A Clinician's Guide to ADHD in Women

Diagnosis and Treatment

Kathleen Nadeau , Patricia Quinn , Michael Morse

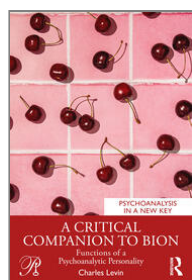

A Clinician's Guide to ADHD in Women provides readers with a toolbox of strategic therapeutic approaches for diagnosing, treating, and working with women with ADHD. Vignettes illustrate how an application of strategies, medication, social solutions and care can facilitate and treat women with ADHD and co-occurring psychiatric conditions. This book is an essential resource for clinicians and treatment providers that wish to transform the lives of women suffering with both diagnosed and undiagnosed ADHD.

A Critical Companion to Bion

Functions of a Psychoanalytic Personality

Charles Levin

Series: Psychoanalysis in a New Key

A Critical Companion to Bion is an introduction to the extraordinary contributions of W.R. Bion, providing a close detailed reading of his work, anchored in systematic critical expositions of the arguments in his four main theoretical studies (1962-1970). With a careful, detailed analysis of Bion's work and a clear vision of how it can be applied to theory and clinical work, this is key reading for all psychoanalysts and psychoanalytic psychotherapists.

A Holding Space While You Wait for Therapy

An Open Letter from Therapist to Client

Jessica Bowers

Bridging the gap between self-help and therapy, A Holding Space While You Wait for Therapy provides insight, support, compassion and hope to clients who are waiting to begin counselling and psychotherapy. Readers will benefit from building their knowledge through accessible psychoeducation, learning practical tools, and reading case vignettes which demonstrate these ideas in practice. Mirroring the way in which a therapist 'holds space' for a client, this book provides non-judgmental support to those experiencing challenging moments within their lives.

A Humanistic Framework for Supporting Autistic Children and Young People

An Introduction to the Accept Approach

Aaron Yorke

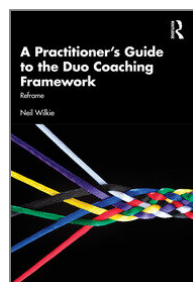

This book calls for a fundamental re-examination of how education, health, and care systems respond to autistic children and young people. Rather than focusing on how to manage behaviour or address perceived deficits, it shows how the practical application of acceptance can be a transformative way to support autistic children more effectively. Written for educators, professionals, policymakers, service providers, and those with lived experience, this book offers a practical alternative to traditional autism support models.

A Psychoanalytic Framework for Civic Renewal

Reimagining Democracy from the Ground Up

Karyne E. Messina

Series: Psychoanalysis, Technology, and the Future

A Psychoanalytic Framework for Civic Renewal: Reimagining Democracy from the Ground Up offers a compelling and original thesis: that the global crisis of democracy is not a purely political or economic problem but a deeply rooted psychological and relational one. This book serves as a vital resource for educators, policymakers, and mental health professionals, offering an interdisciplinary framework that bridges the divide between abstract political theory and practical, psychological solutions.

A Therapist's Reflections on Authenticity

Congruence and the Modern World

Chris Molyneux

Rooted in Carl Rogers' Person-centred approach, this book skilfully combines person-centred theory with social commentary to explore the root of many problems people face: a lack of authenticity. A Therapist's Reflections on Authenticity is written by an experienced therapist, blending real-world experience with grounded reflection; offering a human, emotionally literate guide through the messy path to authenticity. Molyneux blends relatable observations, social commentary and personal experience to accompany the reader through this journey. This book is written for those feeling the strain of performance, avoidance, people-pleasing, burnout, anxiety or persistent difficulties.

A Trauma Model for Assessing Siblings

The Sibling Paradox

Tim Woodhouse, Norma Howes

Drawing on decades of therapeutic and social work practice, this volume offers actionable guidance, tools, and insights, culminating in a complete assessment model for use in court, care planning, and therapeutic settings. Building upon the foundational understanding of trauma-informed assessments of sibling relationships in care and permanence planning within the authors' other publication Foundations, Trauma, and the Child's Voice in Sibling Relationships, it addresses when and how to separate siblings, when to keep them together, and how to support ongoing contact in a child-centered, developmentally informed way.

Absent Fathers, Yearning Sons

A Jungian Analysis of the Father-Son Dynamic

Susan E. Schwartz Jungian analyst, USA; IAAP, APA, NMSJA

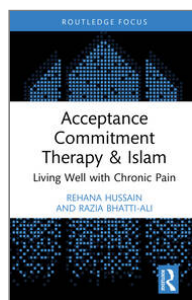

Building on the success of her first book that explored the father/daughter relationship, Susan Schwartz turns her attention to the father/son dynamic in this compelling new work. Drawing on the fields of psychoanalysis, Schwartz applies the concepts of absence to the Jungian concept of the search for the self. This is an essential resource for analytical and depth psychologists, therapists, academics, and students with Jungian and post-Jungian interests. It also serves as a valuable guide for anyone seeking to understand and heal the intricate dynamics between fathers and sons.

2ND EDITION

Art Therapy Theories

A Critical Introduction

Susan Hogan University of Derby, UK

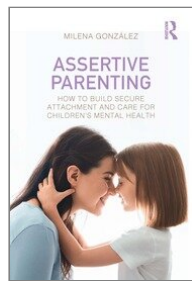

Art therapists work with a range of distinct philosophical and theoretical underpinnings, but prior to the first edition there had been no single book to offer an overview of these theories. Each chapter provides a non-judgemental, yet analytical, synopsis of each approach. Art Therapy Theories is aimed at trainee art therapists who need to demonstrate that they have a grasp of theory, as well as a sense of how the theory can translate into practice. It will also appeal to seasoned therapists, counsellors and to a wide range of professionals in the mental health field.

Attachment, Climate Crisis and the Natural World

The John Bowlby Memorial Conference Monograph 2024

Edited by Linda Cundy Bowlby Centre, UK

Series: The Bowlby Centre Monograph Series

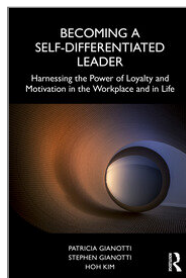

This is the first book to consider the psychological and social impact of global warming through the lens of Attachment Theory. The contributors reflect on our relationship with the natural world from the perspective of Bowlby's major themes, including the nature and primacy of the attachment instinct for survival, the secure base, separation anxiety, maternal deprivation, loss and mourning. The value of renewing our relationship with, and respect for, the natural world we are part of is explored, as is working with psychotherapy clients who are troubled by the climate emergency and suffering caused around the world by continued reckless plundering of natural resources.

Beyond the Pleasure Principle Revisited

Clinical Explorations in the 21st Century

Edited by Rachel Chaplin

Series: The Psychoanalytic Ideas Series

Contemporary Readings of Freud's Beyond the Pleasure Principle explores this strange and unsettling text, and the impact it has had since its publication in 1920. The contributors to this book, representing diverse psychoanalytic traditions, invite us to re-read and to re-find Freud's text in its rich complexity. There is much to explore beyond the death drive: the chapters included here reflect on the notion of a necessary binding 'before the pleasure principle', the genesis of psychic representation, the value as well as the cost of the repetition compulsion in psychic life and offer an account of the origins of symbol formation.

Creative and Aesthetic Ways of Grief

"All Things Reimagined"

Edited by Mórna O'Connor Aarhus University, Denmark,
Dorthe Refslund Christensen Independent scholar, Denmark

Series: Series in Death, Dying, and Bereavement

Inspired by the grief of Australian musician Nick Cave, this edited anthology showcases a range of creative and aesthetic practices for dealing with grief. In doing so, it challenges attempts to homogenise grief and depict it as a solely negative state from which the bereaved must expediently escape. Via these layered and living articulations, this book reflects our capacity—and indeed our right—to craft griefs resonant with our own ways of being, lives and contexts. This anthology will be of interest and inspiration not only to diverse academics and grief practitioners alike, but to all of us who are mortal and all of us who grieve.

Curved Being, Knowing, and Ethics in Psychoanalysis

Möbius Inflections

Todd Anderson

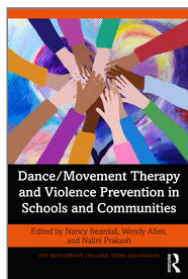

Series: Psychoanalysis in a New Key

In Curved Being, Knowing, and Ethics in Psychoanalysis, Todd Anderson develops a Möbius model of analytic life in which knowing and being fold continuously into one another. By reframing psychoanalysis through topology and ethical relation, Curved Being offers clinicians and theorists a new vocabulary for working with uncertainty and symbolic remainder while remaining grounded in the immediacy of the analytic encounter.

Decolonizing Mental Health Research

Integrating Indigenous Land-Based Perspectives and Therapeutic Frameworks

Jody Houle, Kevin Lewis, Ranjan Datta

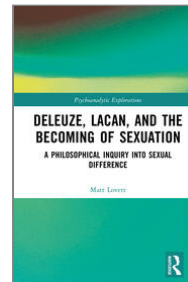

This book reimagines health research through Indigenous knowledge systems, specifically Cree First Nation land-based science. With contributions from a range of Indigenous, academic, and interdisciplinary experts, this book challenges dominant Western health paradigms by centering wāhkóhtowin — a Cree kinship system that acknowledges the interconnectedness of all beings, human and non-human — as a foundation for holistic health and healing. It is ideal for health researchers, educators, policymakers, practitioners, and graduate students seeking decolonized, community-centered approaches to health and well-being.

Deleuze, Lacan, and the Becoming of Sexuation

A Philosophical Inquiry into Sexual Difference

Matt Lovett

Series: Psychoanalytic Explorations

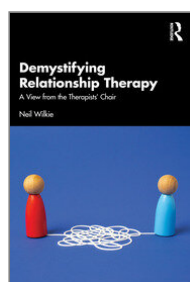

This book brings together Gilles Deleuze and Jacques Lacan, two thinkers widely considered to be incommensurable, in order to reconcile two positions also often considered to be incommensurable: sexual difference theory and gender theory. It contends that sexual difference is the central idea linking Deleuze and Lacan, and that Deleuzian sexuation holds sexual difference and gender theories together. A novel perspective on a crucial yet intractable problem, this book will be of interest to students of continental philosophy, psychoanalysis, feminist theory, queer theory, trans studies, and gender studies.

Embracing Trauma in the Classroom

Tools for Transformative Teaching and Learning

Samuel Z. Shelton Iowa State University, USA

Embracing Trauma in the Classroom articulates a framework for understanding trauma not as a merely biological or individual reality, but as a social production that is inseparable from systems of power and oppression. Drawing from social theorists, educators, and on-the-ground activists, this book considers how a politically conscious understanding of trauma rooted in the lived experiences of oppressed and dehumanized people can trouble and reform social justice education. This text offers concrete skills and understanding for educators to apply in a wide range of classrooms and educational settings, both on campuses and in the community.

Fiction in Documentary Film

A Psychoanalytic Exploration

Bruce Eadie

Series: The Psychoanalysis and Popular Culture Series

Fiction in Documentary Film explores the use of fictional elements in contemporary documentaries about personal trauma. Bruce Eadie argues that the documentary-making process can be a dynamic, therapeutic process which bears comparison to the clinical practice of psychoanalysis. Traumas rooted in the past are reactivated in on-screen relationships and fictions bring representational content to otherwise unrepresented aspects of traumatic experience. With reference to Freud, Winnicott, Bion and especially post-Lacanian French psychoanalytic thinkers, Eadie emphasises the theatrical, enacted, bodily and affective aspects of trauma and documentary.

Fighting for Connection

Perspectives on Conflict and Intimate Partner Violence

Jef Sloodmaeckers, Lieven Migerode, Linne De Loof

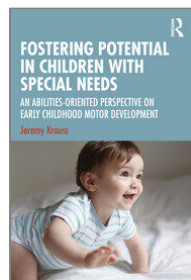

Fighting for Connection offers a fresh, nuanced perspective on conflict and partner violence, blending emotional, relational, and scientific insights through the lens of Emotionally Focused Therapy (EFT). The book speaks to couples experiencing escalating conflict, as well as to professionals supporting them. It reframes partner violence as a relational problem, providing pathways toward healing without oversimplifying the challenges involved. Through real-world examples, therapy principles, and actionable guidance, the book empowers readers to restore safety, connection, and empathy in relationships.

Helping Children

Principles of Good Practice in Child Mental Health

Peter Fuggle, Peter Fonagy

Series: Anna Freud

Young people's mental health is recognized as one of society's most pressing challenges. Distress & disorders have risen sharply while services struggle to keep pace. Long waiting lists & public concern highlight the gap between the need and the professional systems with the expectation that therapy alone should provide the answer. By leading figures in child mental health, the book offers a powerful framework for rethinking how society responds to young people's distress. For professionals, educators, parents & policymakers alike & to show how families, schools & communities can work together to nurture resilience & belonging, to reduce dependence on overstretched services.

Humour and Healing in the Person-centred Therapy Room

Micheal Kentish

This book dispels the myth that humour has no place in today's therapy room, offering concrete advice to trainee and practising counsellors, their educators and supervisors on how to work with humour confidently, empathically and congruently. This book offers insights from psychological, sociological and neuroscientific research into what humour reveals about a person's character and emotional state, and how that enables the counsellor to connect and empathise with the client. Providing practical advice on how to work with humour as and when it arises, this is an essential tool for students, novice, and experienced practitioners alike.

Music Therapy and Adoption

Co-creating Therapy Centered on Adoptee Lived Experience

Joy Gravestock

Operating at the leading edge of music therapy, Music Therapy and Adoption provides an in-depth examination of one single case study, then compares this to a wider range of examples of the author's practice to identify four repeated 'adoption themes' that arise in therapeutic work. As a non-verbal modality, music therapy is particularly well-placed as a creative intervention for work with adoptees and their families. Accessibly written and informed by lived experience, this is an essential read for music therapists, other mental health professionals, and, most importantly, adoptees themselves.

Narcissism in Personality, Pathology and Psychotherapy

Carsten René Jørgensen

Modern Western culture and modern human beings are often described as narcissistic (Lasch, 1979). Among other manifestations, this toxic narcissism is expressed in a lack of recognition of our own basic vulnerability, aggressive and grandiose defences against (recognizing) this vulnerability, greed, lack of mutual empathy, tendency to take offence and to react with narcissistic rage to perceived narcissistic injuries rather than engage in curious exploration of what is happening inside us and between us when crises and social conflicts escalate.

Ordinary and Presumptive Trauma

Exploring the Psychological Impacts of Oppression

Samuel Z. Shelton Iowa State University, USA

Ordinary and Presumptive Trauma offers a sociopolitical account of trauma grounded in the lived experiences of oppressed and socially disadvantaged peoples. In doing so, this book seeks to articulate a theory of trauma that generates space for the recognition of historical and ongoing political violence, the collective healing of harmed people, and the bridging of psychological theories with social justice scholarship and activist traditions. Accordingly, this book provides a multi-faceted approach that appeals to a wide readership in multiple disciplines, such as psychology, women's and gender studies, ethnic studies, queer studies, and more.

Psychoanalysing Mind-Body Narratives through Beckett and Artaud

The Trauma of the Body

Sarah Meehan O'Callaghan

Series: The Lines of the Symbolic in Psychoanalysis Series

This book provides an epistemology of the body as it relates to subjectivity through an analysis of selected works of Antonin Artaud and Samuel Beckett. Presented in three parts, the book explores a fundamental premise: that there is a traumatic and alienating dimension to embodiment that resists expression within representational systems and is core to the being of any subject. Psychoanalysing Mind-Body Narratives through Beckett and Artaud will be essential reading for psychoanalysts in practice and in training, and for academics and scholars of Lacanian studies, psychoanalytic studies, the body, disability studies, and literary and theatre studies.

Psychoanalysis and Euripides' Suppliant Women

A Tragic Reading of Politics

Sotiris Manolopoulos

This book explores how ancient tragedy illuminates contemporary political crises through a psychoanalytic lens. Through a "tragic" reading of Euripides' play, The Suppliant Women, it demonstrates how fractured societies attempt to "heal" themselves through populism, authoritarianism, cruelty, and cultures of deception. This interdisciplinary study will be of interest to psychoanalysts in practice and in training, as well as academics and scholars of psychoanalytic studies, politics, and classical studies, and anyone seeking to understand how ancient wisdom addresses modern democratic challenges and the pathological mental functioning manifest in contemporary politics.

Psychoanalytic Explorations of Embodied Relational Knowing

Doris Brothers , Jon Sletvold

This book offers groundbreaking insights into relational theory, exploring the patient's and the analyst's longings to know, be known, and not known in psychoanalytic relationships, and the embodied nature of the healing process. Recognition of the patient's unknowable uniqueness, which is not fully accessible by means of empathy, is shown to promote more ethical therapeutic practices. With an informed and compassionate perspective, this book is essential reading for psychoanalysts and psychotherapists regardless of their theoretical orientation.

Psychologists with Lived Experience of Disability

Navigating Clinical Practice

Edited by Susan Jacques

A wealth of guidance is available on supporting clients with lived experience of disability - yet there is little available that focuses on understanding the first-hand experience of psychologists who themselves identify as having a disability. This book responds to this gap in literature by providing narratives of psychologists with disabilities and exploring how their disability interacts with their experience of working in clinical practice. The accounts represented within this book are varied, reflecting the wide range of experiences and challenges that psychologists with disabilities may encounter during their practice.

Recidivist Victims in Psychoanalysis

The Attachment to Suffering and the Hope for Repair

Tahiri Rojas

Series: Relational Perspectives

This book explores the understudied phenomenon of victimization recurrence, introducing the clinically robust concept of the recidivist victim and translating it into an innovative diagnostic tool: the Clinical Spectrum of Recidivist Victims, developed from over twenty years of clinical practice. Dr. Rojas presents a relational psychoanalytic framework that maps the range of psychological positions individuals may occupy in relation to repeated harm. It is intended for clinicians, researchers, and practitioners, as well as for anyone who believes they are, or have been caught in recurring patterns of victimization and seeks to understand them without judgment.

Relational Foundations

A Relational-Neurodevelopmental Approach to Cumulative Trauma in Clinical Practice

Paul Renn in private practice, London, UK

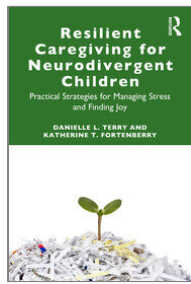

This book develops a relational-neurodevelopmental framework for understanding how early experience becomes procedurally encoded, organised, and transmitted across generations. Drawing on three decades of clinical practice, it brings psychoanalysis, attachment theory, infant observation, and neuroscience into dialogue with the lived moment of therapeutic work. Structured in four parts, the volume addresses key clinical domains, such as enactment, sexuality, power, forensic settings, and psychosis, while staying grounded in practice. Written for psychotherapists, clinicians, and scholars, this book offers an integrative, ethically attuned account of development that honours complexity.

3RD EDITION

Rewriting the Rules

A Guide to Love, Sex and Relationships

Meg John Barker

We live in a time of uncertainty about relationships. We search for The One but remain single because nobody measures up. This new edition considers how the rules are being 'rewritten' in various ways: in monogamous, monogamish and polyamorous relationships, through different ways of understanding sex and gender, and via new ideas for managing commitment and breakup when economics, communities, or child-care make complete separation impossible. The book empowers you to find an approach that best fits your situation, concluding with a reflection on how we might collectively rewrite our rules of relating during times of collective crisis.

The Entanglement of Culture and Psychosis

Perspectives Across Disciplines and Experiences

Edited by Ingo Lambrecht , Anna Lavis

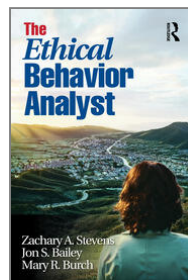

Series: The International Society for Psychological and Social Approaches to Psychosis Book Series

Anyone wishing to explore severely distressing mental states – those called psychosis in psychiatric nosology - may be struck by the many socially and culturally-shaped ways in which these are experienced, understood and treated. At this stage we can also pose the question: how can psychiatry maintain its therapeutic aim and free itself from the spectrum of social domination if it persists to cling to so-called universal norms of thinking and behaving while ignoring the asymmetry of the doctor-patient relationship?

The Ethical Therapist

A Guide to Confident Decision-Making in Clinical Practice

Lisa René Reynolds

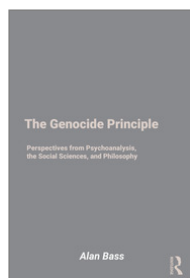

This practical guide transforms complex therapeutic codes of ethics from organizations like AAMFT and APA into accessible, everyday guidance for navigating ethically challenging cases in clinical practice. Rather than presenting ethics as abstract concepts, Dr. Lisa René Reynolds illustrates key ethical themes through relatable, real-world scenarios that therapists encounter in their daily work. This book offers rich, detailed discussions stemming from each ethical principle, complemented by illuminating clinical case examples of best (and worst) practices in therapeutic settings.

The Genocide Principle

Perspectives from Psychoanalysis, the Social Sciences, and Philosophy

Alan Bass

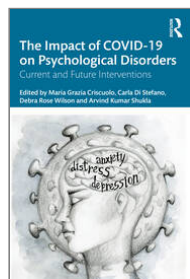

This book explores how and why genocide is a trans-cultural and trans-historical phenomenon, reflects the unconscious processes that drive human nature, and draws broadly on psychoanalytic theory, and on social science and philosophical perspectives. Using Bass's own research on genocide and his considerable clinical psychoanalytic experience, it examines what it is within us that leads us to see some people or groups as 'other', what we project on to these groups, how we can come to dehumanise them, and how mass murder can become a purportedly ethical imperative. It is key reading for all psychoanalysts and psychotherapists, and for philosophers, social scientists, and psychologists.

The Primacy of Affect

Psychotherapy, Culture, Philosophy

Edited by Manu Bazzano University of Cambridge, UK

This volume features a diverse range of voices exploring affect theory in relation to psychotherapy, culture and philosophy. The 1990s saw the beginning of the affective turn, an important cultural shift which influenced the arts, politics, and culture, but failed to reach the world of psychotherapy. What would it be like if practices such as psychotherapy would take more fully on board the importance of affect? Based on a series of seminars led by Manu Bazzano over the course of 2020-2025, this volume breaks new ground by drawing on affect theory, queer and feminist theory, literature and art to outline new ways of practicing psychotherapy and supervision.

The Psychodynamics and Psychogenesis of Parentification

Mark Kinet Psychoanalyst in private practice, Belgium

Why do some of us grow up too soon and spend a lifetime caring for others at the cost of ourselves? In this deeply humane study, psychiatrist and psychoanalyst Mark Kinet explores parentification: the invisible role reversal in which children become their parents' caretakers, confidants, or even partners. Written with clarity and compassion, The Psychodynamics and Psychogenesis of Parentification is both a clinical study and a meditation on the human need to give and be given to. It speaks to therapists, scholars, and all readers seeking to understand the paradox of 'loving' too much and too early.

Therapeutic Assessment and Interpersonal Neurobiology

Empathy, Intersubjectivity, and the Longing to be Known

Stephen E. Finn Center for Therapeutic Assessment, USA

Therapeutic Assessment and Interpersonal Neurobiology shows how collaborative assessment can function as a potent therapeutic intervention—reducing shame, strengthening epistemic trust, and catalyzing meaningful change. As a sequel to his influential book, In Our Clients' Shoes: Theory and Techniques of Therapeutic Assessment, the author offers a renewed and transformative vision of psychological assessment grounded in contemporary neuroscience, attachment theory, and decades of clinical practice. This is an invaluable resource for psychologists, particularly those who use the MMPI-2, MMPI-3, Rorschach, AAP, and EMP.

Trauma and Somatic Healing

Wayfinding and the Intelligence of Experience in Therapeutic Practice

Rochelle Sharpe Lohrasbe Private practice, British Columbia, Canada

Trauma and Somatic Healing offers an integrative, non-pathologizing framework for understanding human experience. Drawing from neuroscience, trauma-informed care, somatics, metaphysics, and poetic narrative, the book invites readers to consider the self as an ecosystem—dynamic, adaptive, and relational. It speaks to clinicians, therapists, educators, and reflective seekers who long for deeper, more compassionate maps of human development and healing. With nature-based metaphors, dimensional awareness, and emergent theory, this book guides readers into richer relationship with themselves and the world around them.

Unknowning as Truth

Epistemic Inversions and the Recursive Psyche

Todd Anderson

Series: Psychoanalysis in a New Key

Unknowning as Truth reframes psychoanalysis as a discipline of recursive hospitality through the lens of epistemic inversion—treating unknowning not as deficit but as the living medium of analytic truth. With a rich blend of clinical vignettes, teaching pathways, study prompts, and a lexicon for supervision, this book offers a teachable, clinically resonant architecture for psychoanalysts.

Working with Childhood Memories and Avoidance in Trauma Counselling

The Power of Remembering

Kate Mikhailouskaya

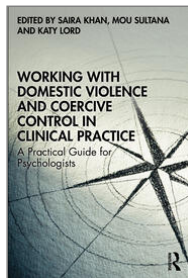

Advocating for the active exploration of childhood memories and the natural avoidance that accompanies them, this book provides a clear entryway into complex and childhood trauma work, particularly in cases where tangled histories and overwhelming symptoms make it challenging for both counsellor and client to prioritize focus areas. Designed to transcend any single therapeutic approach, this book is an engaging read for psychotherapists, counsellors, and mental health practitioners seeking to enhance their practice with a deeper understanding of the role memories and avoidance play in trauma recovery.

Writings for a Liberation Psychoanalysis

Politicizing the Unconscious from the Core of a Crumbling Empire

Robert K. Beshara

Series: The Lines of the Symbolic in Psychoanalysis Series

In Writings for a Liberation Psychoanalysis, Robert K. Beshara establishes a groundbreaking framework that links the Freudo-Lacanian tradition directly to transmodernity and decoloniality. Traditional psychoanalytic institutions have long been tethered to colonial logic, often pathologizing the marginalized rather than challenging the structures that oppress them, but Beshara shows how psychoanalysis can be a tool for liberation. This book is designed for undergraduate and postgraduate students, scholars, and professionals interested in psychoanalysis, liberation, and decoloniality.

Zoological Lacan

A Lacanian Framework for Animality

Teddy Duncan Jr.

Series: The Lines of the Symbolic in Psychoanalysis Series

Zoological Lacan examines the importance of Lacanian theory for understanding animals by situating them in Lacan's thought, relying on the occasional and fleeting (but surprisingly consistent) statements on animality throughout his work. Zoological Lacan announces—to the study of animals, psychoanalysis, and philosophy—that a new theory has emerged on the scene, one that warrants substantive and sustained engagement.

6TH EDITION

A Beginner's Guide to Structural Equation Modeling

with LISREL, Mplus, and R

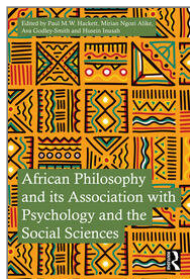

Randall E. Schumacker, Tiffany A. Whittaker

This new update includes thorough insights on theory testing, data analysis, and results interpretation; a focus on using LISREL, Mplus, and R programs; and an increased focus on SEM terminology, output, model types, and analyses. It also includes two new chapters on reproducing results in SEM journal articles and conducting a Monte Carlo analysis. Examples with real data make theory easier to understand and allow SEM beginners to conduct, interpret, and write up analyses for observed variable path models to full structural models. Exercises at the end of each chapter strengthen the utility of the book for beginners.

African Philosophy and its Association with Psychology and the Social Sciences

Edited by Paul M.W. Hackett, Mirian Ngozi Alike, Ava Godley-Smith, Husein Inusah

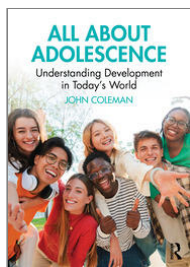

The book is a symposium of leading voices addressing philosophical questions and considerations that psychological and other forms of social science research and practice raise. In doing so, it offers a unique introduction to the philosophical understanding of the methods of social science research from the perspective of a range of African philosophers. There are many features of predominantly qualitative research that will be presented and considered in this book forming a repository of African philosophical writings that consider the nature and processes involved in qualitative, psychological, and social science research.

5TH EDITION

An Introduction to Cognitive Psychology

Processes and Disorders

Edited by David Groome

An Introduction to Cognitive Psychology: Processes and Disorders provides a comprehensive and accessible overview of the field for undergraduate students. The fifth edition has been thoroughly revised throughout to provide a comprehensive introduction to the core topics of cognition, including memory, perception, thinking, and language. Uniquely, the chapters covering normal cognitive function are paired with chapters on their related clinical disorders such as agnosia, amnesia, and aphasia. The book therefore provides a balanced insight into the nature of cognition and its related disorders, which is not found in other cognitive books.

A-Z of Memory

160 Essential Concepts

John P. Aggleton

Series: A-Z Guides for Psychology

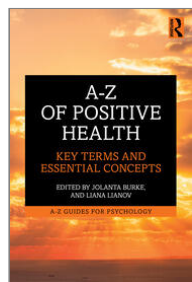

This book compiles and explains the key terms and core concepts related to memory in an easy-to-navigate A-Z format. The quest to understand how memory works and how it fails remains a cornerstone of both Psychology and Neuroscience; however, defining memory is not easy. At a higher level, memory is sometimes seen as a psychological function for the preservation of information, while other definitions focus on remembering. In this innovative book, John P. Aggleton delves into the many definitions and attributes that constitute memory and guides the reader through over 160 entries ranging from Aging to Repression; Dementia to Working Memory.

A-Z of Positive Health

Key Terms and Essential Concepts

Edited by Jolanta Burke, Liana S. Lianov

Series: A-Z Guides for Psychology

A-Z of Positive Health sheds light on a range of positive health topics in an easy bite-sized format. Positive health is a rapidly growing field that combines positive psychology (the science of wellbeing) and lifestyle medicine (the science of lifestyle). Whilst lifestyle medicine aims to reduce the incidence of non-communicable diseases, positive psychology aims to help people flourish emotionally, socially, and psychologically regardless of their health status. Thus, together they serve as a powerful approach to treating and promoting mental, physiological, and physical health.

Brazilian Amerindian Cannibalism and the Making of the Eternal Body

A Jungian Perspective

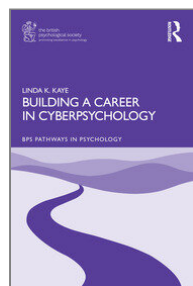

Inácio Cunha, PhD

Drawing on extensive research into archaic Amerindian communities, this book presents a revolutionary thesis: Tupinambá cannibalism was not primarily about absorbing the qualities of the consumed enemy, but rather served as a sacred pathway toward constructing an eternal, incorruptible body. The author meticulously examines how warfare and ritualistic enemy consumption formed the cornerstone of a complex religious system deeply committed to transcending mortality. This work challenges conventional anthropological interpretations and offers fresh insights into the universal human quest for eternity.

Complementary Realities and the Quantum World

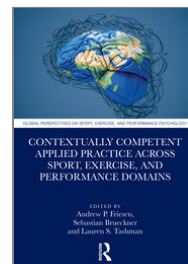

Sudip Patra, Menas C. Kafatos

This is a unique text that explores quantum-like modelling frameworks that connect quantum mechanics with cognitive science and consciousness studies to propose a new ontological framework that transcends traditional boundaries between physics, philosophy, and cognitive science. The book develops along two complementary paths. First, it explores quantum-like modelling an exciting emerging field where researchers apply logical and mathematical structures from quantum mechanics and information theory to cognitive modelling and decision science. Second, it investigates the profound links between quantum science and consciousness studies.

4TH EDITION

Designing Experiments and Analyzing Data

A Model Comparison Perspective

Scott E. Maxwell University of Notre Dame, USA, Harold D. Delaney University of New Mexico, USA, Ken Kelley

Designing Experiments and Analyzing Data: A Model Comparison Perspective (Fourth edition) offers an updated version of the award-winning text that has influenced the social sciences for more than a generation. Maxwell, Delaney, and Kelley first apply fundamental principles to simple experimental designs followed by an application of the same principles to more complicated designs. Their integrative conceptual framework better prepares readers to understand the logic behind a general strategy of data analysis that is appropriate for a wide variety of designs, which allows for the introduction of more complex topics that are generally omitted from other books.

Developing Cross-Cultural Competence for Leaders

A Strategic Guide

Joseph J. Thomas United States Naval Academy, Clementine K. Fujimura United States Naval Academy

Developing Cross-Cultural Competence for Leaders takes readers from ideational understanding to operational practice, challenging them to move beyond comfort zones and learn to navigate cultural complexity as a leadership requirement. The authors invite readers on a journey of self-discovery and professional awareness, examining how leaders engage peers, partners, and populations across the human terrain they inhabit—both consciously and unconsciously—in order to enable effective, empathetic, and mission-relevant communication.

Embracing Complexity

A Critical Approach to Efficacy and Manualised Practices in Psychotherapy

Patricia Talens

Series: Concepts for Critical Psychology

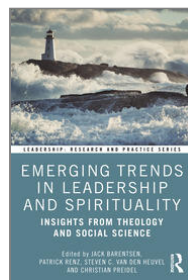

The book discusses how manualised treatments impact the therapist and their practice with clients, challenging the notion that measuring and repeating manualised psychotherapeutic practice always moves toward best practice. Pointing out alternative paths for therapists that come from a fuller and unfiltered understanding of the psychotherapeutic space, this book will be of great interest to students and researchers in the areas of psychotherapy, critical psychology and phenomenological studies, as well as mental health professionals and trainees.

Emerging Trends in Leadership and Spirituality

Insights from Theology and Social Science

Edited by Jack Barentsen, Patrick Renz, Steven C. van den Heuvel, Christian Preidel

Series: Leadership: Research and Practice

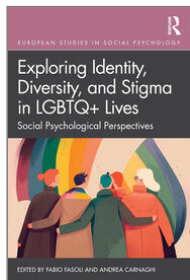

This book explores emerging discourses in leadership and spirit that are rooted in theoretical, epistemological, and empirical scholarship. This book examines the motivations and invisible forces that shape organizations and communities by taking a dual approach to the study of spirituality: the "Spirit" of religion and theological impulses and the human "spirit" in teams and communities. Contributors pursue narratives and theories both grounded in a reflective epistemology and enlightened by fresh theological as well as social scientific insights into lived experience and actual leadership practice.

Exploring Identity, Diversity and Stigma in LGBTQ+ Lives

Social Psychological Perspectives

Edited by Fabio Fasoli, Andrea Carnaghi

Series: European Studies in Social Psychology

This cutting-edge book provides a comprehensive overview of up-to-date research in the field of social psychology of gender identity and sexual orientation. The book is unique in considering perspectives from both dominant and marginalised groups. It illustrates how LGBTQ+ individuals conceptualise gender identity and sexual orientation and their intersections with other social categories. At the same time, the book examines how the dominant group (heterosexual cisgender individuals) form impressions and interact with LGBTQ+ people and how these people navigate social norms, expectations, and stigma.

Feeling Big, Feeling Small

The Human Yearning for Significance and Wonder

Sophia Moskalkenko, Arie W. Kruglanski University of Maryland

Why do we sometimes feel powerful, expansive, and driven—only to feel small, humbled, or overwhelmed moments later? This book proposes that much of human experience is shaped by a fundamental psychological rhythm between two states the authors call Bigness and Smallness. Written for psychologists and social scientists, this book also speaks to a wider audience of intellectually curious readers—students of culture and history, philosophers, clinicians, and thoughtful observers of contemporary life—interested in how inner experience, social forces, and meaning-making intersect.

Forensic Psychology in Prisons and Probation

Edited by Neil Gredecki Alpha Hospitals and Manchester Metropolitan University, UK, Jo Bailey

Divided into four parts, the book begins by considering the role of assessment and intervention, before discussing the specific requirements of specialist populations. The book then explores how forensic psychologists can work with the system before concluding by covering professional issues such as ethics. Each chapter draws on core psychological theory and research, including HMPPS generated research outcomes and innovative practice, and focuses on the positive impact that psychological practice can have alongside implications for the future.

Fundamental and Frontiers of Medical Education and Decision-Making, Volume 2

Innovation, Implementation, and Translational Research

Edited by Jordan Richard Schoenherr Department of Psychology, Concordia University, Loyola Campus

This volume examines education and decision-making in the health professions across diverse implementation contexts, exploring the negotiation between biomedical Western medicine and local traditions, practices, or constraints. Theoretical approaches such as collective competence, socioecology, and heterarchy provide lenses to understand how systems adapt and evolve. The result is a comparative exploration of how medical education reflects broader social, cultural, and political forces.

Infancy in Uganda

Infant Care and the Growth of Love

Mary D. Salter Ainsworth

Series: Psychology Press & Routledge Classic Editions

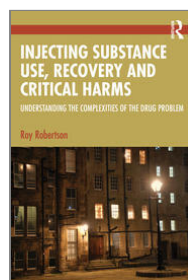

Infancy in Uganda: Infant Care and the Growth of Love by Mary D. Salter Ainsworth, a pioneering study on early childhood attachment, returns in this special reprint edition, complete with a new introduction that situates Ainsworth's work amid contemporary debates and critiques. It explores the dynamics of mother-infant attachment within the Ganda community, analysing how cultural caregiving practices shape early emotional bonds. Ainsworth's meticulous observations of Ganda families in the 1950s, initially praised for their insights into maternal-infant bonds, have since become a touchpoint in discussions about the importance of cross-cultural observations.

Key Topics in Clinical Neuropsychology

From Science to Practice

Sara Da Silva Ramos Brinkind, UK and University of Surrey, UK, Christopher Byrne University of Liverpool, UK and the NHS (North Wales Brain Injury Service), UK, Rudi Coetzer Bangor University, UK

Series: BPS Key Topics in Psychology

This text provides a concise and engaging introduction to the science and practice of clinical neuropsychology. It takes readers on a journey beginning with the history of discipline, through exploring some of the classic case studies in neuropsychology which have brought valuable insights into understanding how the brain works, even before we could see it in action. Early chapters look at the beginnings of the field and the impact that the emergence of neuroimaging and the use of different research methodologies have had on the development of the discipline.

Key Topics in Memory

Richard J. Allen , Charity Brown

Series: BPS Key Topics in Psychology

Key Topics of Memory explores the essential role of memory in human cognition, and how it connects us to the past, grounds us in the present, and guides our anticipation of the future. The book examines the dynamic and active nature of memory, exploring how it is influenced by both conscious effort and automatic, non-conscious processes, while addressing its remarkable flexibility, detail, and capacity alongside its fragility and vulnerability to distortion and loss. In doing so, it examines how memory enables us to learn, make decisions, pursue our goals, and maintain meaningful connections with others and the world around us.

Leadership and Morality in Ethical Ambiguity

Navigating Accountability, Self-Development, and Communication Among CIA Officers

Caroline N. Walsh

Series: Leadership: Research and Practice

Drawing on original interviews and moral development theory, the book examines how leadership is enacted when formal rules are insufficient. Structured around accountability, self-development, and communication, it develops empirically grounded models that explain how leaders discern moral responsibility when organizational enforcement mechanisms fall short. Accountability introduces a decision framework that distinguishes operational, personal, and administrative harms. Self-development challenges organizational approaches that emphasize external competencies while neglecting internal development. Communication highlights its importance in leadership theories.

Liberation Psychology and Refusal

Confronting Capitalist Alienation, Ideology, and Nature

Nick Malherbe

Series: Concepts for Critical Psychology

To refuse is to assume a stance against that which is. We take up refusal when we push back, disinvest, ignore, and move away from. The book grapples with three anti-capitalist refusals that have been advanced in the liberation psychology tradition, namely: de-alienation, de-ideologisation, and de-naturalisation. Each of these refusals is fleshed out with a reflection on a practical example from the author's community-engaged work in South Africa. The book is intended for academics, educators, psychological practitioners, and students interested in drawing from critical, anti-capitalist traditions within psychology and perhaps, also, outside of psychology.

Living Beyond Brain Injury

A Compassionate Resilient Guide for Survivors

Vicki Hall

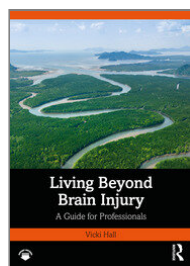

Living Beyond Brain Injury is a practical guidebook for people living with brain injury. Rooted in theory from brain science and drawing on therapeutic methods including cognitive behavioural models and third wave approaches, it introduces a values-based mindset called the Compassionate Resilient Mind (CRM). This balances compassion and resilience to support people's recovery, adaptation, and growth. The book explores common post-injury challenges such as memory, fatigue, controlling emotions, and identity, whilst offering practical strategies for improvement. These include easy-to-use worksheets to fill in, simple comparisons and ways to become more flexible in thinking.

Minds, Memes, and Manipulation

Psychological, Cognitive and Information Warfare in the Digital Space

Lee Hadlington Nottingham Trent University, UK

In an era where battles are fought not just with code but with culture, this book explores the evolving landscape of cyber conflict through the lens of psychology, cognition, and information warfare. Drawing on research from psychology, the book examines how online spaces have become fertile ground for memetic warfare, disinformation campaigns, and cognitive manipulation. Whether you're a researcher, policymaker, professional, or simply a curious reader, this book offers a compelling and timely analysis of the new terrain of cyber conflict, where minds are the battlefield and memes are the weapons.

Navigating Consent Through the Lens of Contemporary Sexualities

Nathalie Lugand , Gabriel Schnee , Géraldine Bray

Is consent simply saying "yes"? This book argues that it is not. Drawing on concrete cases—a BDSM scene that goes wrong, a dark romance reader facing judgment, a dominatrix rebuilding after domestic violence, and the invention of the telephone as a technology that captures us by the ears—it shows that consent is never a sovereign act but an opaque process, shaped by the unconscious, history, and power relations. The book brings together qualitative fieldwork, psychoanalysis, and queer theory to examine the tension between necessary frameworks (safewords, negotiation, communities) and their transgression in practice.

Navigating the Globally Evolving Field of Sport, Exercise, and Performance Psychology

Edited by Andrew P. Friesen , Sebastian Brueckner , Lauren S. Tashman

Series: Global Perspectives on Sport, Exercise, and Performance Psychology

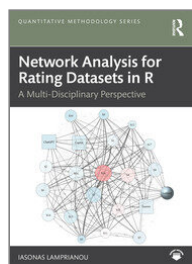

Divided into seven sections, the book provides insight into various identities a SEPP practitioner might have. It begins by assessing what the SEPP profession is by offering definitions of sport psychology and considers terminology, ethics, diversity, equity, & inclusion, and mental wellbeing. Section 2 focuses on career development, helping readers navigate such topics as business skills, and the global job market. Later sections then look at specific roles within the profession, including the SEPP Researcher, the SEPP Practitioner, the SEPP teacher and the SEPP Mentor.

Network Analysis for Rating Datasets in R

a multi-disciplinary perspective

Iasonas Lamprianou University of Cyprus, Cyprus

Series: Quantitative Methodology Series

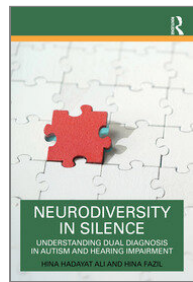

This is the 1st book to illustrate the use of Network Analysis for the analysis of rating datasets. It uses a multi-disciplinary approach to focus on the quantification and visualization of rater effects for exploration, diagnosis, reporting, decision-making, and planning. Combining cutting-edge theories of rater effects with step-by-step practical examples using publicly available data and open-source code, this book provides an introduction to the concept of rating datasets. It uses simple language to discuss data requirements, model assumptions, and other important details, and it follows all theoretical sections with practical applications that analyze empirical data step-by-step.

Neurodiversity in Silence

Understanding Dual Diagnosis in Autism and Hearing Impairment

Hina Hidayat Ali , Hina Fazil

In a world built for words, Neurodiversity in Silence reveals the powerful, often invisible experiences of children and adults living with both Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and hearing impairment. Through the lens of neuroscience, education, and human empathy, Dr. Hina Hidayat Ali and Dr. Hina Fazil invite us to see beyond diagnosis, and into a deeper understanding of minds that communicate differently. Whether you are a teacher, clinician, parent policymaker, or advocate, you will find guidance, and hope, within these pages. This may also be of interest to students and researchers in special education, psychology, neuroscience, and disability studies.

Neuroscience and the Dream of Digital Immortality

The Upload Illusion

Ildar Rakhmatulin

This captivating book tackles one of humanity's most profound questions: what is consciousness, and could we ever recreate it digitally? From ancient myths of immortality to cutting-edge neuroscience, this book takes readers on a fascinating journey through our evolving understanding of the mind. Written in clear, accessible language for curious minds everywhere, it reveals how we've progressed from discovering the first neurons to mapping entire brain networks with revolutionary technologies like fMRI and brain-computer interfaces. At its heart however, this is a book about consciousness itself: the mysterious experience of being aware, feeling, and thinking that makes us human.

Psychoanalytic Perspectives on the Israel-Gaza Conflict

Edited by Paul Cundy

This book creates a vital space for psychoanalytic thought on the Israel-Palestine conflict, one of the most polarizing and emotionally charged geopolitical struggles of our time. In the wake of the horrific events of October 7, 2023, and the subsequent war in Gaza, marked by death, famine, and destruction, the global community has been deeply divided. Refusing the collusion of silence in the face of alleged war crimes and genocide, this book offers a thoughtful exploration of the psychological mechanisms underlying the conflict and our responses to it.

Psychology of Everyday Life

An Evolutionary Approach

Gil Greengross , Lance Workman , Nigel Holt

Exploring the psychology of everyday behaviour, this book uses an evolutionary perspective to explain experiences that many people share and can easily relate to. This book focuses on topics that are applicable to what people do and experience in their daily lives. Why do we choose the partners we do? Why do we laugh? Why is play so essential for children? Why are we drawn to stories, music, and sweet food? The book examines such topics as sex and relationships, humour, family dynamics, religion, and media and technology through an evolutionary psychology perspective, looking deep into the ancestral past to uncover the adaptive roots of modern life.

Psychology of Traffickers

Insights from Romanian Prisons

Ludmila Bogdan

This book offers a rare and methodologically rigorous examination of the moral and psychological worlds of individuals convicted of human trafficking. Based on in-depth qualitative interviews with twenty incarcerated traffickers in Romania, the book analyzes how exploitation is rationalized, normalized, and sustained over time within conditions of inequality, migration, and institutional constraint. Designed for forensic psychologists, criminologists, and scholars of violence and inequality, the book provides a critical framework for analyzing accountability, risk, and intervention by foregrounding the moral reasoning through which exploitation persists.

Psychotherapy, the Individual and Society

Have We Got It Right?

Edited by Del Loewenthal University of Roehampton, UK

This book explores critical and thought-provoking questions about the role and impact of psychotherapy in addressing societal, environmental, and economic challenges. It examines whether the therapeutic practices we offer benefit our clients at the expense of others or even their own broader well-being. It challenges psychotherapists to consider their responsibility for their clients' accountability to others and explores how insights from non-Western cultures, which emphasise collective social identity, can enrich therapeutic practices.

Redefining Consciousness through the Intentionality of Time

Expressing Identity in the Third Millennium

Andrei Văduva, Razvan Calin

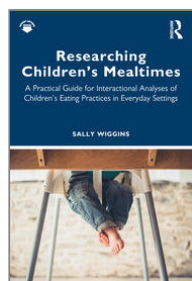

This book presents a revolutionary metaphysical framework that redefines consciousness through the intentionality of time, proposing that the subconscious operates via two distinct hemispheric systems that generate reason, meaning, and our fundamental relationship with reality. Building upon Husserl's foundational concepts, this work introduces the "intentionality of time" as a central principle for understanding consciousness beyond traditional biological limitations. The book proposes a novel dual-hemispheric model of the subconscious, where one system serves immediate survival through logic and fear, while the other addresses long-term ontological purpose through love and memory.

Rethinking the Psychology of Place

Being Here

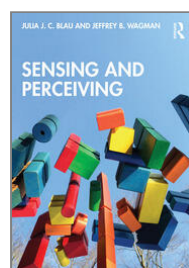

David Canter

Rethinking the Psychology of Place presents a new approach to Professor David Canter's 1977 Psychology of Place. Providing a unified Theory of Place relevant to human transactions with buildings, cities and nature, the book weaves together psychological, architectural and social perspectives to demonstrate that place is a dynamic phenomenon emerging from embodied experience, memory and social interactions. Central to this are 'place rules' and 'environmental roles' that mediate how individuals relate to and behave within locations, challenging deterministic notions that design directly causes place experiences.

Sensing and Perceiving

Julia J. C. Blau, Jeffrey B. Wagman

Sensing and Perceiving offers a comprehensive and highly accessible overview addressing two centuries-old questions: how are animals aware of their surrounding world, and how does this awareness enable everyday behaviors? Authors Julia J. C. Blau and Jeffrey B. Wagman provide a thorough description of the biological systems involved in these processes and examine both traditional and ecological approaches to understanding how these processes occur. The book features a conversational and humorous writing style with everyday examples that introduce novice readers to sensing and perceiving processes.

The Evolution of Hybrid and Remote Working

Transforming Office-based Jobs

Donald Hislop

This book examines the issues related to hybrid and remote working following the pandemic and the subsequent increase in returning to the office. While hybrid work is undoubtedly the 'new norm', for office-based jobs, the organisation of hybrid work arrangements continues to evolve, with many organisations attempting to adjust the balance to require workers to spend more time in the office. The book examines both traditional workplace issues (productivity, work/life relations, isolation and wellbeing, meetings, management) alongside workspace issues (virtual, office, mobile, and co-working), concluding with wider implications and potential future directions.

The Great Resignation as Neoliberal Compliance and Critique

A Foucauldian Analysis

Caroline Austin

Series: Concepts for Critical Psychology

This book examines how neoliberal power shapes individual subjectivity in contemporary American workplaces through the lens of the Great Resignation—the 2021 mass voluntary job departure phenomenon. Drawing on in-depth interviews and a Foucauldian framework, the book traces how neoliberal rationalities of choice, flexibility, and self-optimization shape the ways individuals explain their labor decisions and evaluate their lives. Rather than treating the Great Resignation as a singular rupture, the analysis situates it within longer historical transformations in governance, capitalism, and employment relations.

The Psi Enigma

When Anomalous Experiences Transcend the Everyday World

Thomas Rabeyron

The Psi Enigma: When Anomalous Experiences Transcend The Everyday World explores one of science's most fascinating frontiers: the study of psi phenomena including telepathy, precognition, and mind-matter interactions. While these phenomena remain controversial, recent research suggests current scientific paradigms may be too narrow to account for them. The author draws on psychology, psychoanalysis, philosophy, and physics to introduce the groundbreaking Orpheus Model—the first comprehensive theoretical framework for understanding psi. The book synthesizes decades of research while opening new perspectives on consciousness, time, and our relationship with the world.

The Psychology of Hallucinations

Gabriel Andrade

Series: The Psychology of Everything

What triggers a hallucination? Can our lifestyles impact the likelihood of auditory or visual hallucinations? Can hallucinations be a part of normal cognition? This book takes readers on a journey through visual and auditory hallucinations - perceptions experienced in the absence of external stimuli yet felt with compelling realism. It explores the ways hallucinations have been embraced throughout history by some cultures whilst also looking at how they have become a subject of scepticism and fear. The book adopts a compassionate look at the clinical and psychiatric implications of hallucinations alongside lifestyle factors such as sleep deprivation and substance use.

The Selected Writings of Edward S. Reed

Edited by Manuel Heras-Escribano, Anthony Chemero

Series: Resources for Ecological Psychology Series

The Selected Writings of Edward S. Reed brings to light the groundbreaking contributions of one of the most original thinkers in ecological psychology and philosophy of mind. This volume offers readers a rare opportunity to engage with the depth and breadth of Reed's theoretical insights. Edward S. Reed (1954–1997) was a thinker whose work forged a path for the integration of ecological psychology with philosophy, evolutionary theory, and political thought. Reed's unique synthesis of James Gibson's ecological approach with Darwinian and pragmatist perspectives yielded a philosophy of perception and action that was both radical and empirically grounded.

The Twofold Brain

Exploring Fundamental Questions about Brain Lateralization

Edited by Lesley J. Rogers, Giorgio Vallortigara University of Trento, Italy

The Twofold Brain: Exploring Fundamental Questions about Brain Lateralization takes a unique approach to the exploration of brain asymmetry by shifting the focus from the human brain to the intriguing realm of non-human species. This comprehensive work delves into the evolution, development, function, and causation of brain lateralization, with a primary focus on lateralization in a variety of non-human species. The authors challenge the traditional view that brain asymmetry is exclusive to human brains and demonstrate that lateralization is a fundamental aspect present in both large and small brains, even those organized differently from mammalian brains.

Understanding Health Psychology Through the Works of Stephen King

Getting Under Your Skin

Crista Crittenden

Not just your regular textbook, this unique book uses popular culture as a teaching tool by taking the work of Stephen King, America's top horror writer, to illustrate concepts that are essential to health psychology. The book uses his story telling and character development to illustrate the science of how psychology "gets under the skin" to impact physical health. It examines the history of health psychology and the biopsychosocial perspective, the biology of stress and emotion, the science of behavior change, structural (social) influences on health, personality and sleep science, the role of psychology in disease, and the evidence of the mind-body connection.

Understanding Leadership through Natural Sciences

A Fresh Perspective

Nathan W. Harter Christopher Newport University, USA

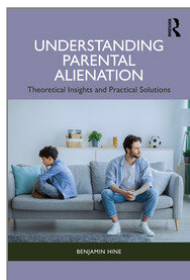

The book begins by exploring the contributions of Michael Polanyi to leadership in the sciences and progresses to innovative metaphors like fluid dynamics and folding/unfolding to describe leadership phenomena. The book also investigates the role of boundaries—spatial, temporal, and conceptual—in leadership systems, drawing on examples from literature, such as The Wizard of Oz, to illustrate these ideas. Further, it ventures into altered states of consciousness, such as dreams and poetry, as sources of leadership insight, and culminates in a discussion of metaphysics and organizing principles grounded in multiplicity.

An Introduction to Theories of Learning

Julio J. Ramirez , Matthew H. Olson Hamline University, USA

Now celebrating its 50th anniversary, An Introduction to Theories of Learning has provided a uniquely sweeping review of the major learning theories from the 20th century that profoundly influenced the field of psychology. The four main goals of this text are to define learning, to show how the learning process is studied, to place learning theory in a historical perspective, and to present essential features of the major theories of learning with implications for educational practices. In this new edition, the authors have retained the best features of earlier additions while expanding and enhancing its application to modern scholarship.

Dimensional Diagnosis

Practical and Conceptual Issues in the Integration of Personality and Psychopathology

Edited by Christopher J. Hopwood University of California, United States, Carla Sharp University of Houston, United States

Despite a general consensus that the mental health field is shifting toward dimensional diagnosis, key questions remain about exactly how this transition should occur. This book brings together leading scholars to discuss how personality is related to psychopathology, how this changes our understanding of mental disorders, how dimensional models can be applied clinically, and implications for training and research. The volume is uniquely structured around 15 core challenges identified by the editors. Within each chapter, two author teams weigh in with different perspectives on the questions posed, offering a window into critical debates at the cutting edge of clinical science and practice.

Executive Function and Emotional Regulation in the Classroom

Practical Strategies for Engaging Students and Promoting Independent Learning

Edited by Lynn Meltzer, Julie Dunstan

This book presents research-based strategies for helping students thrive academically, socially, and emotionally by harnessing the dynamic interplay of executive function (EF) and emotional regulation. The expert editors and contributors—including EF pioneer Lynn Meltzer—explain how teachers can support EF and emotional regulation with all learners, including neurodiverse students. Chapters describe ways to build students' ability to set goals, think flexibly, stay on task, manage their behavior, and reduce anxiety and stress. Case vignettes illustrate how the interventions discussed help to enhance student engagement while fostering resilience and independent learning.

4TH EDITION

Explaining Reading, Fourth Edition

A Resource for Explicit Teaching of Concepts, Skills, and Strategies

Gerald G. Duffy Michigan State University (Emeritus), United States, Roya Q. Scales Western Carolina University, United States

Now in a revised and updated fourth edition with 50% new material, this highly practical book guides teachers to demystify the reading process for students who are struggling. Thirty detailed lesson examples illustrate ways to explain and scaffold skills and strategies as an integral part of purposeful, motivating reading tasks. Teachers can use these examples as starting points for explicit instruction that meets their own students' particular needs. The book shows how to give students the "secrets" of understanding—and appreciating—both literature and informational texts. Numerous text boxes clarify conceptual understandings and share adaptations for different grade levels.

Get Ready for Data Science

A Primer for Social and Behavioral Scientists

Rex B. Kline Concordia University, Canada

Filling a key need, this book provides a gateway to modern data analytics written expressly for social researchers and students. Chapters on programming, data visualization, big data, and supervised and unsupervised machine learning build on readers' statistical strengths, emphasize concepts over equations, and feature rich graphics, including 11 color plates. Throughout, worked-through examples with real and simulated data prepare readers to apply the techniques. Pedagogical features include exercises with answers and a robust companion website including data sets; R-generated syntax, output, and graphics files; and three statistical primers.

Not Available

Edited by Tracy L. Tylka The Ohio State University, United States, Jennifer B. Webb University of North Carolina at Charlotte, United States, Matthew Fuller-Tyszkiewicz Deakin University, Australia, Rachel F. Rodgers Northeastern University, United States

Bringing together leading international experts, this volume synthesizes current knowledge on body image—its dimensions (both positive and negative); biological, psychological, and sociocultural influences; varied expressions and outcomes; and exemplary prevention and intervention programs. Fifty-eight concise chapters, concluding with informative reading lists in place of extended references, capture the richness and complexity of the field. The Handbook emphasizes a global, intersectional approach and showcases innovative measurement tools and research designs. This completely new volume is the successor to Body Image, Second Edition (2011), edited by Thomas F. Cash and Linda Smolak.

Integrating Diversity into DBT

Dialectical Principles and Clinical Applications

Lizbeth Gaona California Baptist University, United States, Lisa Bolden Emmada Psychology Center, United States, Katherine Anne Comtois University of Washington, United States

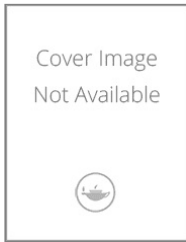

Crafted by skillful DBT experts, this unique guide provides concepts and strategies for more inclusive, effective practice with socioculturally diverse clients. The authors show how recognition and validation of clients' intersecting identities and experiences of marginalization mesh perfectly with DBT principles such as dialectics, humility, beginner's mind, and a therapeutic relationship between equals. Guidance is provided for tailoring interventions to overcome sociocultural gaps, applying diversity concepts in both individual sessions and DBT team, and self-reflecting on often unexplored cultural assumptions. The book includes case illustrations and reproducible/downloadable forms.

Meta-Analysis Using Structural Equation Modeling

A Practical Guide with LISREL, Mplus, and R

Randall E. Schumacker University of Alabama, United States

Filling a gap in the contemporary literature, this practical guide shows how structural equation modeling (SEM) can be used to analyze results from multiple different studies on the same subject. Randall E. Schumacker presents programs using LISREL, Mplus, and R software, complete with worked-through examples, procedural steps, and sample annotated code. He provides an overview of meta-analysis and the basic SEM modeling steps before delving into meta-analysis in path models, confirmatory factor models, and structural equation models (MASEM). Microinterventions

The Science of Nudging People toward Change

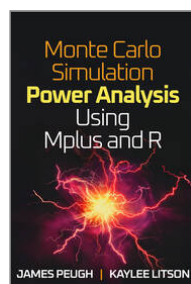

Craig Winston LeCroy Arizona State University, United States

Change can be overwhelming. This accessible book showcases quick, low-intensity therapeutic strategies to help clients take small steps toward change—especially when they feel stuck. Craig Winston LeCroy draws on extensive clinical experience and innovative multidisciplinary research. The book describes ways that nudges as simple as a journal entry, a grounding exercise, a new habit, or a reframed thought can prompt subtle but meaningful shifts in emotions and behavior. Vivid case examples illustrate how microinterventions work and how to implement them, regardless of clinical problem or treatment approach.

Monte Carlo Simulation Power Analysis Using Mplus and R

James Peugh Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center, United States, Kaylee Litson University of Houston, United States

This book provides clearly explained tools for using Monte Carlo simulations to estimate the needed sample sizes for adequate statistical power for a variety of modern research designs. Featuring step-by-step instructions, chapters move from simpler cross-sectional designs and path tracing rules to advanced longitudinal designs, while incorporating mediation, moderation, and missing data considerations. Worked-through applied examples with annotated Mplus and R syntax scripts, sample write-ups, and end-of-chapter suggested readings are included. The companion website offers Mplus and R code for four additional power analysis models, as well as supplemental computational materials.

Perfectionism

A Relational Approach to Conceptualization, Assessment, and Treatment

Paul L. Hewitt University of British Columbia, Canada, Gordon L. Flett York University, Canada, Samuel F. Mikail private practice, Canada

Grounded in decades of influential research, this book thoroughly examines perfectionism how it develops, its underlying mechanisms and psychological costs, and how to target it effectively in psychotherapy. The authors describe how perfectionistic tendencies rooted in early relational and developmental experiences make people vulnerable to a wide range of clinical problems. They present an integrative treatment approach and demonstrate ways to tailor interventions to the needs of individual clients. A group treatment model is also detailed. State-of-the-art assessment tools are discussed (and provided at the companion website).

Person-Centered Practices

From Individual Growth to Collective Change

Mick Cooper University of Roehampton, United Kingdom, William R. Miller University of New Mexico (Emeritus), United States

Uniquely interdisciplinary, this book explores contemporary applications of person-centered principles not only in counseling and psychotherapy, but also in education, health care, coaching, management, policing, and beyond. The text highlights the ongoing impact of Carl Rogers's foundational work and enumerates the key characteristics of the person-centered approach. Leading scholars and practitioners demonstrate how a shared relational philosophy can help bring about change in remarkably different contexts. Chapters integrate core principles and practices, rich case examples, current research, and emerging developments, with sustained attention to ethics, diversity, and social justice.

Reframing Failure in Behavior Change

Carlo C. DiClemente University of Maryland (Emeritus), United States, Mary Marden Velasquez The University of Texas at Austin, United States

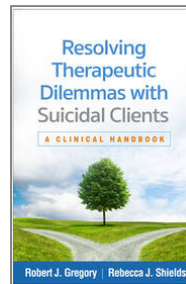

Reoccurrence or relapse happens with almost all types of behavior change—and too often is stigmatized. This compelling work from leading experts provides a fresh perspective on the function of failure in a person's journey through the stages of change. Whether in addiction treatment or other health care contexts, setbacks can help clinicians and clients identify what went wrong and adapt their approaches. The book examines the critical tasks of each of the pre-action and action stages of change and highlights key processes needed to move through them. It provides a vital multidimensional blueprint for using failure to make subsequent change efforts more effective.

Resolving Therapeutic Dilemmas with Suicidal Clients

A Clinical Handbook

Robert J. Gregory State University of New York Upstate, United States, Rebecca J. Shields State University of New York Upstate, United States

Engaging suicidal clients in treatment and recovery is intense and challenging. This concise, pragmatic guide shares principles and techniques grounded in research and extensive front-line experience. The book is uniquely structured around specific dilemmas or sticking points that frequently arise in the treatment of suicidal clients. It provides a roadmap for responding skillfully when a client says, for example, "I just want to die," "Nothing is going to help," or "If you discharge me, I'll kill myself." Rich clinical vignettes and transcripts illuminate the underlying dynamics of each dilemma and demonstrate effective ways to move through it, regardless of treatment modality.

Trauma-Informed and Culturally Responsive Practices in Schools

Building a Climate of Compassion

Isaiah B. Pickens

Series: The Guilford Practical Intervention in the Schools Series

In order to succeed in school, students fundamentally need to feel safe and connected—particularly when chronic stress at home, in the community, or at school make it difficult to learn. This book explains practical ways to infuse schools with trauma-informed and culturally responsive (TICR) practices that can foster compassionate relationships, promote the well-being of students and educators alike, and unlock students' potential. In a convenient large-size format, the volume is packed with case examples, checklists, activity guides, templates for assessment, and best-practice resources. The companion website offers 39 reproducible and downloadable handouts.

2ND EDITION

Writing the Literature Review, Second Edition

A Practical Guide

Sara Efrat Efron National Louis University, United States, Ruth Ravid National Louis University (Emerita), United States

Taking the stress out of a challenging process, the first book to focus on crafting different types of literature reviews (systematic, traditional narrative, and hermeneutic phenomenological) is now in a revised and updated second edition. The authors explain the integral role of the literature review in a thesis, dissertation, term paper, or grant proposal, and guide writers to develop reviews that reflect their research questions, methodological choices (qualitative, quantitative, or mixed methods), and approaches to knowledge. The text features examples of student work, excerpts from peer-reviewed articles, software suggestions, vignettes, group activities, and practical tips.

Treating Complex Mental Health Conditions with Mindfulness, Acceptance, and Self-Compassion

Edited by Brandon A. Gaudiano Butler Hospital and Brown University, United States, Mårten J. Tyrberg Västerås; Uppsala University, Sweden, Jessica L. Kingston University of London, United Kingdom

This timely practitioner handbook and text explores how to apply cutting-edge third-wave and process-based therapies to the real-world complexity that clinicians face daily. International experts describe ways they are using mindfulness, acceptance, and self-compassion in recovery-oriented treatment of challenging and co-occurring mental health conditions. Featuring accessible case examples and transdiagnostic therapeutic strategies, the book presents evidence-based tools to target underlying processes of change and help clients live in alignment with their values. Chapters include sidebars on specific techniques and practices, topic boxes, and resource lists for further learning.

What to Do When Your Partner Is Depressed

Supporting Your Loved One While Caring for Yourself

David J. A. Dozois University of Western Ontario, Canada

Depression is a heavy burden not just for sufferers, but for relationships, too. Renowned psychologist David J. A. Dozois walks readers through everything they need to know about depression and how to help a partner recover in this compassionate guide. Vivid stories illustrate practical strategies for communicating sensitively with a depressed partner, helping them find evidence-based treatment, encouraging them to reengage with activities they enjoy, and challenging negative thinking. Readers also get tools and tips for taking good care of themselves. For couples seeking to keep their bond strong and overcome depression together, this book offers a grounded, hopeful path forward.

A Beginner's Guide to Experiments in Consumer Research

Jeanette Carlsson Hauff, Jonas Nilsson

This concise, practical guide demystifies experimental methodology for students embarking on consumer research for the first time. The book follows the natural progression of conducting experimental research—from formulating research questions and building theoretical frameworks to designing experiments, analyzing results, and writing up findings. Each chapter combines scientific background with practical examples and hands-on advice, including helpful checklists for each stage of the research process.

A Methodology of Languageing Self

Autoethnographic Work in Diverse Literacy and Language Educational Studies

Edited by Jason D. DeHart

A Methodology of Languageing Self examines the role of critical methodology in literacy and language practices. Employing globally diverse autoethnographic approaches, it highlights varying perspectives and lived experiences from marginalised authors. Through a decolonial lens, this book offers fresh insights into the complexities of literacy and language practices. Drawing together marginalised voices and experiences through creativity and authentic (re)presentation, this book considers how autoethnography and qualitative methods can work within literacy and language studies.

Academic Writing, Visualization, Presentation, and Publishing of Research

Łukasz Sułkowski, Joanna Kurowska-Pysz, Katarzyna Szczepańska-Woszczyna

Academic Writing, Visualization, Presentation, and Publishing of Research is a comprehensive guide to scholarly communication in a digital research environment. Written for PhD candidates and early-career researchers in the social sciences and management, it shows how to write with clarity, visualise data with accuracy, present findings with confidence, and navigate publishing with integrity. Rather than treating these as separate skills, the book links them as one workflow: how arguments travel from a dissertation chapter to a figure, from a slide deck to a manuscript, and into peer review and open access publication.

AI in Social Sciences Research

Łukasz Sułkowski, Marcin Lis, Zdzisława Dacko-Pikiewicz

This book explains how artificial intelligence is reshaping social inquiry, from data collection and research design through analysis, interpretation, and theory-building. Treating AI as both a toolkit and a methodological shift, the volume offers a clear route into machine learning, natural language processing, simulation, and generative AI for social researchers, while keeping ethics, bias, transparency, and interpretability in view. Designed for postgraduate students, early-career researchers, and instructors teaching digital and computational social science methods, the book supports readers who want to use AI with methodological care, not just technical speed.

Autoethnography in Therapy

Exploring Therapist Emotions in Work with Self Injury

Joanna Naxton

This evocative autoethnography offers an intimate exploration of the emotional life of therapists working with clients who self-injure. Blending personal narrative with theory, it confronts the often-hidden world of therapeutic practice – fear, shame, anger, voyeuristic impulses, and a persistent undercurrent of existential anxiety. Written for counsellors, psychotherapists, trainees, researchers, and those who are experts by experience, and their families, this book does not offer resolution. Instead, it invites readers into a raw, reflective space – one that acknowledges the discomfort, uncertainty, and the pull to look closer.

Creative Research on Gender and Sexuality with Children and Young People

Making Methods Matter

EJ Renold, Tuija Huuki, Suvi Pihkal, Carol A. Taylor
Sheffield Hallam University, UK

Drawing on original empirical studies from a diverse array of international and transnational projects, contributors illustrate how they draw upon arts-based research and a wide range of creative methods, from body sculptures to zine-making, to engage children and young people at every stage of the research process, from a project's conception to its communication with diverse audiences. Each chapter foregrounds a particular method, and the central thread running through the book focuses on how gender and sexuality research with children and young people is configured, conducted and carries what matters into the world, when creativity is centred in the research process.

Creative~Relational Inquiries in the Wild

Edited by Fiona A. Murray , Jonathan Wyatt

Series: Qualitative Approaches for Psychotherapy and Allied Disciplines

Creative~Relational Inquiries in the Wild accompanies researchers and writers drawn to the possibilities of what 'creative~relational inquiry' might offer. Departing from the well-trodden paths of traditional, procedural qualitative methodology, each chapter explores how creative~relational inquiry invites an engagement that is intricate, intimate, and emergent. The volume meets the intrepid inquirer/reader by providing lively exemplars from those who are 'doing' creative~relational inquiries in and for their research.

Critical Qualitative Methodologies in Gender and Sexuality

Key Concepts

Edited by Maureen A. Flint , Luis Alvarez-Hernandez , Janie Copple , Joseph D. Sweet , Whitney Toledo

Series: Key Concepts in Qualitative Methods

This collection foregrounds the experiences, perspectives, and insights of emerging and established scholars who creatively and expansively approach the study of gender and sexuality through qualitative methodologies. By emphasizing positionality and subjectivity, contributors explore the ethical and responsible dimensions of inquiry, offering fresh perspectives on critical qualitative research. Divided into three sections, the text provides a comprehensive exploration of innovative approaches. The first section, "(Re)conceptualizations of Gender and Sexuality," re-envision the possibilities of critical qualitative research in these fields.

Doing Qualitative Research Critically

Disruptive Practices and New Materialist Entanglements

Angelo Benozzo , Vincenza Priola

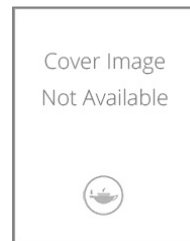

Doing Qualitative Research Critically: Disruptive Practices and New Materialist Entanglements interrogates practices of doing qualitative research in the social sciences. It inspires researchers to think differently about doing qualitative research and entering into contact with emergent methodologies of gathering, analysing and writing about social and organisational events. This engaging book is an essential read for research students and researchers across the social sciences and humanities, interested in exploring the landscape of critical qualitative methodologies and experimenting with doing research differently.

Endarkened Narrative Inquiry

Love as an Agent of Justice

Keondria E. McClish-Boyd

Series: Futures of Data Analysis in Qualitative Research

This book reimagines inquiry as a relational, embodied, and ethical practice. Drawing together theory, lived experience, and guided reflection, it challenges detached models of research and invites more accountable, responsive ways of listening, interpreting, writing, and representing knowledge. Conceptual grounding is paired with reflective prompts that ask readers to examine positionality, responsibility, and representation in knowledge production. Reflexivity, embodiment, and spirituality are taken up not as supplements to inquiry but as integral to how knowledge is formed, interpreted, and carried forward.

Epistemology and Methodology of Research in AI Age

Łukasz Sułkowski , Zdzisław Dacko-Pikiewicz , Katarzyna Szczepańska-Woszczyna

Series: New Methodologies of Research for PhD and Beyond

This book maps how artificial intelligence (AI), digital platforms, and big data reshape the foundations of social science and management research. It connects epistemology and research design to the practical choices researchers now face, from defining questions in data-rich environments to handling algorithmic bias and ethical risk. Written for doctoral students, early-career researchers, and methods instructors, this volume supports dissertation work and methods teaching across sociology, psychology, education, economics, and information science. It also anchors the wider series by setting a shared conceptual and ethical baseline for the volumes that follow.

Ethical Considerations and Academic Integrity in Research

Hamed Taherdoost University Canada West, Canada

Series: Mastering Academic Excellence

This comprehensive guide explores the critical role of ethical principles in contemporary academic research, addressing the evolving challenges researchers face in maintaining transparency, honesty, and accountability. As research methodologies advance and digital transformations reshape the academic landscape, this book provides essential guidance for upholding integrity across all disciplines. Essential for researchers, educators, and students committed to ethical scholarship, this resource also serves institutional leaders seeking to develop educational programs and policies that foster academic integrity.

Ethical Considerations in Promoting Equitable African Post-Colonial Research

Bunmi Isaiah Omodan , Sindile Amina Ngubane

The book presents a critical and accessible evaluation of research ethics within African contexts. It reconceptualises ethics as a relational, justice-oriented practice grounded in power dynamics, historical context, and community engagement throughout the research lifecycle. The book examines how dominant, universalised ethical frameworks often fail to adequately address the complexities of post-colonial research environments. It delves into key ethical domains, including power dynamics, informed consent within diverse cultural contexts, community engagement and knowledge co-creation, data collection and management, and publication ethics.

Ethnography's Ghosts

Spectres, Archives, Ancestors

Edited by Emilie Morwenna Whitaker , Paul Atkinson

With contributions from experienced scholars in sociology and anthropology, Ethnography's Ghosts illuminates and interrogates the 'ghosts' of past ethnographic fieldwork—whether revisited in practice or in the imagination. This book makes an important intervention in discussions amongst sociologists, anthropologists, and other social scientists engaged in or reflecting on ethnographic research.

Evocative Autoethnographies of Loss, Grief and Death

Edited by Ian R Lamond , Khyati Tripathi

Series: Writing Lives: Ethnographic and Autoethnographic Narratives

The book offers powerful and evocative reflections on how one's encounters with death and dying impact and frame how we approach and accommodate an understanding of loss and grief. The collection draws together critical autoethnographic narratives from several geographical regions and, significantly, communities of practice associated with loss, grief, and the end of life. Key themes include encountering loss, grief, and death through witnessing; the experience of the presence of absence felt as part of loss across diverse spheres (including public, digital, and imaginary spaces); autoethnography as therapy; the inheritance of the 'memory of death', through conversation.

Experimental Research

Brief Essays on Timeless Concepts

J. Carlos Santamarina , Andrea Muñoz-Ibáñez

This book offers a unique exploration of the experimental process that transcends disciplinary boundaries and technological trends. Through a series of concise, thought-provoking essays, the book distills enduring principles of scientific inquiry. Addressing foundational topics from measurement and dimensional analysis to cognitive factors in research and technical communication, it cultivates a deep, reflective understanding of experimentation as both an intellectual craft and a scientific discipline. For educators and established researchers, it offers fresh perspectives on mentoring the next generation of experimentalists in an era of rapid technological change.

Feminist Digital Methods

Edited by Aparajita Bhandari , Sarah York-Bertram

This book redefines the role of methods in research, pedagogy, and activism in an increasingly digitized world. Grounded in intersectional feminist epistemologies, it challenges the neoliberal fetishization of "methodological rigor" over ethical and political accountability. It frames methods as situated, socially embedded enactments shaped by historical, cultural, and material contexts. Contributors—spanning early career scholars, practitioners, and activists—critically reflect on the tools, platforms, and approaches they use, highlighting how feminist digital methods can interrogate power, dismantle systemic exclusions, and create transformative pathways for research and activism.

Formulating Research Problems

Creative Approaches for Student Research

Johan Alvehus

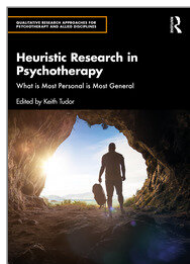

Formulating Research Problems addresses one of the most critical yet often overlooked aspects of research: how to define and frame the problem at the heart of a study. While most research methods texts devote only a few pages to this question, Johan Alvehus offers a dedicated, accessible, and practical guide that helps students move beyond vague topics and into the development of clear, rigorous, and creative research problems. Already widely adopted in its original Swedish edition, it is designed for undergraduate and Master's students writing theses, while also offering valuable guidance for DBA and early PhD students developing their research projects.

Heuristic Research in Psychotherapy

What is Most Personal is Most General

Edited by Keith Tudor Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand.

Series: Qualitative Approaches for Psychotherapy and Allied Disciplines

Heuristic Research in Psychotherapy showcases the power of heuristic enquiry to deepen through discovery, critique, create, and reimagine psychotherapy research. Building on the interdisciplinary foundation of previous volumes in the Qualitative Research Approaches for Psychotherapy and Allied Disciplines series, this book focuses specifically on heuristic methodology—a form of research grounded in personal experience, reflexivity, and embodied insight. It will be essential reading for postgraduate students, practitioner-researchers, and psychotherapy educators seeking alternatives to conventional methods.

Humanizing Qualitative Research

Edited by Hyeyoung Oh Nelson, Marisa Westbrook

Humanizing Qualitative Research foregrounds the lived experiences, identities, and positionalities of qualitative researchers and participants, challenging the disembodied, procedural approaches that dominate many methods texts. Rather than offering a technical manual, the book emphasizes the humanity at the heart of qualitative inquiry and examines how emotions, identities, and ethics shape every research stage. It offers vital perspectives for those committed to conducting research that honours the full humanity of both researchers and participants, making it an indispensable resource for anyone engaged in qualitative inquiry across social science disciplines.

Interpretative Phenomenological Analysis and Emotion

Virginia Eatough

Series: Interpretative phenomenological analysis in action

In the rapidly evolving field of emotion research, this book makes a valuable contribution through its focus on emotional experience from a qualitative psychological perspective. The book is about how to understand such experiences using Interpretative Phenomenological Analysis (IPA), a qualitative research approach underpinned by phenomenological and hermeneutic theory. Its principal aim is to demonstrate how IPA can be used to deepen and enrich thinking around emotional experiences. To this end, a detailed worked example from a new piece of research is included.

Liberatory Research Teams, Labs, and Collectives

Robin Phelps-Ward, Taryn T. C. Brown, Anuoluwapo T. Bankole

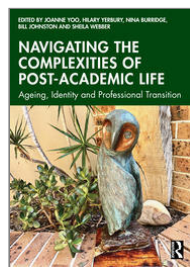

In Liberatory Research Teams, Labs, and Collectives, Phelps-Ward, Brown, and Bankole provide guidance for research team leaders and members aspiring to facilitate research teams from a liberatory, human-centered, equitable perspective. This text is a guide for those who desire a path to research team facilitation counter to how they may have been socialized in their terminal degree training, whether formally or informally, and aligned with values that center social justice and collective thriving. When the people on research teams thrive, so does the research, and ultimately, the broader impact of those in society.

Navigating the Complexities of Post-Academic Life

Ageing, Identity and Professional Transition

Edited by Joanne Yoo, Hilary Yerbury, Nina Burridge, Bill Johnston, Sheila Webber

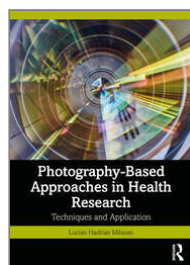

This book examines the complex and multifaceted transition of retirement from academia, addressing fundamental questions of when and how to retire, and what retirement looks like. This will interest academics contemplating retirement, retired academics navigating post-career life, and researchers studying workforce transitions and aging. It holds particular value for students and professionals in social work, social policy, gerontology, and higher education administration, offering both guidance and inspiration for understanding the complexities of post-retirement academic life.

Photography-Based Approaches in Health Research

Techniques and Application

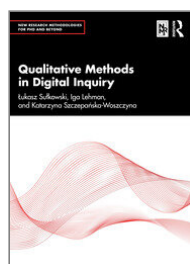

Lucian Hadrian Milasan

This groundbreaking guide introduces health researchers and students to innovative photography-based research methods in healthcare, capitalising on photographic techniques' advantages over traditional approaches. The practical guidance for planning, designing, and conducting photography-based research makes it invaluable for qualitative researchers, visual methodologists, and anyone seeking to integrate visual and textual data in healthcare and wellbeing studies, offering clear frameworks for formulating research questions, collecting and analysing data, and reporting findings.

Łukasz Sułkowski, Robert Seliga, Zdzisława Dacko-Pikiewicz

Digital Quantitative, Qualitative, and Mixed Methodologies in Social Sciences brings together quantitative analysis, qualitative inquiry, and mixed methods for the digital era. This volume shows how to design robust social science research using online surveys, platform data, digital traces, and computational tools, while keeping theory, context, and interpretation in view. Designed for doctoral students, early-career researchers, and applied researchers across sociology, psychology, education, public policy, communication, and management, it supports graduate methods teaching and real research projects in data-rich digital settings.

Research Ethics, Integrity, and Transparency

Łukasz Sułkowski, Sabina Ratajczak, Katarzyna Szczepańska-Woszczyna

Series: New Methodologies of Research for PhD and Beyond

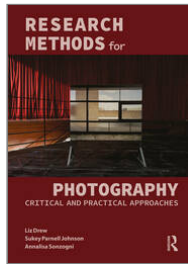

This book guides researchers through ethics, integrity and transparency when using big data, social media and AI, with practical advice on consent, GDPR, bias and open science. This volume helps readers plan, run and publish studies that can stand up to scrutiny. It reframes ethics and transparency as enabling conditions for trustworthy work, not a bureaucratic afterthought, and shows how to translate principles into defensible choices across the full research workflow. The book also supports supervisors, methods instructors, research ethics committees and research offices who need an up-to-date reference for integrity and transparency in the digital age.

Research Methods for Photography

Practical and Critical Approaches

Liz Drew Birkbeck, University of London, UK, Sukey Parnell Johnson, Annalisa Sonzogni

Research Methods for Photography: Critical and Practical Approaches bridges theory and practice for anyone using photography as a research tool, offering accessible guidance for developing rigorous, theoretically informed visual research. Spanning subject matter from architectural ethnography to medical humanities, participatory visual research to eco-critical documentary, this book demonstrates how diverse theoretical frameworks and research methods enrich both creative practice and academic inquiry.

Rethinking Research

Ethics, Decolonization, and Community Empowerment

Edited by Ranjan Datta, Jean Kayira, Myrle Ballard, Jebunnessa Chapola, Yvonne Vizina, Rani Muthukrishnan, Tanvir Chowdhury

This groundbreaking volume demands a fundamental rethinking of how research is conducted with—and accountable to—communities. Moving beyond institutional compliance and procedural checklists, the work calls for an ethics grounded in responsibility, reciprocity, and knowledge sovereignty, challenging researchers to reimagine their relationships with research participants and communities. Essential reading for anyone committed to research as a tool for justice rather than extraction, Rethinking Research offers a radical vision of scholarship that centers community voices and collective well-being.

Self and Assemblage in Autoethnography

Memory, Place, and Solo Walking in Scotland and Australia

Phiona Stanley The University of New South Wales, Australia

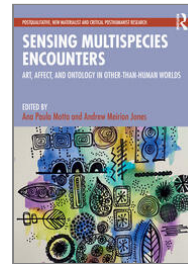

Self and Assemblage in Autoethnography offers a bold methodological provocation within qualitative research methods, advancing current debates in autoethnography by troubling the 'auto' and arguing that the field must confront the sovereign, Enlightenment-derived self that it has inherited. Drawing on assemblage theory, feminist new materialism, and critical tourism geographies, the book proposes deeper entanglements with place, memory, and materiality. Blending narrative, theory, and critique, it explores what it means to walk, remember, and write from within complex social and ecological assemblages.

Sensing Multispecies Encounters

Art, Affect, and Ontology in Other-Than-Human Worlds

Edited by Ana Paula Motta, Andrew Meirion Jones

Series: Postqualitative, New Materialist and Critical Posthumanist Research

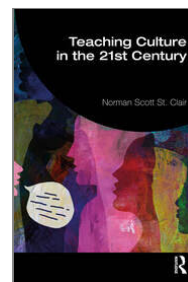

This book explores the 'animal turn' that has reshaped humanities and social science scholarship over recent decades. Chapters describe the nuanced engagements between humans, animals, plants and landscapes, challenging conventional anthropocentric perspectives and paving the way for a deeper understanding of multispecies relations. This volume navigates the contested territory of aesthetics, examines the intersections of art and anthropology, and sheds light on cross-cultural and cross-species interpretations. Through insightful essays and analyses, readers are invited to explore the theoretical and methodological challenges within multispecies worlds.

Teaching Culture in the 21st Century

Norman Scott St. Clair

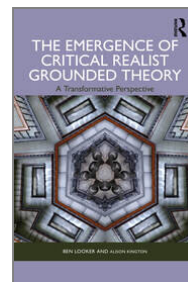

Teaching Culture in the 21st Century presents the Process Model for Teaching and Understanding Culture (PMTUC), a practical framework for developing cultural competence that moves beyond lists of dos and don'ts, dimensions, and holiday activities. Treating culture as a system of beliefs and meanings, the book shows how cultural assumptions shape interpretation, communication, and decision-making. It offers educators a clear, coherent way to make these dynamics visible and discussable in their courses and programs.

The Emergence of Critical Realist Grounded Theory

A Transformative Perspective

Ben Looker, Alison Kington

The comprehensive guide addresses crucial methodological questions including literature review timing and maintaining grounded theory integrity throughout the research process. It redefines "all is data" and provides systematic yet flexible coding approaches that facilitate theory generation. The Emergence of Critical Realist Grounded Theory serves experienced researchers alongside Masters students completing dissertation research and postgraduate research degree students in MPhil, MRes, PhD, and professional doctorate programs, providing both the theoretical foundations and practical guidance for this innovative methodological approach.

The PhD Survival Guide

Strategies for Mental Health and Stress Management (Volume 1)

Wasswa Shafik School of Digital Science, UniBrunei Darussalam

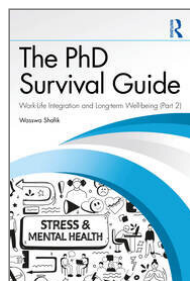

The book is an essential resource for PhD students and early-career researchers striving to navigate the intense pressures of academic life without compromising their mental health or long-term well-being. It offers a structured and compassionate roadmap for managing the psychological, emotional, and practical challenges of doctoral research, providing science-based strategies for stress reduction, emotional resilience, and sustainable work-life balance. This book provides a research-informed context for managing these stressors, integrating evidence-based strategies to optimize mental health, resilience, and sustained intellectual engagement throughout the PhD journey.

The PhD Survival Guide

Work-Life Integration and Long-term Well-being (Volume 2)

Wasswa Shafik School of Digital Science, UniBrunei Darussalam

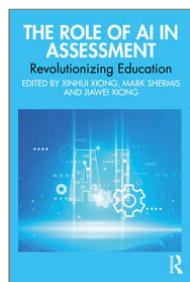

The book is an essential resource for PhD students and early-career researchers striving to navigate the intense pressures of academic life without compromising their mental health or long-term well-being. Doctoral research often entails sustained cognitive demands, high uncertainty, and significant emotional stress, posing challenges to both professional performance and personal well-being. This book provides a systematic, evidence-based framework for achieving work-life integration and promoting long-term psychological resilience across the PhD journey.

The Role of AI in Assessment

Revolutionizing Education

Edited by Xinhui Xiong, Mark D. Shermis, Jiawei Xiong

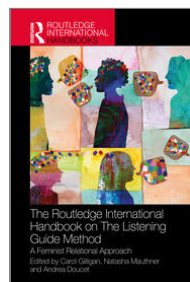

This book examines how artificial intelligence is transforming the evaluation of learning and addresses the urgent need for innovative assessment methodologies. It analyzes both the opportunities and the constraints of AI-driven assessment, responding to the growing demand for approaches that harness AI capabilities rigorously and responsibly. This resource is designed for educators, researchers, psychometricians, administrators, and policymakers seeking to design, evaluate, and govern AI-enabled assessment frameworks. It is also well suited for graduate courses in educational technology, assessment, data science in education, and AI ethics.

The Routledge International Handbook on The Listening Guide Method

A Feminist Relational Approach

Edited by Carol Gilligan, Natasha Mauthner, Andrea Doucet

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

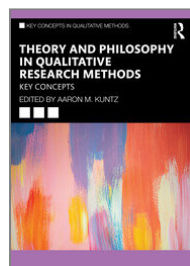

The Routledge International Handbook on The Listening Guide Method is about a qualitative, feminist, and voice-centred method for analyzing interview narratives and other forms of data through attentive listening to multiple voices and stories. This Handbook is the first to bring together a comprehensive collection of chapters dedicated entirely to the Listening Guide, mapping its origins, showcasing its many adaptations, and highlighting insights from long-time practitioners. It offers readers both a deeper understanding of the method and practical insights for using it in their own research.

Theory and Philosophy in Qualitative Research Methods

Key Concepts

Edited by Aaron M. Kuntz

Series: Key Concepts in Qualitative Methods

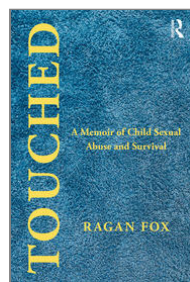

This volume serves as an essential resource for advanced graduate students, early-career faculty, and anyone seeking a deeper, more dynamic understanding of the philosophical and theoretical foundations of qualitative research in education. It emphasizes the idea that all research projects—regardless of discipline or method—are inherently shaped by philosophical and theoretical assumptions, many of which often go unrecognized. Rather than presenting philosophy and theory as static tools to be applied, each chapter invites readers to engage with generative philosophical orientations and concepts.

Touched

A Memoir of Child Sexual Abuse and Survival

Ragan Fox

Series: Writing Lives: Ethnographic and Autoethnographic Narratives

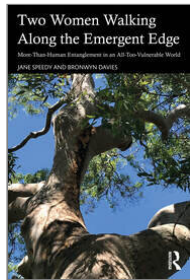

Touched: A Memoir of Child Sexual Abuse and Survival chronicles one man's experience with sexual abuse and his lifelong journey toward healing and self-understanding. Blending memoir and critical theory, Fox invites readers to rethink how we understand harm, memory, childhood, and queerness. This is not simply an account of sexual violation—it's a story about what it means to hold onto your truth when others try to rewrite or silence it. Drawing from personal history and childhood artifacts, this book traces the author's life from early childhood through early adulthood, mapping the long psychological, interpersonal, and cultural reverberations of child sexual abuse.

Two Women Walking Along the Emergent Edge

More-Than-Human Entanglement in an All-Too-Vulnerable World

Jane Speedy, Bronwyn Davies

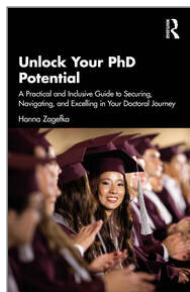

Two Women Walking Along the Emergent Edge is not a methods book in the traditional sense, but methodology as lived praxis, and as artistic, poetic worlding. It weaves thoughts and emotions together, through words and paint, through art, literature, poetry, ecology, history and auto-ethnography. It moves back and forth in-between the two authors, Jane and Bronwyn, as they explore their different scholarly approaches to life itself, as they have lived it, imagined it, thought about it, and occasionally argued about it

Writing Positionality for Qualitative Inquiry

A Meta-Analysis of Written Research

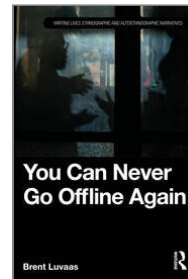

Roehl Sybing Faculty of Global Communications,
Doshisha University

Writing Positionality for Qualitative Inquiry: A Meta-Analysis of Written Research provides fundamental instruction for researchers on expressing positionality and incorporating written positionality statements into their research writing. The book offers a distinctive progression from identifying problems to implementing solutions, serving as a practical manual that emphasizes positionality's importance while guiding researchers through critical reflections on their data collection and analysis practices.

You Can Never Go Offline Again

Brent Luvaas

Series: Writing Lives: Ethnographic and Autoethnographic Narratives

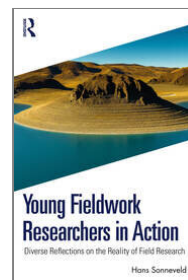

In the era of ubiquitous computing and the Internet of things, is it still possible to be offline? Can we still find a more embedded, autonomous and attentive way of being, away from the constant distraction of our screens? Or is it time to reconcile ourselves to a future, where every thought and action is mediated by an algorithm? You Can Never Go Offline Again is an autoethnographic search for an elsewhere to the Internet. It chronicles the author's weekend digital detoxes, travels to Internet blackout zones, efforts at mindful consumption, and daily struggles to reign in his online activities, concluding that today there is no longer a meaningful distinction between online and off.

Young Fieldwork Researchers in Action

Diverse Reflections on the Reality of Field Research

Hans Sonneveld

This book makes the often-undiscussed aspects of fieldwork accessible to novice researchers by drawing on the authentic experiences of young field researchers from diverse backgrounds. From landing in unfamiliar territories and navigating local politics to data collection challenges and psychological impacts, this practical guide transforms real experiences into actionable insights. Perfect as course material for fieldwork preparation classes and as a discussion tool for communities of practice, this book bridges the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical application, ensuring that new researchers feel supported rather than isolated in their fieldwork journey.

10TH EDITION

Empirical Political Analysis

Quantitative and Qualitative Research Methods

Richard C. Rich, Samuel Brazys

Empirical Political Analysis introduces readers to the foundations of social science research. Organized around the stages of the research process, this textbook prepares readers to conduct both quantitative and qualitative research, from the formation of theory through the design of research projects, to the collection and analysis of data. The book offers a clear and concise presentation of basic concepts and tools that can be applied in a wide range of research settings and highlights ethical conduct in the research process. It will help you both to achieve sound results in your own research and to critically evaluate research presented by others.

Making Effective Graphs in the Social Sciences

Fundamental Principles and Processes

Eric Johann Hiris

Making Effective Graphs in the Social Sciences provides the knowledge and skills for creating graphs that are easy to interpret accurately. In addition to developing this knowledge base, practical skills are developed for creating effective graphs in Microsoft Excel, IBM SPSS Statistics software ("SPSS"), and R. For Microsoft Excel and SPSS this includes illustrated and annotated step by step instructions. Social science researchers and students in data-based social science courses will benefit from the focus on both knowledge and practical skills.

The Use of Drawings in Social Change Research

Centering Participant Insights

Linda Theron , Claudia Mitchell , Diane Levine

This book is a comprehensive, practice-oriented guide to draw-and-write/talk methods, offering researchers a clear pathway for generating, analysing, and ethically working with multimodal visual–narrative data. Designed for researchers, practitioners, and students engaged in qualitative, arts-based, participatory, or child-centred research, the book equips readers with practical tools and conceptual insight. It demonstrates how combining visual expression with participant-led explanation can deepen understanding, enhance trustworthiness, and open pathways for inclusive, reflexive, and innovative research practice.

Writing the Everyday

Body, Place, Time

Jonathan Wyatt

Writing the Everyday: Body, Place, Time concerns the stories we tell of the familiar, the routine, the mundane, paying attention to what does and does not happen, what is and is not present, what does and (apparently) does not matter. It serves as both theoretical exploration and practical invitation, encouraging readers to attend more carefully to the texture of the everyday and to recognize the significance coursing through the everyday. This book offers valuable insights for those interested in narrative inquiry, autoethnography, and in the intersection of embodiment, place, and temporality in the everyday.
