepts (e.g., defining high-masking and “female” presentations of autism) to advanced clinical application. It questions deficit-based medical models and introduces readers to the principles of neurodiversity and the internal reality of the autistic mind, an experience defined by bottom-up processing and the exhausting cognitive labour of social masking.

Psychiatrists, psychologists, family doctors, and social workers will find urgent and often overlooked topics within these pages. Diagnostic “pink flags” help identify high-masking adults who have evaded detection. The text differentiates autistic burnout from clinical depression, exploring other common misdiagnoses and issues of diagnostic overshadowing. It reframes trauma and substance use through a neuro-affirming lens. It also navigates complex intersections between autism and ADHD, personality disorders, alexithymia, and many other conditions.

This book helps rebuild the therapeutic frame to be more appropriate for supporting autistic adults with high-masking presentations. The author’s insider-outsider vantage point provides clinicians with practical tools like adapted trauma interventions and sensory regulation strategies to avoid iatrogenic harm and build authentic alliances. Masking in Autistic Adults serves as an important resource for the mental health field and advocates for a move from pathology to personhood.

is Director at Redfern Psychology and Head of Specialist Clinical Services for Trauma and Maltreatment at Anna Freud National Centre for Children and Families. Sheila works clinically with looking after children, foster carers and adoptive parents and parents and adolescents, mostly using mentalization based treatments. Sheila co-created the Reflective Parenting model and the Reflective Fostering Programme, an adaptation of this for foster carers. Sheila is an accredited MBT-A supervisor and accredited MBT (for adults) practitioner and accredited Video Interaction Guidance (VIG) practitioner. Prior to working at Anna Freud, Sheila worked for 20 years as an NHS consultant clinical psychologist in CAMHS teams across London.

Sheila is author of Reflective Parenting: A Guide to Understanding What's Going on in your child's mind (Routledge).

Sheila Redfern

talks about Reflective Parenting: Raising Emotionally Healthy Children

The idea behind the book Reflective Parenting was to bring into the mainstream ideas from theories of attachment and mentalization theory, which had previously seemed quite confusing and inaccessible for parents and even some professionals working with parents. This is a practical book which parents can bring into their everyday lives, without necessarily needing a professional intervention.

The practice of reflecting on the thoughts and feelings of your child and also reflecting on your own parental state of mind – known as mentalizing – is thought to be the key to secure attachment and later resilience and mental health. The book Reflective Parenting: Raising Emotionally healthy children, guides parents through the often difficult to navigate, task of raising children who are able to regulate their emotions. More regulated emotions are the key to improved behaviour in children, and so children who are mentalized by their parents are far more likely to have fewer behavioural difficulties, and more likely to have more connected and harmonious relationships with both parents and peers.

This book delves into applying mentalization, attachment theory, and reflective functioning for enhanced emotional and behavioural wellbeing in children. It takes parents (and professionals working with them) through a range of mentalizing tools unique to the Reflective Parenting model, which help parents to connect with their children in positive and meaningful ways.

Dr Redfern helps parents in learning the key features of Reflective Parenting, its theoretical link to reflective functioning, attachment and theory of mind, and its application to working with parents with young children and those approaching the teenage years. Dr Redfern's book also promotes practitioner abilities in employing a mentalizing stance in their work with parents, providing a practical tool kit to parents to help explain and practice Reflective Parenting including the Parent APP and Parent Map. Research over the past decade has increasingly pointed to the importance of self-mentalizing in parents as a mechanism by which children grow up feeling more secure and less anxious. Dr Redfern explains the importance of using a Parent Map; a tool which supports parents to reflect on their own mind so that they can self-regulate and become more available to their child.

talks about Internal Family Systems Therapy with Children

The definitive guide to using IFS with children—expanded and updated for a world that challenges the emotional safety of children and teens.

The second edition of Internal Family Systems Therapy with Children offers a compelling, practice-based guide to applying IFS - a globally recognised, evidence-based model - to the lives of children and families today. Co-authored by child psychotherapists Lisa Spiegel (US) and Dr Claire Stubbs (UK), this edition responds directly to the changing landscape of childhood: increasing emotional overwhelm, neurodiversity, gender identity exploration, and challenges in school settings.

Written with warmth, wisdom, and clinical clarity, the book offers a roadmap for professionals looking to bring IFS into work with children aged 4–18. Case studies, play-based interventions, parent guidance tools, and therapist reflections make this book deeply accessible and highly adaptable across cultural contexts.

The first edition has been translated into German, Korean, Polish and French and has already received strong international endorsements from leaders in the IFS field. This edition will be an important contribution to the IFS literature.

This fully revised edition includes:

- Practical tools for working with neurodivergent systems, including ADHD and autism
- Expanded material on gender identity, cultural burdens, and systemic injustice
- Guidance on integrating IFS with school-based support and family therapy

How to bring IFS into settings where young people are experiencing multiple disadvantages, such as the criminal justice system.

What sets this book apart is its combination of clear and readable IFS theory with practical clinical applications. The case studies, poignant and instructive make the book useful for clinicians, educators, and parents.

talks about Freeing Children and Young Adults from Shame: Scales and Stigma, A Practical Guide for Parents, Teachers and Clinicians

The landscape of health, wellness, and body image has undergone significant transformation in recent years, creating an urgent need for this book. While diet culture has existed for generations, compelling evidence now shows its harmful psychological and physical impacts. Dieting puts children at risk for developing eating disorders, a disease that carries the second highest mortality rate of any mental health condition. Yet, despite this evidence, diet culture continues to surge and eating disorders are seen in younger ages than we've ever seen before.

Traditional dieting has evolved into more insidious forms, often rebranded as "wellness," "clean eating," or "healthy lifestyle changes," while continuing to promote the same unhealthy messaging. This is especially problematic for children and young adults, who now face unprecedented exposure to unrealistic body standards and diet culture through algorithm-driven social media. No other book addresses doctors, parents, and educators from this clinical perspective, from a physician who has witnessed the troubling rise in eating disorders and the devastating consequences of this trend firsthand. This book needed to be written.

The goal is to create environments where young people develop positive relationships with food, movement, and their bodies, without triggering the disordered eating and psychological damage so common in traditional approaches. This book will help create spaces where children and young adults can thrive in the bodies they have while building lifelong health habits based on respect rather than restrictive and stigmatizing protocols.

It provides readers with practical guidance including ready-to-use scripts, tips and strategies to navigate sensitive conversations about bodies, food, and redefining what true health is. For healthcare providers, educators, and parents seeking compassionate alternatives to weight-centric approaches, this book offers evidence-based guidance and meets a critical cultural moment with a combination of heart and science.

talks about The Basics of Bioethics

The Basics of Bioethics, Fifth Edition offers a compelling introduction to the fascinating, ever-evolving field of bioethics. Accessible and richly informative for readers from all backgrounds, this book provides an essential foundation in theories and concepts, which are then applied to numerous thought-provoking cases and contemporary questions.

Chapters are organized around common moral themes in order to help readers understand the values and other connections that tie together different positions in bioethics. Readers are guided through the ethical complexities of abortion, medical aid in dying, genetic engineering, posthumous reproduction, biomedical research, and organ transplantation, among other topics.

Key Updates to the Fifth Edition:

- A new chapter dedicated to public health emergencies, incorporating key lessons learned during the COVID-19 pandemic that are relevant for future crisis planning.
- An introduction to disability ethics among non-principlist approaches, which continues to grow in influence in bioethics.
- Supplemented statistics and references across all chapters, integrating more international perspectives and data.
- New and updated cases that illustrate a range of contemporary bioethical issues.

talks about Dialogues on Minds, Machines and AI

This book invites readers into a series of thought-provoking debates among three college seniors bound for graduate school: Sue, completing her double major in philosophy and cognitive science; John, a computer engineering specialist; and Amy, a psychology major. Through five engaging lunchtime conversations, these students bring their diverse perspectives to fundamental questions about consciousness, artificial intelligence, and the nature of mind.

The dialogue seamlessly blends discussions of popular science fiction films with critical examinations of recent AI developments - including ChatGPT, deep fakes, and other emerging technologies. Readers will explore foundational concepts at the intersection of human consciousness and machine learning: Alan Turing's influential "imitation game," John Searle's provocative "Chinese room argument," computational theories of mind, robot creativity, and the modularity of mind hypothesis. Rather than advocating for any particular viewpoint, these conversations illuminate the strengths, weaknesses, and implications of each perspective.

Key Features:

- Requires from the reader no prior knowledge of philosophy or technical subjects.
- Includes a comprehensive glossary and thoughtful study questions to enhance understanding.
- Focuses on research in cognitive science with an emphasis on artificial intelligence.

talks about Philosophy of Mind: A Contemporary Introduction

This popular coursebook offers an accessible introduction to issues in the philosophy of mind, including the mind–body problem, causal interactions between the mental and the physical, computational models of thought, and assorted -isms, including behaviorism, dualism, eliminativism, emergentism, functionalism, materialism, neutral monism, and panpsychism.

The aim of the Fifth Edition remains the same as the previous four: to offer a clear and engaging, relevant, and metaphysically grounded introduction to philosophy of mind.

Key Updates to the Fifth Edition:

- A chapter on Davidson's 'radical interpretation' has been replaced by a chapter on artificial intelligence, reflecting a growing interest in this area.
- New sections on 'content externalism' and the 'extended mind' have been added to the chapter on eliminativism.
- Revisions to all existing chapters, with the addition or expansion of important topics and the elimination of some less relevant material, make the book more reader-friendly without sacrificing rigor and accuracy.
- New Chapter Summaries and Discussion Questions appear after each chapter to cultivate productive student dialogue in the classroom.
- Updates to Suggested Reading lists at the end of each chapter and the Reference list at the back of the book.

talks about Persuasion in Your Life

Persuasion in Your Life is widely used in Persuasion courses in Communication, which are also commonly taken by students in Marketing, Public Relations & Strategic Communication. This text provides in-depth coverage about over 20 distinct theories of persuasion, helping readers understand how research has evolved over time – and how it influences our lives.

Most chapters explore contexts and settings for persuasion, including theories most relevant to the area. Those settings include New Media (blockchain and artificial intelligence), Business (interviews and impression management), Campaigns (product, issue, and candidate), Personal Relationships (power and compliance gaining), Non-verbal (proxemics, kinesics, and environments), and Health (patient-provider and health marketing). Beyond these settings, there are deep explorations of ethical considerations in persuasion, how persuasion draws upon (and goes beyond) rational argument, the visual elements of persuasion, and what research tells us about humor.

In course evaluations, students report that Persuasion in Your Life is their favorite textbook across ALL of their classes. One reason is reliance upon personal examples and activities, similar to an experienced teacher in an active classroom. Every chapter has reflection opportunities, and the writing style is focused on personalizing the content. Another reason is the practical benefit of chapters providing detailed guidance for effective presentations, and a system for daily learning through appraising the persuasive messages of others.

Persuasion in Your Life is frequently updated to remain relevant to life in the late 2020's. The 4th edition includes significant coverage of recent developments which recent graduates often encounter in the workplace, such as artificial intelligence, algorithms, enterprise platforms and new data tools. Chapters include a research snapshot showing how persuasion research from the past year, extending the discussion of theories and contexts.

It is a rare textbook which can engage students in a personal style, without sacrificing the rigor expected in advanced college classes. Whether one is a student of persuasion, or simply an engaged person trying to navigate the information overload from hundreds of daily messages, Persuasion in Your Life is a valuable companion to manage your life!

Linda Nielsen

Ed.D., is a professor in the Education Department at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, NC. A member of the faculty for 52 years, she is a nationally recognized researcher and expert on father-daughter relationships. Her work has appeared in many forums, including a PBS documentary, National Public Radio, CNN, Time, Newsweek, Oprah, Forbes, The Atlantic, Wall Street Journal, Chicago Tribune, New York Times & the Washington Post. For more than three decades, she has taught the only college course in the country exclusively devoted to father-daughter relationships. In 2023 she was awarded the Lifetime Achievement Research Award by the National Parenting Organization for the worldwide impact of her work on shared parenting after divorce and father-daughter relationships.

This engaging, no-nonsense book by father-daughter relationships expert, Dr. Linda Nielsen, offers a step-by-step guide for fathers and daughters to build a more comfortable and meaningful relationship and resolve issues still hanging over them from the past.

With amusing and poignant true stories and research-based advice, Nielsen shows us how to get to the root of problems that strain relationships from late adolescence throughout a daughter's adult life. The book explores problems arising from conflicts over money, the daughter's lifestyle and choices in her romantic relationships, her parents' divorce, and tense situations during her college years, and her father's aging and death. With entertaining, eye-opening quizzes, she introduces research that makes readers re-examine their own beliefs and biases that limit or complicate their father-daughter relationship.

Improving Father-Daughter Relationships: A Guide for Women and Their Dads is essential reading and a powerful resource for adult daughters and their fathers, as well as for their families and therapists.

Controlled Explosions in Mental Health

A Compassionate Guide to Understanding Why Our Brains Self-Sabotage, Self-Criticise and Self-Harm

is a clinical psychologist, researcher, author, and trainer. Having started his career as a therapist in NHS mental health services, he co-founded an organization in 2012 called Balanced Minds, which specializes in providing Compassion Focused Therapy (CFT) and self-help resources for the public, and CFT training and consultation for professionals and organizations.

Have you ever wondered why your brain self-sabotages? Or why your actions seem self-defeating or destructive? This book explores how our brains have evolved to favour survival over mental well-being – creating ‘controlled explosions’ – and provides practical ways to understand, acknowledge and diffuse them.

Controlled Explosions in Mental Health identifies everyday scenarios in which one may experience self-destructive behaviour such as procrastination or self-criticism. Each chapter guides the reader through key examples of controlled explosions, identifying and exploring their possible functions. Readers will learn how to identify when one or more of these ‘explosions’ are operating in their lives, recognise the potential harm or difficulties this may cause, and learn practical ways to navigate and overcome. The friendly, accessible narrative, teamed with illustrations, guided examples and worksheets to aid self-practice, makes this book the ultimate companion for navigating your mental health.

This book supports the path to self-awareness, helping the reader take control of their own struggles with insight, care and compassion. It’s a must-read for any reader looking to better understand their mental health and wellbeing.

Psychotherapeutic Approaches for Sexual Problems

An Essential Guide for Mental Health Professionals, 2nd Edition

Stephen B. Levine

M.D., is a Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine in Cleveland, Ohio, and psychiatrist at DeBalzo, Elgudin, Levine, Risen, LLC, in Beachwood, Ohio.

This book provides a comprehensive framework for understanding the forces that influence sexual dysfunction across the lifespan and equips clinicians with effective strategies to help individuals and couples enhance their intimate connections and overall relationship satisfaction.

Drawing from over five decades of clinical experience, master teacher Dr. Stephen B. Levine guides mental health professionals of all experience levels to an understanding and treating sexual concerns. Moving beyond the traditional approaches and models for sex therapy, this practical guide illuminates the profound subjectivity behind sexual behavior, exploring the predisposing developmental experiences, precipitating events, and maintaining factors that shape patients' intimate lives. This book offers insights into problems not addressed in diagnostic manuals such as premature cessation of partner sex, betrayal, extra-dyadic relationships, and sexual aversion. Clinical vignettes demonstrate how to compassionately explore the private thoughts, feelings, and conflicts that can create obstacles in loving relationships. This revised edition also includes new chapters on developmental forces that impact sexual dysfunction as well as working with transgender youth and adults. Written in an engaging, supervisory tone that fosters a personal connection with readers, this book reveals how sexuality serves as both a mechanism of self-discovery and a profound means of intimate connection and offers enduring principles that clinicians can apply throughout their careers.

Metaethics

A Contemporary Introduction,
2nd Edition

Mark van Roojen

March 2026
ISBN 9781032151854
422 Pages, 1 B/W Illustrations
Subject: Philosophy
www.routledge.com/9781032151854

Mark van Roojen

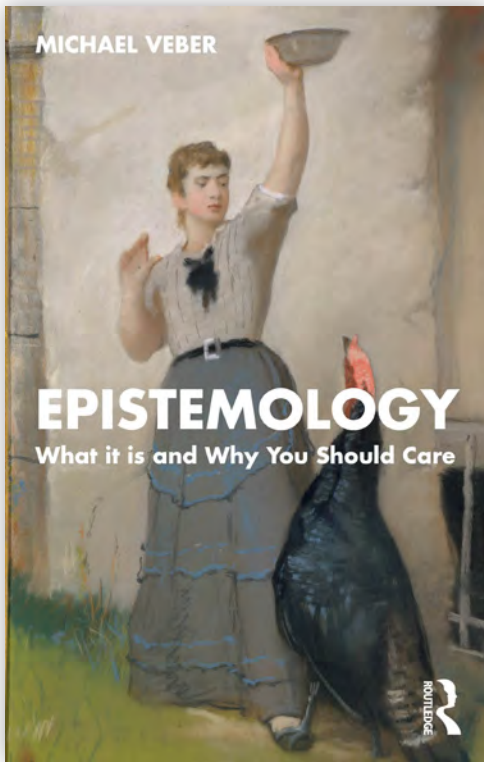

is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Nebraska – Lincoln. He works primarily in ethics and metaethics but remains interested in the rest of philosophy. His most widely read papers are on moral rationalism, expressivism, moral psychology and the semantics of moral terms.

This book maps the terrain of the part of ethics that reflects on the nature of ethics itself, a field known as metaethics.

It helps upper-level undergraduates and other interested readers understand the main theoretical innovations as reactions to puzzles about moral disagreement, reference, moral epistemology, metaphysics and moral psychology. The book provides the necessary background to grasp the puzzles and to understand the solutions offered. More complex positions are displayed as developments of simpler ideas and theories. Positions covered include error theory, subjectivism, relativism, noncognitivism, fictionalism, supernaturalism, nonnaturalism and naturalism. Several charts map the relations between the positions.

KEY UPDATES TO THE SECOND EDITION:

- A text that is easier to follow throughout, now with regular references to the main explanatory chart in the Introduction.
- An expanded and more self-contained discussion of supernaturalism, which now can be better used as its own module or omitted completely from a class syllabus.
- Additional understanding and/or extension-oriented questions at the end of almost every chapter.
- Updates to citations and Suggested Readings.
- Reassurances to the student reader that uncertainty about certain difficult topics is both natural and expected.

Epistemology

What it is and Why You Should Care
Michael Veber

March 2026
ISBN 9781032342214
200 Pages
Subject: Philosophy
www.routledge.com/9781032342214

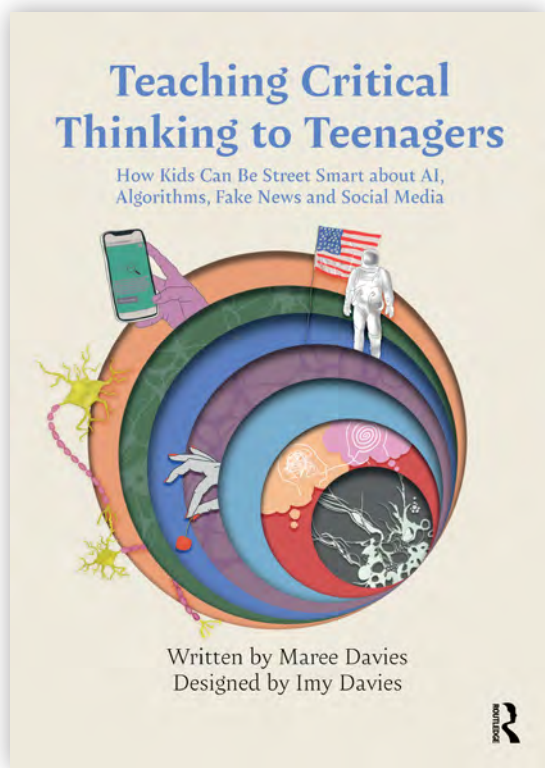

Michael Veber

is Associate Professor of Philosophy at East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina, USA. He is the author of Tell Me Something I Don't Know: Dialogues in Epistemology (2019).

This is an introduction to epistemology written with the student foremost in mind. It provides an overview of basic concepts and problems in the theory of knowledge and directly addresses a question that is often foremost in the minds of students: “Who Cares?”

Author Michael Veber first identifies where epistemology is, locating it within the larger field of philosophy, as well other areas of study and reality in general. He explains how controversial assumptions about knowledge and inquiry are so fundamental and pervasive they can be invisible. Yet they are also unavoidable in life and in any effort to figure things out. The book explains how even the harshest critics of philosophy make assumptions about knowledge—and thus must care about epistemology. This leads to a discussion of the roles of reason and observation in knowledge. That is followed by a discussion of the nature and purpose of inquiry. Along the way, abstract issues are brought to life with concrete examples and historical context.

By the final chapter, readers will understand the key concepts professional philosophers’ debate—and recognize how one’s own thinking fits within these conversations. This book is perfect for a broad range of students and anyone else who is curious about the nature and limits of knowledge and the value of philosophy.

Teaching Critical Thinking to Teenagers

How Kids Can Be Street Smart about AI, Algorithms, Fake News and Social Media

Maree Davies

Maree Davies

is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Auckland, New Zealand. Her research focuses on how to ensure critical thinking is accessible to all teenagers.

At a time of concern over the influence of social media, algorithms and artificial intelligence, this book presents a practical toolkit for secondary teacher and parents that supports secondary teachers to help their students understand the importance of critical thinking.

Teenagers are facing a daily barrage of content tailored to suit their preferences and reinforce their biases. It is essential for them to understand how they can be targeted by commercial companies or entities pushing a particular agenda, as well as to recognise AI, which can manifest itself in forms such as fake news. This guide for educators and parents presents an engaging way to teach critical thinking to teenagers, combining theory with everyday issues and scenarios. It draws together neurological explanations of why teaching critical thinking to teenagers is vital and explains key critical thinking ideas through illustrations and links to video clips, featuring scenarios acted out by teenagers. The author provides diverse perspectives on critical thinking and introduces the Street Smarts model, designed to make critical thinking accessible and to embed it as a habitual skill that extends well beyond the classroom. Crucially, the book emphasises the role of dialogue in helping teenagers engage in robust conversations that focus on ideas rather than resorting to toxic or harmful personal attacks.

The Other 29

How Supporting Your Neurodivergent Learner Can Improve Teaching and Learning for the Whole Class

founded Neuroteachers with a clear mission: to help schools, nurseries, and colleges create simple, sustainable solutions for truly neuro-inclusive practice. As a neurodivergent educator herself, diagnosed with dyslexia and bipolar disorder, and with traits of ADHD, dyspraxia, and Auditory Processing Disorder, Catrina brings a rare and powerful blend of lived experience and professional insight to her work.

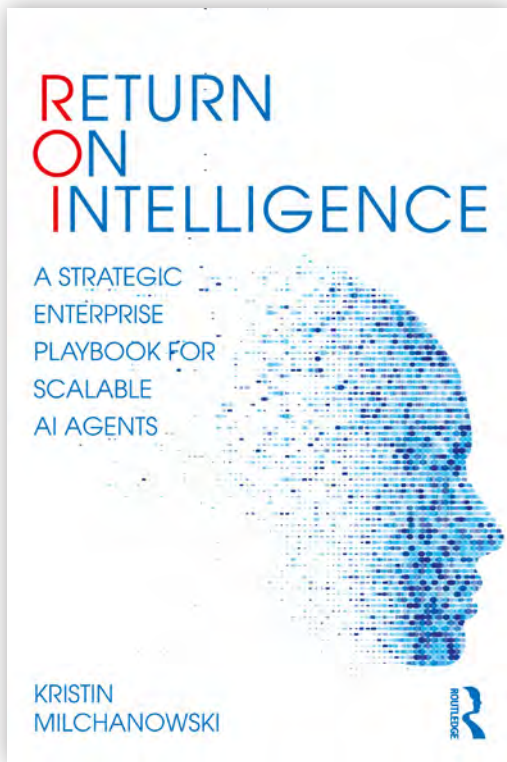

With over 27 years of pupil-facing experience as a qualified special needs teacher, SENCO/ALNCO, and advisory teacher, she understands the real-world challenges educators face. Her approach is practical, empathetic, and rooted in the belief that small changes can lead to big transformations in behaviour, attendance, and academic outcomes for students of all neurotypes.

Through Neuroteachers, Catrina and her team deliver impactful training, mentoring, and coaching, driving culture change across educational and workplace settings. She has also worked closely with parent carer organisations throughout her career and is a passionate advocate for co-production ensuring families and educators work together to build inclusive, empowering environments for every learner.

If you're a mainstream teacher with a neurodivergent child in your class, it's understandable to feel overwhelmed when trying to meet their individual needs while supporting the rest of your pupils. This book offers straightforward, workable approaches to help you deliver inclusive, high-quality teaching that supports every learner. The strategies are designed to be realistic and manageable, without adding extra cost, complexity, or pressure to your day.

Every chapter dives into a unique, real-world scenario designed to keep your 'child in mind' bringing to life how small, thoughtful adjustments can revolutionise the classroom experience for neurodivergent learners and uplift the entire class. Whether it's fine-tuning the pace, volume, or complexity of a lesson, or rethinking how tasks are presented and assessed, this book is packed with practical strategies that boost wellbeing, enhance behaviour, and drive academic success. You'll find exemplar lesson plans, tried and tested techniques, and built-in reflection prompts to help you take action from day one.

Written in clear, jargon-free language, The Other 29 is an invaluable resource for both experienced educators and early career teachers working in primary and secondary mainstream classrooms. It will help to create a more inclusive and supportive learning environment for every student in your care.

Return on Intelligence

A Strategic Enterprise Playbook

Kristin Milchanowski

is a force in global AI and Quantum leadership and serves as the Chief AI and Data Officer at BMO Financial Group. With a PhD in Decision Sciences and post-graduate AI studies from the University of Oxford, where she now teaches AI as an Associate Fellow within the Saïd Business School. She has architected AI strategies that fight illicit finance, elevate digital ecosystems, and redefine innovation. Milchanowski previously held roles at EY, Morgan Stanley, and JP Morgan and formerly an advisory board member of Automobili Lamborghini.

A call to lead with empathy, this book redefines what transformation means in the age of artificial intelligence. Where most organizations still chase automation and efficiency, Kristin Milchanowski, PhD, reveals a deeper truth: intelligence is not a tool. It is infrastructure. Cutting through the hype and ambiguity that surrounds AI, she bridges the gap between technological deployment and meaningful transformation.

Through 43 governing principles, Milchanowski demonstrates how AI agents can reshape decisions, orchestrate resources, and embed permanence into complex enterprises. She introduces two transformative metrics that quantify how well institutions integrate intelligent systems into their workflows and governance. Drawing from global leadership experience, Milchanowski argues that innovation without empathy is merely efficiency without trust. True intelligence must be earned through ethical design, transparent implementation, and human-centered leadership. With precision and moral clarity, she shows how organizations can move from pilots to permanence, from experiments to ecosystems. The real return, Milchanowski concludes, is measured not in algorithms, but in the trust we build, the empathy we embed, and the promises we keep.

This book is written for senior executives, transformation leaders, policymakers, and technologists who are navigating the frontier of AI adoption, as well as MBA, AI strategy, and leadership students.

A.G. Kenwood

retired as Head of the Department of Economics at the University of Queensland, Australia in 1989. George was also an Honorary Research Consultant at the University of Queensland until he passed away in 2005.

A.L. Loughheed

was an educator, first as a primary and secondary teacher, then as Lecturer and Reader in Economics at the University of Queensland, Australia. He was an Honorary Research Consultant at the University of Queensland until he passed away in 2002.

Growth of the International Economy has been the benchmark introduction to the development of the global economy for decades. Updating the story to the present day, the new edition of this classic textbook includes coverage of key events from 2008 onwards which have impacted and brought disruption to the global economy.

Beginning with the industrial revolution, the book charts the long nineteenth century, the impact of colonialism, the fast pace of technology growth and the impact of global wars. Significant additions to the sixth edition include coverage of the aftermath of the Great Recession, the growing impact of China and the New Silk Route and the economic consequences of Covid-19 pandemic. The geopolitical and economic reasons for the war in Ukraine, and its consequences, are also considered. References and recommendations for further reading are included at the end of each chapter to encourage additional study, and a selection of appendices are incorporated into the book, outlining the economic concepts and theories underlying the text.

This new edition of Growth of the International Economy provides the reader with a clear understanding of the factors which have been instrumental in creating the economic environment we face two hundred years after the industrial revolution.

Resistance is NOT Futile

Exploring Philosophical and Social Science Theories of Civil Resistance

Daniel Petz

January 2026
ISBN 9781041039693
192 Pages, 18 B/W Illustrations
Subject: Politics
www.routledge.com/9781041039693

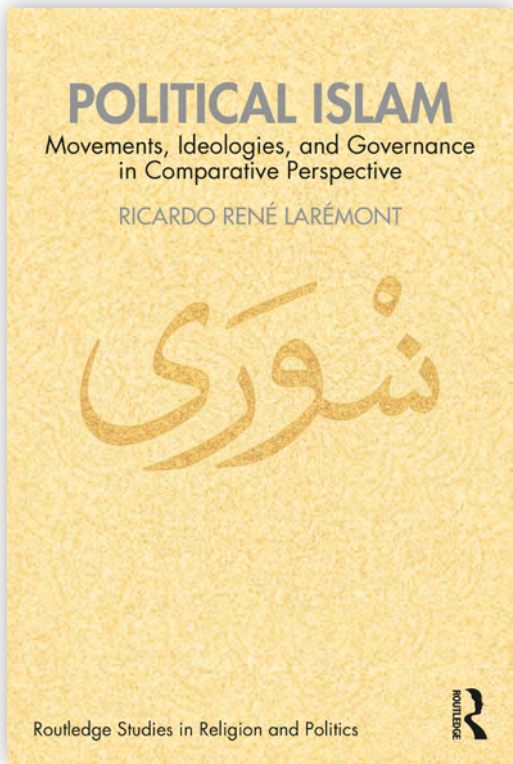

Daniel Petz

is a scholar-activist with an academic background in philosophy as well as in peace and conflict studies. His main fields of expertise are civil resistance, climate justice, defending civic spacetime, and human mobility. Born in Austria, he currently lives in Indonesia, working at Universitas Gadjah Mada.

In Resistance is NOT Futile: Exploring Philosophical and Social Science Theories of Civil Resistance, Daniel Petz provides the starting base to understand the importance of civil resistance in our current world. He delves into the philosophical roots and the debates that have shaped modern forms of civil resistance and links them with the latest insights in civil resistance studies. He then discusses a broad number of topics linked to civil resistance including questions of legitimate authority and civil disobedience, the boundaries of violence and nonviolence, methods of civil resistance, maximalist, reformist, and systemic nonviolence, Global South and Majority perspectives on civil resistance, nonviolent defense, right-wing use of nonviolence, and the escalating struggle of the climate movement.

A valuable resource written for both scholars and students in philosophy and social sciences in mind, Resistance is NOT Futile aims at bridging the disciplinary gap that exists between these fields. The book should also be of interest to activists who wish to deepen their understanding of scholarly debates on civil resistance, as well as the general public interested in the historical, philosophical, and political dimensions of civil resistance.

Political Islam

Movements, Ideologies and Governance
in Comparative Perspective

Ricardo René Larémont

January 2026
ISBN 9781041166054
272 Pages
Subject: Politics
www.routledge.com/9781041166054

Ricardo René Larémont

is Professor Emeritus of Political Science at Binghamton University (State University of New York) and a Non-Resident Scholar at the Center for African Studies at Howard University. A political scientist and sociologist, he specializes in Islamic politics, Islamic law, conflict resolution, and democratization, with a regional focus on North Africa and the Sahel.

Larémont earned a B.A. in Political Science from New York University, a J.D. from NYU School of Law, and a Ph.D. in Political Science from Yale University. He is the author of Islam and the Politics of Resistance in Algeria and Islamic Law and Politics in Northern Nigeria, and editor of Revolution, Revolt, and Reform in North Africa: The Arab Spring and Beyond. His articles have appeared in African Security, The Journal of the Middle East and Africa, and Stability: International Journal of Security & Development.

Political Islam: Movements, Ideologies, and Governance in Comparative Perspective is a textbook that offers a comprehensive and accessible exploration of Islamist movements and the diverse political models they have pursued across the modern Muslim world. Bridging theology, political theory, and case-based analysis, this book examines how religion, nationalism, and armed resistance have intersected to shape contemporary Muslim-majority states.

The book begins with foundational chapters that compare the historical relationship between religion and politics in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, and then outlines key differences between Western democratic theory and Islamic governance models. It proceeds to examine seminal Islamist movements, including the Muslim Brotherhood in Egypt, the ideological legacy of Sayyid Qutb, Iran's Shi'i theocracy, and resistance movements such as Hezbollah, Hamas, and the Taliban. Each chapter integrates ideological analysis with political history, institutional development, and regional context. Unique among books in the field, Political Islam combines intellectual genealogy with detailed case studies and comparative frameworks, enabling students to grasp both the diversity and coherence of Islamist thought. The book also engages current events – including the October 7, 2023 Hamas assault and its geopolitical aftermath – while highlighting broader debates over Islamic law, militancy, democratization, and international humanitarian law.

Witnessing Sociocide

A Comparative Sociology of War

is Professor Emeritus of Sociology at Wittenberg University. Some of his books include Bosnian Authors in a European Window; A Comparative Study (Routledge, 2023); Understanding Evil: Lessons from Bosnia (2007); and Sociology after Bosnia and Kosovo (2000). He was a Senior Fulbright Scholar in the Faculty of Political Science at University of Sarajevo in 2001 and held the Fulbright Distinguished Chair in the Department of Sociology at University of Innsbruck, Austria in 2007. He was recipient of the Fulbright Flex Grant, involving teaching and research in Tuzla, Bosnia-Herzegovina, through which he co-authored Ethnic and National Identity in Bosnia-Herzegovina: Kinship and Solidarity in a Polyethnic Society (2019).

This book is a sociological study of recent international conflicts, from Bosnia and Iraq to Ukraine and Gaza. Its approach is theoretical, applying the framework of sociocide to assess the social consequences of the conflicts in Ukraine and Gaza through comparisons with previous conflicts that meet these criteria.

Sociocide means the murdering of the social encompassing matters pertaining to human solidarity: family, social institutions, ethnic, and national identity. This study develops and applies the concept to describe the social and human consequences of the war in Gaza, making comparisons to Chechnya, Iraq, Bosnia, and Ukraine. The conflict in Gaza creates an anomic state of nature where force and fraud are the cardinal virtues. This war demolishes houses as well as the prestige of the home. It kills civilians, that is, children, mothers, and entire families. It destroys communities, their invaluable history and collective memory. It eradicates social systems. The war murders a society. The goal of the comparative study is to frame objectively the moral anomie surrounding the violence of war in Gaza and its impact on world order. It also uses the term sociocide to consider the political war in the United States and the social entrapment of the spirit of capitalism as formulated by Max Weber.

Understanding Self-Harm and Suicide for Nurses and Health Practitioners qualified as an occupational therapist in 1993 and has held positions promoting mental and physical health across charitable, private and NHS settings with adults of all ages. Since 2014, she has worked at the University of East Anglia as an Associate Professor in Health Sciences where she aims to provide effective learning opportunities for pre- and post-qualifying nurses and allied health professionals through stimulating empathy and compassion for service users and patients. Additionally, she works part-time in the community for a charitable organisation to maintain awareness of issues affecting everyday people in modern society and contemporary healthcare practice.

This practical book equips nurses and health practitioners with essential knowledge and skills for understanding and supporting people experiencing suicidal thoughts and engaging in self-harm.

Exploring why people might experience suicidal ideation or feelings, or use self-harm, this skills-based book emphasises core skills a health practitioner needs to respond effectively and compassionately, dispelling myths and misconceptions that fuel stigma. It is informed throughout by service user perspectives and includes examples of good practice, suggestions for small changes that make meaningful differences, and reflective activities.

Promoting practice that enables people experiencing suicidal thoughts and engaging in self-harm to feel safer, more hopeful, and function at their best, this guide is an essential read for all health professionals.

Conservation Ethics

The Challenges of Preserving Nature

Pierfrancesco Biasetti

March 2026
ISBN 9781032700113
338 Pages, 3 B/W Illustrations
Subject: Health & Social Care

is a Research Scientist at the Department of Reproduction Management, Leibniz Institute for Zoo and Wildlife Research in Berlin, Germany, and an Adjunct Professor at the Department of Biology at the University of Padua, Italy.

This book explores the ethical dimensions of nature conservation, discussing how we value the natural world and how it can be protected in a complex context where many ethically significant interests must be carefully weighed and balanced.

Beginning with foundational concepts of nature and humanity's unique ecological role, the book examines how conservation aims to harmonize human impact with the natural world. It analyzes the complex distinction between the natural and the artificial, reveals the pluralism of values underpinning conservation, and delves into challenging practical issues, from the ethical treatment of wild animals and the role of biotechnology to the influence of human preferences in conservation and the pursuit of a virtuous relationship with nature. By integrating diverse ethical perspectives and stakeholder concerns, this work argues for a pluralistic, thoughtful approach to conservation ethics, one that moves beyond instrumental views toward relationship and care, embraces complexity in evaluation and deliberation, and fosters long-term success amid urgent global challenges.

This book will be of great interest to students, scholars and practitioners of nature conservation, environmental management, environmental ethics and environmental philosophy.

Data for Journalists

A Practical Guide for Computer-Assisted Reporting, 6th Edition

Brant Houston

Subject: Media & Cultural Studies
www.routledge.com/9780367763152

Brant Houston

is a Professor and the Knight Chair in Investigative Reporting at the University of Illinois, where he teaches journalism and oversees an online newsroom. An award-winning journalist, he was an investigative reporter at U.S. newspapers for 17 years. For more than a decade, he served as executive director of Investigative Reporters and Editors, a now 6,000-member association headquartered at the University of Missouri School of Journalism, where he also taught investigative and data reporting. Houston has conducted more than 400 seminars for professional journalists and students in 30 countries, and he is a co-founder of networks of nonprofit newsrooms and educators throughout the world.

Now in its sixth edition, Data for Journalists is a straightforward and effective guide to using data for news stories.

This concise textbook addresses all the key basic skills that data journalists need, including how to find and scrape data, how to build a database, how to visualize data, and how to use spreadsheets and database managers - before launching into coding and more advanced analysis. Alongside step-by-step instructions on beginning data analysis, Houston discusses why these digital tools should be an integral part of reporting in the present day. Thoroughly revised and updated, this sixth edition features a new chapter on data visualization as well as new material on using free software such as Google Sheets and Datawrapper.

Emphasizing that journalists are accountable for the accuracy and relevance of the data they acquire and share, particularly if artificial intelligence is involved, this is an ideal core text for courses on data-driven journalism and computer-assisted reporting.

The Fundamentals of Documentary

Julie Casper Roth

is an Associate Professor at CT State-Norwalk and an Emmy nominated, award-winning filmmaker whose work has been shown on PBS, at film festivals, and in venues around the world. She's a two-time Sundance Screenwriters Lab finalist and has won grant and fellowship awards from the New York Foundation for the Arts, New York State Council on the Arts, and the College Art Association. Casper Roth has taught documentary filmmaking at Skidmore College, the University at Albany, and in community workshops.

This is a definitive, accessible, and practical textbook that charts the course of creating a documentary, from concept to screening, breaking down filmmaking into its component pieces.

This book, inspired by workshop and classroom settings, focuses on process. It frees readers from the weight of technical jargon that may overwhelm first-time filmmakers. It assists readers in pulling together the necessary information required to apply for funding, find collaborators, and ultimately create a film. The book itself is a user-friendly toolkit designed for both students and beginning filmmakers, complete with exercises, interviews with filmmakers, and checklists to keep burgeoning filmmakers on track with their projects. Ease of use is aided by a symbol system that allows the reader to select information that's most relevant to the scope and context of their project. Actionable instructions and exercises are designed to keep the reader progressing as they usher an idea into a reality.

This book is a guiding companion for those who are new to making documentaries and will seamlessly fit into a semester-length learning scheme or longer-term projects.

has 30 years of experience in the television industry as a writer, producer, and director, creating programming for broadcast, cable, and streaming platforms. He has worked on many long-running series such as Wicked Attraction, Ice Cold Killers, FBI Criminal Pursuit, Happily Never After, Pretty Bad Girls, American Occult, and Death by Gossip for Investigation Discovery. Sinclair also produced documentary series like American Gangs and The New Detectives for the Discovery Channel. His work includes Monsters and Mysteries in America, True Supernatural, I Dated A Psycho, I Got Away for OWN, Change My Space for HGTV, and more. Currently, Sinclair serves as the Associate Dean of the School of Communication and the Arts at Regent University, where he is also an Assistant Professor of film and television.

This is the ultimate introductory textbook on the fundamentals of TV producing in today's media environment, written by a seasoned industry expert with over 30 years of experience.

The book is structured pedagogically, starting by introducing readers to the role of the producer and the characteristics of the current television industry. It covers the essential skills needed for producing television, followed by the creative, logistical, financial, and legal preparations required to produce content in the modern TV landscape. These topics are applied to different television mediums, including news programs, documentaries, entertainment shows in both the narrative and reality genres, sports broadcasts, and YouTube and streaming platforms. The book discusses the unique challenges and opportunities of each genre, offering detailed strategies to help your projects stand out in a competitive landscape. Chapter talking points, review questions, case studies, pro tips, a further research section, and an index support reader learning.

This textbook is an invaluable resource for students, aspiring producers, film professionals, and anyone passionate about the television industry. With its accessible approach and educational content, it is an ideal textbook for introductory courses on television producing.

Persuasive Message Design

Nancy Grant Harrington

is a Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Kentucky, USA. Her recent books include Health Communication, Second Edition (Routledge, 2023) and The Routledge Handbook of Health Communication, Third Edition (Routledge, 2021).

Katharine J. Head

is an Associate Professor in the Department of Communication at Indiana University Indianapolis, USA. She has published over 90 academic journal articles and book chapters.

This book presents a comprehensive approach for designing messages to influence beliefs, attitudes, intentions, and behaviours.

Divided into three sections, each focusing on key components of persuasive message design, the book outlines the conceptual and theoretical foundations for investigating message effects and then goes on to present a working list of message design elements and best practice guidelines for message-focused research design and reporting. It offers an intensive examination of literature from fields including health, environmental and political communication, advertising, and marketing to investigate the content, structure, and format of persuasive messages. The authors establish a common vocabulary for message design and testing, conveying the broad applicability of message design principles.

By focusing extensively on specific aspects of message content, structure, and format that can be drawn on to build persuasive messages for a variety of contexts, this book fills a critical gap in the communication science literature. This book is ideal for social science researchers engaged in persuasive message design research, scholars engaged in graduate education and their students, and practitioners who design campaigns and interventions to promote behaviour change.

Zombies, Werewolves, Robots, and Extraterrestrials

Actor Training and the Performance of Non-Human Characters

Gerald Large

March 2026
ISBN 9781041071952
208 Pages, 429 20 B/W Illustrations
Subject: Theatre and Performance
www.routledge.com/9781041071952

Gerald Large

is a Professor of Theater and Drama at Whatcom Community College in Washington State. He holds an MFA in Acting from Ohio University, and a PhD in Theatre and Drama from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Zombies, Werewolves, Robots, and Extraterrestrials provides a broad survey of acting theory and training technique through the lens of the performance of non-human characters found in horror and science fiction film, television, and theatre.

Specifically, the book examines the performance challenges of undead characters (zombies, vampires, Frankenstein's monster), characters that transform from human to non-human (werewolves, human-flies, Dr. Jekyll/Mr. Hyde, and others), mechanical creatures (robots, androids, cyborgs) and extraterrestrials – and then suggests a wide array of training methods to meet each challenge. Theories and training methods are taken from Michael Chekhov, Vsevolod Meyerhold, Antonin Artaud, Jerzy Grotowski, German Expressionist dance, Tadashi Suzuki, Lev Kuleshov, Jacques Copeau and Jacques Lecoq, Bertolt Brecht, François Delsarte, and others. Each chapter includes numerous actor training exercises of each technique, journaling opportunities for self-reflection, and lists of films to watch and books to read to further one's knowledge.

This book is an excellent resource for actors, acting teachers, and both academic and professional directors with an interest in broadening their knowledge of actor training, and their skill base as both students and working professionals.

Cultural Anthropology

Global Forces, Local Lives

Jack David Eller, Woxsen University, India

The 5th edition of Cultural Anthropology: Global Forces, Local Lives offers a clear and readable introduction to the field of cultural anthropology, with a special focus on how digital technologies and social media function as prime global forces in people's everyday local lives. This textbook challenges traditional views of anthropology by positioning it as uniquely qualified to analyze our tech-enhanced social world, exploring the "myth and mess" of digital life through ethnographic case studies spanning diverse global contexts. It is ideal for undergraduate students in anthropology and related social sciences.

Inside Cultures

An Introduction to Cultural Anthropology

William Balée, Tulane University, USA

This new edition of Inside Cultures: An Introduction to Cultural Anthropology offers a concise, contemporary introduction to cultural anthropology, focusing on how humans interact with their environments, each other, and global forces. This fourth edition explores cultural variation, colonial legacies, and the importance of fieldwork, while introducing key concepts like positionality and the coproduction of knowledge. New updates highlight anthropology's relevance to understanding the modern world and its potential for progress. Exploring Reproduction

Anthropological Perspectives

Edited by Maya Unnithan, Robbie Davis-Floyd, Rice University, Anindita Majumdar and Richard Powis

Exploring Reproduction: Anthropological Perspectives introduces students to the anthropology of reproduction, examining how human reproduction is shaped by cultural, historical, and political forces. This textbook draws on foundational anthropological concepts—like personhood, stratified reproduction, and biopolitics—and critically explores how reproduction intersects with gender, sexuality, kinship, and power. It is ideal for advanced undergraduate and graduate students in anthropology, gender studies, public health, and related fields exploring reproduction, identity, and power.

Anthropology

The Basics

Peter A. Metcalf

Series: The Basics

The ultimate guide for the student encountering anthropology for the first time, Anthropology: The Basics is a student-friendly text that explains and explores key anthropological concepts including:

- what is anthropology?
- how can we distinguish cultural differences from physical ones?
- what is culture and how do anthropologists study it?
- what are the key theories and approaches used today?
- How has the discipline changed over time?

New to this edition are a reframing of gender and feminist theory, discussions of queer anthropology, as well as an entirely new chapter on decolonizing anthropology.

The Tradwife Revolution

An Ethnography of Trad Futurism on Social Media

Alexandra Deem

The Tradwife Revolution: An Ethnography of Trad Futurism examines online networks of "tradwives" – women who align with traditional gender roles and homemaking as a revolutionary lifestyle choice. The book reveals how binary gender norms and a belief that feminism prevents women from embracing their natural femininity unite diverse communities, from secular stay-at-home mothers to Christian wives. It introduces the concept of "trad futurism" to analyze how these women navigate the tensions between neoliberalism and neofascist ideologies. It is ideal for students and researchers interested in right-wing imaginaries, digital cultures, and contemporary gender politics.

Testing Democracy

How Alternative for Germany Crafted a Democratic Identity

April L. Reber

Series: Anthropology of Now

This book examines Germany's political party, Alternative for Germany (AfD), particularly how they test assumptions about democracy and redefine its norms. Through extensive ethnographic research with AfD members, this book reveals three methods AfD members employed: disruption of memory politics, information and narrative control, and provocative performance strategies. Ultimately, it demonstrates how seemingly mundane techniques, like words, songs, performances, and infographics, can drastically redefine democratic norms and policy. Scholars, students, and general readers across the social sciences will find this book an invaluable resource in understanding contemporary politics

Mix It!

Understanding and Controlling the Mix Process

Ian Corbett

Mix It! is a comprehensive textbook designed to introduce the art of mixing music to beginners and novices. Starting with essential theory, this book explores the mix process and associated tools, with a reader-friendly balance of theory, instruction, and practical application. This is an ideal textbook for college students and high schoolers new to mixing music, including those on music production and audio engineering courses, as well as novice to intermediate engineers looking to reinforce their knowledge and skills, so they can develop their creativity further. The skills acquired and processes explained in the book are also relevant to mixing any audio, not only music.

Diagramming the Big Idea

Methods for Architectural Composition

Jeffrey Balmer, University of North Carolina at Charlotte and Michael T. Swisher, University of North Carolina at Charlotte

Becoming an architect is a daunting task. Beyond the acquisition of new skills and procedures, beginning designers face an entirely unfamiliar mode of knowledge: design thinking. In Diagramming the Big Idea, Jeffrey Balmer and Michael T. Swisher introduce the fundamentals of design thinking by illustrating how architects make and use diagrams to clarify their understanding of both specific architectural projects and universal principles of form and order. The goal of this book is to make explicit to students what they are learning, why they are learning it and how to internalize such lessons toward their lifelong development as designers.

Contemporary Latin American Architecture

Other Traditions

Edited by Inés Martín-Robles

Not a typical overview of Latin American Architecture, the book uncovers a series of lineages, often hidden or overlooked by international critics. In each chapter, prominent contemporary architects across Puerto Rico, Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay, Mexico, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Costa Rica, and Argentina, position their work within both historical and contemporary local and international traditions. This will be a crucial read for all researchers and students of Latin American architecture, history, and cultural heritage, as well as all those interested in exploring non-western, Global South, and non-canonical architectural traditions.

The winding paths of ants and the intricate stories of city streets reveal how movement is shaped by forces beyond mere efficiency. In architecture, however, circulation is often viewed as a technical requirement—corridors, stairs, and ramps—designed for easy passage. Drawing from architecture, neuroscience, and design theory, Niemiec invites architects, interior designers, students, and readers interested in the built environment to reconsider the spaces in between. Whether you design buildings or simply navigate them, this is an invitation to see circulation spaces as connective, temporal spaces that link people, context, and change.

Creating Sensory Spaces

The Architecture of the Invisible

Barbara Erwine, University of Washington, USA

Creating Sensory Spaces celebrates spaces enlivened with sensual richness and provides you with the knowledge and tools necessary to create them. Drawing on numerous built case studies in ten countries and illustrated with over 85 full color images, the book presents a new framework for the design of sensory spaces including light, color, temperature, smell, sound, and touch. Bridging across disciplines of architecture, interior design, engineering, phenomenology and perceptual psychology, this book informs the design of buildings and neighborhoods that reclaim the role of the body and all the senses in creating memorable experiences of place and belonging.

The Hidden Lives of Algorithms

Geometry and Social Meaning in Architecture

Philip D. Plowright and Silvio Carta, University of Hertfordshire, UK

As generative and analytic algorithms increasingly automate the design of our built environment, the power of simple geometrical notation to affect social meanings becomes both more powerful and more elusive. This book examines how the geometric outcomes of spatialised algorithmic operations influence more complex human experiences of accessibility, belonging, and identity as well as shape the dynamics of equity, connectivity, privacy, and power in architectural and urban spaces. It challenges designers to look beyond technical implementation, urging a critical awareness of how computational processes can reinforce or reimagine the social fabric of our shared spaces.

Scented Spaces

Creating Smellscapes in Artistic and Architectural Practices

Jieliang Xiao

This book explores the overlooked role of smell in architecture, design, and urban life, positioning olfaction as a powerful medium for shaping place, atmosphere, and experience. Smells are conceptualised as spatial design materials and it shifts the paradigm of smells from the intangible to the tangible with new concepts of "scentability", "scentography" and "scentonics". Case studies from art, architecture, and urban design illustrate practical interventions, from scented materials to landscapes and devices, showing how olfactory design operates across scales and durations.

Wild Nature in Cities

Design for a Post-Pandemic World

Timothy Beatley and J.D. Brown

This book collects the many stories, experiences and innovative policies and strategies by which cities and local governments have helped to facilitate and strengthen essential pandemic-era nature-connections. It makes the central point that contact with nature and the outdoors was (and is) an essential element of a healthy, resilient city. The book provides a view to the longer-term effects of the pandemic on the design of cities and how nature will figure into these trends and likely future changes. The book will be useful to policymakers, urban researchers, and citizens, as well as students and faculty.

Fundamentals of Community Design for Wellbeing

Fostering Sustainability and Livability

Avi Friedman, McGill University, Canada

Fundamentals of Community Design for Wellbeing addresses the need to rethink the philosophy and form of residential environments due to recent social, economic, environmental and cultural shifts, including depletion of non-renewable resources, elevated levels of greenhouse gas emissions, and climate change. The book highlights planning strategies for liveability and wellbeing of communities from notable international case studies, addressing varied issues including accommodating elderly populations, designing walkable communities, and closing the affordability gap. This book is essential for students of urban planning, architecture and sustainability.

Creating Sustainable Cities Through Pedestrian Urbanism

Hyesun Jeong

This book explores how communities worldwide are rethinking the relationship between mobility, place, and belonging. Drawing from cities across North America, Europe, and Asia, this book examines the shift from car-dominated planning toward human-centered design. It traces how walkable environments support environmental goals while fostering social connection and cultural vitality, demonstrating that sustainable cities are also more equitable and livable cities. Written for urban practitioners, community advocates, and engaged citizens, this work offers insights rather than prescriptions, recognizing that each place requires its own approach to pedestrian urbanism.

Placemaking with Tall Buildings

A Guide to Ten Key Planning and Design Principles

Khair Al-Kodmany

This book reconceptualizes tall buildings as civic agents that deliver spatial legibility, cultural significance, and vibrant social interaction by embedding placemaking at the heart of vertical development. Drawing on global case studies, it articulates ten pragmatic planning and design principles that explain how holistic, context-sensitive design can weave vertical structures into their surrounding fabric, fostering inclusivity, environmental responsiveness, and a distinct sense of place. This work equips architects, planners, policymakers, and students with a comprehensive toolkit to transform tall buildings from isolated monuments into dynamic, human-centered environments.

Reframing Cities for Resilience

Embracing Complex & Uncertain Futures

Arun Jain

We live in times of profuse change. This book challenges the traditional realms in which urban design and planning operate and argues that the first step towards adaptive and resilient futures is making a fuller spectrum of the complexity of cities comprehensible to all. Drawing upon cultural anthropology, evolutionary biology, economic theory, behavioral sciences, systems thinking, and technology, it provides fresh foundations for addressing decades of physical and social underinvestment and neglect across a range of urban challenges. This book is essential for urban designers, planners, landscape architects, and postgraduate students.

TEXTBOOK

Spatial Justice

The Basics

Roberto Rocco

Series: The Basics

Spatial Justice: The Basics offers an accessible introduction to spatial justice as both a theoretical framework and a practical agenda for urban transformation. It examines how urban space is produced, contested, and governed, and how it is implicated in broader dynamics of inequality, recognition, and participation. The book draws on key thinkers to articulate spatial justice through its distributive, procedural, and recognitional dimensions. Designed for upper-level undergraduates and postgraduates in planning, geography, and architecture, the book includes a glossary of key terms, end-of-chapter summaries, and diagrams to support critical engagement and classroom use.

Protests Beyond the Plaza

Everyday Spaces, Urban Morphologies, and Strategies

Edited by Kateryna Malaia and Nathan M. Hutson

The chapters in this volume investigate some of the most important urban upheavals in recent history through different political, social and cultural contexts. Through a global cross-section of case studies, the authors envision the future of the successful urban protest as a whole-society movement in which all aspects of a city's morphology are effectively leveraged. Using interviews, mapping, architectural and planning-scale documentation of urban morphologies, the book traces the development of important protests and the evolution of protest strategy. It will be of interest to architects, urban sociologists, and anyone else interested in how the city shapes resistance.

Progressive Planning Practice

Transforming Communities of Color

Edited by Sean Robin

Planning, design and community development have often been practiced in a monocultural way, meaning that communities of color and low-income communities are often overlooked or ignored, if not outright harmed. This book highlights a new approach for transformative community development, where worldviews are rooted in the culture of communities of color and everyday people can find expression in decisions about a community's future. Chapters explore themes such as decolonial planning, climate injustice, Black planning, and ethics. This book is essential for professionals, students and professors of urban planning, design, and community development in the US.

Continuous Value Management in Healthcare

Elevating Safety, Cost, and Efficiency with a Staff-Led Approach

Cameron Stark, Kay Cordiner, Poonam Gupta and Jeffrey Rakover

There are international pressures on healthcare delivery because of increasing demand and rising costs. Maintaining quality while containing costs is a challenge in both privately and state funded services. If service quality decreases patients suffer and staff are often unhappy. Recruitment and retention become a challenge in services with perceived reduced quality. Continuous Value Management offers a method of managing the tensions between cost, quality, and staff engagement. This book describes a method of managing quality while containing costs.

Patient information is not like other types of information. It is very personal. That is why healthcare information must be kept both private and secure. Yet, there are many challenges. From technical misconfigurations to vulnerabilities and human mistakes, there are several reasons why healthcare cybersecurity programs face common pitfalls. The strength of a program largely depends on how well it is governed—and how well we are managing who (and what) has access to our systems, networks, devices, and physical spaces; when they have access; and why they have access.

Emerged Markets

The Global Economy's Better Half

Vasuki Shastry

This book builds a compelling case that a new settlement is needed, that rebalances power, well beyond existing arrangements such as the G20, and creates a shared vision to build economic growth and prosperity. The alternative is a world which lurches from crisis to conflict, jeopardising peace and prosperity. The very phrase "emerging markets" connotes that some countries are still developing and cannot compete with mostly Western global economic heavyweights. But the rise of China and India have not been isolated phenomena, with many other emerged countries also becoming confident about their place in the world: these are emerged markets, not the Global South or the Third World.

MOVE

AI-Powered Strategy for a Fast World

Tim Lewko

Developed by Tim Lewko, a 25-year strategy veteran, MOVE shows leaders how to embed artificial intelligence directly into the strategy process and validate strategic bets, pressure-test assumptions, and adapt faster than the competition – all while maintaining control over final decisions. This book reveals how AI can power real-time data analysis, surface critical indicators that signal when a strategic bet is veering off-course, and show when emerging threats require immediate attention. In a rapidly changing world, MOVE is a key tool for senior executives, business leaders, board members, CEOs, Presidents, and P&L owners to regain control across the entire execution cycle.

Dichotomies in Media and Communication Theory

Bart Cammaerts

This innovative textbook explores media and communication theory, and its intersections with social and political theory, through the prism of eight core dichotomies. Students will gain a nuanced understanding of media and communication theories by examining both sides of each dichotomy and their dynamic interplay. This textbook is designed for undergraduate and postgraduate students taking media and communication theory courses. Instructors teaching critical media and communication theory will find the dichotomy-based approach particularly valuable for helping students navigate complex theoretical debates and understand the field's intellectual development.

Locating Media Industries

Spaces, Places, Platforms

Edited by Paul McDonald, King's College London, UK, Christopher Meir and Andrew Spicer

Examining how media industries actively shape, and are shaped by, attachments to place and movements across geographical spaces, this volume illuminates the many spatial dimensions of 'globalised' media. Written by leading scholars in the field, this international collection explores how media industries both occupy and generate spaces and places. Here, spatial dynamics are represented by the formation of global production networks, the impacts of virtual production technologies, and the franchising of space at media-themed leisure attractions. Locating Media Industries is essential reading for students and scholars of film, media and/or creative industries.

100+ Tips on How to Embed Inclusivity into Your Practice

Edited by Neelam Sidhar Wright

The Inclusive Training Playbook is an essential resource that offers over 100 practical ways to make training sessions more inclusive for learners from underrepresented and marginalised groups. Each chapter explores the gap between inclusive teaching literature and practical training advice, and focuses on empowering trainers to confidently address the needs of minoritised individuals and integrate EDI principles into their sessions. Whether you are designing content, developing doctoral curricula and courses, or refining delivery methods, this resource is a must-read for anyone committed to making higher education training inclusive, accessible, and impactful.

Bodies of Learning

How Embodiment Science Transforms Education

Guy Claxton and Emily Poel

Bodies of Learning is a bold reimagining of education through the lens of embodiment science. Claxton and Poel challenge outdated assumptions that separate mind and body, revealing the interconnectedness of the 'bodymind'. Drawing on cutting-edge research in embodied cognition, this book integrates heart, gut, brain, feeling and action into the learning process, reshaping how we think about intelligence, learning, and teaching. Packed with actionable ideas and reflective exercises, Bodies of Learning is essential reading for educators, as well as anyone passionate about creating a truly holistic and effective education system for the future.

Teacher Autonomy

Where Has It Gone and Why We Need It Back

Sophie Smith-Tong

Teacher Autonomy is a compelling exploration of the erosion of teacher independence in an era dominated by high-stakes accountability, rigid educational frameworks, and a growing distrust of educators. Through the voices of educators, including teachers, teaching assistants, senior leaders, and early years practitioners, this book paints a vivid picture of the challenges faced by those on the frontlines of education. This book is a must-read for teachers, school leaders, and policymakers at any stage of their career, offering valuable insights into how to rekindle meaningful connections at the core of teaching, as well as navigate change in the current educational landscape.

That's the Way I Think

An Exploration of Neurodiversity

David Grant, British Psychological Society

The 4th edition of David Grant's bestseller is an insightful exploration of neurodiversity. Taking a lifestyle approach, Grant provides a compassionate understanding of diagnostic categories, including dyslexia, dyspraxia, dyscalculia, ADHD and autism, with particular attention to oft-overlooked female experiences and those without formal diagnoses. This resource serves multiple audiences: individuals who are or suspect they may be neurodivergent, their families and partners, and professionals who interact with them. It provides insights for anyone seeking to understand and appreciate the complexity of neurodivergent experiences.

Designing and Applying Experiential Learning in Higher Education

Colin Beard

Series edited by Joy Jarvis and Karen Mpamhanga

Series: Critical Practice in Higher Education

This insightful text is aimed specifically at educationalists and HE lecturers who wish to adopt a more balanced, holistic and inclusive approach to designing learning experiences.

As lecturers are urged to adopt research-based teaching, it recognises the complexity of student learning and explains how knowledge can be constructed in various ways, not just socially and culturally but also, for example, psychologically, emotionally, sensorially, biologically, and cognitively. The Critical Practice in Higher Education series provides a scholarly and practical entry point for academics into key areas of higher education practice.

Climate Education and Sustainability in the Primary Classroom

Our World Their Future

Sophie Nelson, Lewis Morgan and Leigh Hoath

This engaging guide will empower primary school teachers to incorporate climate change and sustainability into their curriculum, enabling them to feel confident and competent in navigating this pressing global issue, without adding to teacher workload. Many teachers recognise the urgency of climate change and the need for pupils to engage with it but are unsure about how this should be approached in practice. Through a multi-disciplinary approach, this book provides the tools for teachers to educate and motivate their pupils to become active contributors to their school communities and beyond.

Designing Lessons in the AI-Infused Classroom

A Five-Stage Framework for Educational Intelligence

Christopher Miller

Designing Lessons in the AI-Infused Classroom shows middle and high school teachers how to redesign their lessons and units with intentional use of artificial intelligence. In a world where students can use tools like ChatGPT to complete traditional assignments without actually learning anything, our new challenge is to design learning experiences that AI can't do for them. Teachers, teacher-leaders, and school technology coordinators will be better prepared to rethink traditional instruction and use AI to complement rather than replace human interaction and self-expression.

Lifetime Carbon Debt

Chris Anastasi, Anastasi London Ltd, UK

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

Lifetime Carbon Debt shows how individuals can help global efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by addressing their own annual and lifetime emissions. People around the world look to governments to provide leadership and action on climate change, and to industry and the wider business community to reduce emissions associated with their activities. However, individuals also have an important role to play by taking responsibility for their emissions. In this book Chris Anastasi offers guidance on how they can do this depending on their personal circumstances.

Decolonising Death Studies

Edited by Panagiotis Pentaris, University of Greenwich, UK, Stacey Pitsillides and Hajar Ghorbani

Social and cultural factors can strongly influence how we approach death and dying, including attitudes towards death, rituals and practices surrounding death, and end-of-life care. Through its collaborative and interdisciplinary approach, the proposal breaks new ground by bringing together a diverse range of perspectives and voices, fostering rich dialogue and promoting inclusivity. This innovative approach promises to catalyze meaningful change and advance critical scholarship in death studies. It will be of interest to all undergraduate and postgraduate course on death studies across both humanities and social sciences.

Food and Gender

Making the Modern World

Candice GoucherSeries: Gendering World History*

Food and Gender: Making the Modern World places food and gender at the center of the human experience and through this creates a new periodization for modern world history. In focusing on food and gender, and the connections between them, the book shows that a shift in the markers of modernity is needed, away from the traditional perspectives organizing this history that emphasize war, political states, and the global economy which often exclude and marginalize women and trivialize the study of foodways.

Freeing Children and Young Adults from Shame, Scales, and Stigma

A Practical Guide for Parents, Teachers, and Clinicians

Lauren Hartman

This practical guide empowers parents, educators, and clinicians with the tools they require to free children and young adults from body shame and weight stigma. Designed to be accessible and efficient with clearly organized sections, concise summaries, and ready-to-use resources for each context, it offers strategies for repair when conversations about weight and health haven't gone as intended. Whether you're a doctor in an exam room, a parent at the dinner table, or a teacher in a classroom, this book will help you feel confident and prepared to have these conversations in a way that prioritizes health without perpetuating stigma or harm.

Art Therapy Theories

A Critical Introduction

Susan Hogan, University of Derby, UK

Art therapists work with a range of distinct philosophical and theoretical underpinnings, but prior to the first edition there had been no single book to offer an overview of these theories. Each chapter provides a non-judgemental, yet analytical, synopsis of each approach. Art Therapy Theories is aimed at trainee art therapists who need to demonstrate that they have a grasp of theory, as well as a sense of how the theory can translate into practice. It will also appeal to seasoned therapists, counsellors and to a wide range of professionals in the mental health field.

Protest Music in Latin America

Politics, Faith, and Social Justice

Edited by Nestor Quiroa

Protest Music in Latin America: Politics, Faith, and Social Justice addresses the impact of protest music in Latin America between the late 1950s and the 2000s. This was a time of continental fervor for revolutionary change and social transformation. This book analyzes the interplay between faith and politics in the music of social protest across the region. It places these songs in historical context and offers a window into the religious and cultural life, language, and thought of social actors in Latin American history.

Cultivating Epistemic Justice in Music Education

Honoring Minoritized Knowers

Juliet Hess, Michigan State University, USA

Cultivating Epistemic Justice in Music Education helps music educators understand how to support minoritized populations in their capacities as knowers. This book considers music education through a discursive framework of epistemic injustice to foreground issues related to credibility, authority, situatedness, silencing, prejudice, and exploitation. Offering considerations for a range of identities and supported by vignettes, the book is the ideal resource for music education researchers, music teacher educators, practicing teachers, and graduate music education students interested in better serving minoritized populations.

Power, Knowledge, and Covid-19

The Making of a Scientific Orthodoxy

Alex Broadbent, Durham University and Pieter Streicher, University of Johannesburg and Durham University

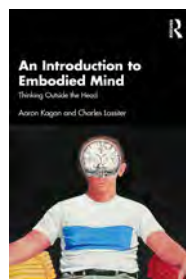

Power, Knowledge, and Covid-19: The Making of a Scientific Orthodoxy shows, step by step, how a dominant scientific line on Covid-19 was built and defended—and what it left out. Pairing clear conceptual analysis with accessible evidence reviews, the authors probe where models misled, where uncertainty was overstated or understated, and where costs, context, and equity were neglected—especially in low-resource settings. For readers in philosophy, public health, policy, and beyond, this is a concise, non-polemical account of what went wrong, what went right, and how to do better next time.

Green Thinking

Unlearning Outdated Ideas in Science, Economics and Politics

Natalie Bennett

Green Thinking seeks to “compost” the views of dead white men (Rene Descartes, Thomas Hobbes, Adam Smith, Norman Borlaugh) and of some not white or dead (Francis Fukuyama, Richard Dawkins, Richard Thaler), and to explore the flowering of Green thinking in the 21st century, growing from the nutrients that microbes and their kin are generating from the wreckage. This book will appeal to fans of David Graeber, Kate Raworth, Tyson Yunkaporta, Jason Hickel, Anna Tsing, Robin Wall Kimmerer, Ursula Le Guin, Bruno Latour, Wangari Maathai, Merlin Sheldrake, Vandana Shiva, Lynn Margulis, Kim Stanley Robinson, listeners to the New Books Network, Past Present and Future and HPS podcasts.

Key Topics in Memory

Richard J. Allen and Charity Brown

Series: BPS Key Topics in Psychology

Key Topics of Memory explores the essential role of memory in human cognition, and how it connects us to the past, grounds us in the present, and guides our anticipation of the future. The book examines the dynamic and active nature of memory, exploring how it is influenced by both conscious effort and automatic, non-conscious processes, while addressing its remarkable flexibility, detail, and capacity alongside its fragility and vulnerability to distortion and loss. In doing so, it examines how memory enables us to learn, make decisions, pursue our goals, and maintain meaningful connections with others and the world around us.

Key Topics in Clinical Neuropsychology

From Science to Practice

Sara Da Silva Ramos, Brainkind, UK and University of Surrey, UK, Christopher Byrne, University of Liverpool, UK and the NHS (North Wales Brain Injury Service), UK and Rudi Coetzer, Bangor University, UK

Series: BPS Key Topics in Psychology

This text provides a concise and engaging introduction to the science and practice of clinical neuropsychology. It takes readers on a journey beginning with the history of discipline, through exploring some of the classic case studies in neuropsychology which have brought valuable insights into understanding how the brain works, even before we could see it in action. Early chapters look at the beginnings of the field and the impact that the emergence of neuroimaging and the use of different research methodologies have had on the development on the discipline.

Living Beyond Brain Injury

A Compassionate Resilient Guide for Survivors

Vicki Hall

Living Beyond Brain Injury is a practical guidebook for people living with brain injury. Rooted in theory from brain science and drawing on therapeutic methods including cognitive behavioural models and third wave approaches, it introduces a values-based mindset called the Compassionate Resilient Mind (CRM). This balances compassion and resilience to support people's recovery, adaptation, and growth. The book explores common post-injury challenges such as memory, fatigue, controlling emotions, and identity, whilst offering practical strategies for improvement. These include easy-to-use worksheets to fill in, simple comparisons and ways to become more flexible in thinking.

A Historical Introduction

Chad Meister, Bethel College, USA and J.B. Stump

Christian Thought: A Historical Introduction offers a clear and engaging overview of the major ideas, figures, and movements that have shaped Christian theology from the early Church to the present day. Now in its third edition, this accessible and engaging book introduces readers to the historical development of Christian thought, emphasizing how theology has been shaped by—and has responded to—changing cultural, philosophical, and political contexts. This new edition features expanded coverage of Eastern Orthodoxy, the Reformation beyond Calvin, and the global expressions of Christianity that have come to the fore in recent decades.

Revealing Britain's Systemic Racism

The Case of Meghan, The Duchess of Sussex

Kimberley Ducey and Joe R. R. Feagin

Revealing Britain's Systemic Racism identifies and documents the plethora of ways systemic racism continues to shape ecological spaces in the UK. Kimberley Ducey and Joe R. Feagin challenge notions of racial inclusivity by applying theoretical work to make a unique and significant contribution to literature in sociology. The second edition of this book continues and updates the saga of Meghan's experiences, underscoring the myriad ways systemic racism continues to shape spaces in the UK, detailing how most white Britons continue to cling to colorblind myths about their democratic country as the mainstream British media denies the extensive racism that people face.

Solidarity Economics

Building Sustainable Social Relations

Cynthia Kaufman

Series: Bridges to Another World

Solidarity Economics: Building Sustainable Social Relations lays out the landscape of these projects aimed at building a better world, and explores the institutional frameworks needed for them to expand. It asks broader questions about what is needed to help them build toward just and sustainable societies based on relations of solidarity. Drawing on indigenous economics and anti-capitalist theory, this book critiques the idea of an economy as something autonomous from the rest of society and helps us see practical pathways to building systems which ensure that everyone's needs are met.

Viral Debt

The Production and Reproduction of Economic Vulnerability

Edited by Jodi Gardner, Mia Gray and Frederick F. Wherry

Challenging how social scientists, policymakers, legal scholars, and the public examine household debts and wellbeing, Viral Debt traces how debt moves within and across households to communities and institutions, with devastating effects. This volume offers urgent answers by drawing on quantitative data about household indebtedness, credit and debt policies, and local court actions, together with qualitative research.

Human Inquiry for Living Systems

Building in Research and Evaluation for Life

Yoland Wadsworth

If we don't have the kinds of health and human services or even the kinds of lives, communities and organisations we want, then we need to think differently. Yoland Wadsworth offers an inspired insight and radically new proposition: that the act of our 'inquiring', of researching and evaluating together, is the way by which every living organism and all collective human life goes about continuously achieving the conditions for life. All three of Yoland Wadsworth's best-selling books have been brought together in this Routledge trilogy to offer for the first time a coherent body of work addressing the pressing needs of people to 'inquire their way' to the future.

At Home in the City

Domestic Architecture for Challenging Urban Sites

Alan Power

The concept of home represents fundamental human needs - both for physical shelter and emotional belonging - yet housing provision is a perpetual and global issue.

Could awkward, unusual and difficult urban sites hold the key to unlocking more homes?

At Home in the City examines how architects can overcome the restrictions and challenges of these overlooked sites to create dwellings of imaginative power. The projects showcased demonstrate the potential hidden within a place, engaging with the character of the site, its location, orientation and aspect, in order to create reflective and expansive domestic space for a variety of lifestyles.

Featuring historic and contemporary buildings from all over the world, the projects are organised around themes derived from the characteristics of each site, including thresholds and privacy, pushing boundaries, finding nature and retrofitting. The book is both a guide to working with difficult sites as well as a masterclass in how a deep understanding of site and place leads to special, poetic outcomes - and, critically, more much-needed houses.

Future Homes

Domestic Architecture in a Changing World

Ellie Stahaki

Close to nature, sustainable, healthy, social, spectacular...

We ask a lot of our future homes and the architects that design them.

Over time, innovative domestic design has taken many forms. Different eras, shaped by specific needs, challenges and opportunities, have given their own interpretation of this most essential of buildings - the home - defining what it could look like, what it might signify and how it should function.

Today, new challenges have emerged within this dynamic landscape, including climate change, the pursuit of diversity and equity across society and the role of emerging technologies, such as AI. The needs of today - and therefore the house of tomorrow - require human-centric and context-responsive solutions, grounded in resilience and responsibility, without compromising on visual appeal and aspiration.

Future Homes showcases diverse, cutting-edge case studies of homes that both address issues of our times and look stunning while doing it. As well as an inspirational showcase of architecture that leads the way into the future, the designs offer valuable insights into how we can find balance and refuge in a rapidly changing and volatile world.

The Urban Design Toolkit

Philip Black

The Urban Design Toolkit provides a comprehensive compendium of applied urban design methods, techniques and approaches.

Comprising 32 original 'toolkits', the book offers detailed step-by-step guidance across three core practices. Firstly, on contextual analysis, ranging from the strategic to the human scale and focusing on the ways in which people understand and interact with their surroundings; secondly, on the responsive design of functional streets, spaces, green infrastructure and building arrangements; and finally, on the wide-ranging approaches to effectively communicating evidence-based urban design.

Over 300 original graphics and images enhance the reader's understanding of urban design as a technical vocation. Using bespoke supporting examples and international best practice case studies, from Oslo and London to Toronto and Hong Kong, the book is a visually compelling and insightful instruction manual for students, educators and professional practitioners alike.

Whatever your level of experience and expertise, The Urban Design Toolkit will enhance your understanding and develop your skills in the pursuit of contextually responsive, people-centred, high-quality urban design.

Social Housing

Definitions and Design Exemplars

Paul Karakusevic

Architects are at the forefront of a new generation of social housing projects that are playing a crucial role in the reinvention of cities.

Public housing is a growing sector undergoing a huge period of change. As local authorities and design practitioners take on the housing crisis, they must navigate contemporary issues of demographic change, climate adaptation and rising costs.

Social Housing provides a roadmap. This new edition of the landmark 2017 volume showcases the best affordable housing from across the UK and Europe. Through a range of essays and interviews from leading practitioners, it provides practical insights into the very different mechanisms behind delivery across European nations.

Examining 25 case studies from seven countries, the book breaks down boundaries between national cultures and addresses pressing issues such as climate resilience, zero carbon, ageing populations, urban equity and material innovation. Exploring quality neighbourhood and dwelling design, Social Housing inspires practitioners and housing pioneers to learn, adapt and propose solutions for the future.
