Transitions, Learning, and Material Culture

Ukrainian War Refugees and the Objects They Carried

Chad Hoggan , Tetyana Hoggan-Kloubert

Series: American Association for Adult and Continuing Education

This book examines how Ukrainian refugees experience learning, transition, and transformation as they adapt to life after displacement. Drawing on interviews and photographic data, it follows the journeys of 21 women forced to flee their homes after the 2022 Russian invasion. By focusing on material culture, the book shows us how objects that surround us act as symbolic connections to home, security, loss, and the ongoing process of change. This book will be highly valuable for researchers in Adult and Continuing Education, Transformative Learning, Migration Studies, Trauma-Informed Education, and Comparative Education, as well as professionals and policymakers working with refugees.

Effective Assessment in Schools

Beyond Basics and Best Practices

Edited by Kelvin Tan Nanyang Tech. Uni, Singapore, Tay Hui Yong, Chue Kah Loong Nanyang Tech. Uni, Singapore, Amelia Yeo Nanyang Tech. Uni, Singapore

Series: Assessment in Schools: Principles in Practice

This book provides students, teachers, and researchers with a deeper examination of educational assessment fundamentals and examines assessment beyond (best) practices. The authors go beyond simply updating what is best practice assessment by understanding “best practices” in a way that will hold true for the future, especially in the wake of the drastic disruptions in these past few years. By the end of the book, readers will have nuanced understandings of the complexities of assessment issues that can enable a re-examination of what is fundamental to assessment and learning in schools, and how that prepares our learners for uncertain futures in society.

Feedback Practices at Work

Maximising Student Learning on Placements

Edited by Elizabeth Molloy The University of Melbourne, Australia, David Boud

Bringing together the work of experts from diverse disciplinary backgrounds, this book provides the evidence and guidance required to improve feedback practices for students on placements. The chapters tackle questions such as how feedback can be used in work contexts, what types of feedback can learners engage in and how using feedback in classrooms is different from navigating it in work. It also addresses how learners can make feedback effective for them in the context of work. Lead by experts Elizabeth Molloy and David Boud, this is an essential resource for educators, curriculum designers, educational leaders and students involved in workplace learning.

The Harms of Grading in Higher Education

Comparative Institutional Ethnographies of University Assessment Cultures

Dan Melzer

Series: Routledge Research in Higher Education

It examines the impacts of grading in higher education through comparative institutional ethnographies of two universities with radically different approaches to assessment. Through the voices and perspectives of students and faculty, it explores the many harmful impacts of grading, such as the devastating effects grading has on learning and on student-teacher relationships, the culture of competition that grading creates, and the climate of stress created by high-stakes exams and “weeder” courses and introduces an innovative theoretical framework- “Grade Frame”, a series of misguided but ingrained beliefs about grading that provide the rationale for current assessment practices.

Linguistic Discrimination and Global Englishes

Toward Equity and Justice in English Language Education

Yusop Boonsuk Associate Professor in English Language Education at the Faculty of Education, Prince of Songkla University, Thailand.

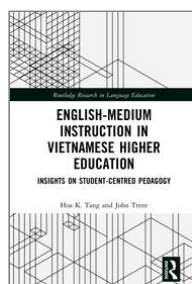

This book interrogates the complex ways in which linguistic hierarchies, native-speakerism, and underlying institutional ideologies govern the landscape of modern pedagogy. Informed by Global Englishes research as well as raciolinguistic and linguistic human rights perspectives, it re-envision linguistic discrimination as an entrenched structural and institutionalised phenomenon rather than isolated prejudice, utilising raciolinguistic lenses to expose native-speakerism as a racialised hierarchy. It is designed for researchers, teacher educators, postgraduate students, and policymakers in applied linguistics, TESOL, and language policy.

English-Medium Instruction in Vietnamese Higher Education

Insights on Student-Centred Pedagogy

Hoa K. Tang Vietnam National University, Vietnam, John Trent The Education University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Research in Language Education

This book offers a theoretical and pedagogical foundation for understanding how English-medium instruction (EMI) is perceived and practised in Vietnam's university classrooms across academic disciplines. It highlights how the 'novelisation' of EMI courses and its pedagogical practices directly responds to the call for a shift from teacher-centred to student-centred pedagogy whereby students' voices and their participation in the teaching process are given primary importance. It is suitable for researchers, postgraduate students, and teacher educators working in applied linguistics, higher education, EMI, and internationalisation of education.

Arabic Language Education Textbooks

Nurturing Social-Emotional Skills and Bridging Cultural Divides through Language Learning

Athar Taleb Haj Yahya Arab Academic Institute at Beit Berl College, Haifaa Sami Majadly Al-Qasemi and David Yellin Colleges of Education

Series: Routledge Research in Language Education

This unique volume fills a critical gap by investigating how Arabic language textbooks – used both as a first language for Arabic-speaking students, and as a foreign language for Hebrew-speaking students – embed and mediate social-emotional skills in students. The book will appeal to scholars, researchers and postgraduate students in the fields of language education, social-emotional learning, and curriculum studies. Policymakers and curriculum designers focusing on language education, SEL integration, and multicultural curricula will find this book useful.

Research on Language Learning and Teaching in Digital Spaces

Edited by Polina Vinogradova, Heather A. Linville

Series: Global Research on Teaching and Learning English

The twelfth volume in the Routledge-TIRF series Global Research on Teaching and Learning English presents research on teaching English as an additional language (EAL) in various global digital spaces. Here, digital spaces refer to any environment where technology and digital tools are used to facilitate and advance language learning. These spaces include web-based applications, social media, and video-editing software, to name just a few. Readers of this volume – language educators and researchers – will benefit from up-to-date research findings on various approaches to language learning and teaching shaped by digital spaces.

Towards Critical Dialogue in the Language Classroom

Theory and Practical Applications

Graham V. Crookes University of Hawai'i - Honolulu, USA, Priscila Leal Lecturer in the College of Education, University of Hawai'i at Manoa, USA.

Towards Critical Dialogue in the Language Classroom offers a timely response, viewing the L2 classroom not only as a site for language acquisition but also as a space for critique, inquiry, and analysis supported by respectful mutual engagement and dialogue in the L2. This book bridges the gap between foundational theory and classroom practice. Documenting incremental steps of classroom practice towards critical dialogue, this book serves as encouragement for L2 educators, researchers, and curriculum designers who seek to honor student voices and prepare L2 learners to thoughtfully reshape the world around them.

Schooling Misogyny

Exposing and Eliminating the Influence of the Manosphere in Education Settings

Stephanie Wescott Monash University, Australia, Steven Roberts Monash University, Australia

This book confronts an escalating crisis unfolding in Australian schools: the influence of manosphere-aggravated misogyny and the everyday gendered violence it produces. Drawing on interviews and testimonies from teachers, it examines the legacy of the harms caused by Andrew Tate, and the ways that other manosphere groups and ideologies are shaping boys' attitudes and behaviour towards women in schools. Accessible yet deeply grounded in data and theoretical analysis, Schooling Misogyny is both a diagnosis and a call to action—an essential resource for anyone committed to addressing and preventing gender-based violence and creating more transformative educational futures.

What Happens After the PD Workshop?

Research-Based Approaches to Professional Development Implementation

Sara L. Wicht

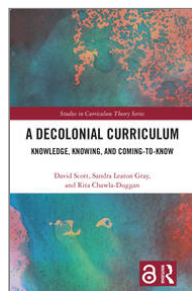

While billions of dollars are invested annually in professional development, research shows that only a small fraction of what educators learn in workshops is implemented in the classroom. This important book shows how to move beyond surface-level PD delivery and instead create the conditions for deeper learning transfer into practice. Rather than offering another professional development program, this book shows you how to make any professional development program successful, so you can turn your school's professional learning into lasting growth.

A Decolonial Curriculum

Knowledge, Knowing, and Coming-to-Know

David Scott University College London, UK, Sandra Leaton Gray University College London, UK, Rita Chawla-Duggan

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

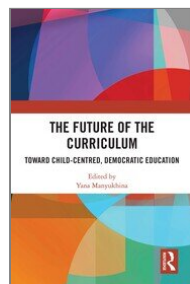

This book advances the claim that a decolonial and transcolonial curriculum must be grounded in a substantive account of what human beings do, have done, and might yet do. It proposes twelve fundamental domains of human life - knowing, communicating, genealogising, positioning, cognising, understanding, enhancing, philosophising, acting in the world, valuing, embodying, and creating - as generative elements for curriculum design. It advances a transcolonial pedagogy oriented towards hybrid, relational, and productive epistemic formations, capable of preparing learners for materially and historically interconnected futures.

The Future of the Curriculum

Toward Child-Centred, Democratic Education

Edited by Yana Manyukhina University College London, UK.

This book presents a compelling vision for curriculum futures that prioritises democratic participation, and authentic learning over narrow accountability measures. As educational systems worldwide grapple with post-pandemic challenges, climate concerns, and artificial intelligence, traditional approaches seem ill-equipped to address these unprecedented challenges. Drawing on research from diverse global contexts these contributions converge on three consistent themes: the centrality of student agency in learning, the importance of holistic development that integrates academic achievement with wellbeing, and the need for democratic and participatory approaches to education.

Being with Babies

Establishing a Sense of Belonging in Early Childhood Settings

Edited by Amanda Norman, Caroline Guard

Relationships are a central feature of early childhood pedagogy, foregrounding practice with babies and young children. This book explores how babies foster a sense of belonging in spaces outside of the family home. Presenting international cross disciplinary perspectives, the book explores all aspects of working with babies emphasising the contested and changing nature of the concept of infancy, ethical principles and baby's rights. With case studies, practitioner reflections and key takeaways in every chapter, this is essential reading for early years students and practitioners being with babies and their families within a variety of professional contexts.

Transforming Early Childhood Education in Resource-Scarce Contexts

Participatory Research for Change

Edited by Lesley Wood North-West University & Founder Director, Community-based Educational Research, Mariette Koen North-West University

Series: Towards an Ethical Praxis in Early Childhood

Transforming Early Childhood Education in Resource Scarce Contexts synthesises insights from various case studies in Southern Africa to propose a practical, context-sensitive approach for improving early childhood education in resource-scarce settings through participatory research that harnesses overlooked human, social, and cultural assets. Although most chapters focus on research conducted in Africa, the knowledge produced is relevant for any context experiencing increasing marginalisation and impoverishment. Researchers, scholars and early childhood educators around the world will find this an essential read.

Understanding Early Childhood

Paradigms, Theory, and Foundations of Inquiry

Annabelle Black Delfin

This comprehensive textbook provides a clear introduction to the major theoretical frameworks and key theories that shape how we understand development, learning, and teaching in young children. By introducing students to broad, foundational perspectives on the young child, this book encourages critical reflection on how different theories position children and inform educational practices. Through clear definitions, visually engaging charts and tables, and chapter prompts for reflection, the book highlights relationships, intersections, and contradictions between these theories, making complex ideas more accessible for students in early childhood education and professional programs.

How do you listen and respond to children in your own practice and within your setting? This text provides a comprehensive and accessible guide to children's participative rights in the context of education and care. It supports early years students and practitioners to understand the implications of the UNCRC participation rights for practice and the tensions that exist when trying to realise children's right to be heard in practice. Supported by case studies and examples, this is an essential text for practitioners and students on Early Childhood Studies and Early Years degree courses, as well as those working in Early Childhood settings or studying as post-graduates.

Beyond Human Capitalist Education

From Capitalocentrism to Carecentrism

Kathleen Lynch University College Dublin

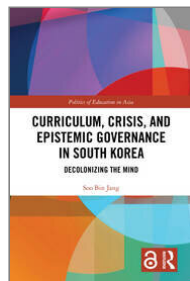

With a preface by Michael Apple, this book challenges the dominant human-capital-centred model of education in the modern age which educates young people to adopt a consumption-led, individualistic approach to work, human relationships and everyday living. It argues for an alternative carecentric educational paradigm founded on principles of social and ecological justice. This book will be of interest to researchers, advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students and policy makers in the fields of educational policy and politics, sociology of education, teacher education, and those specifically interested in human capital theory.

Curriculum, Crisis, and Epistemic Governance in South Korea

Decolonizing the Mind

Soo Bin Jang University of Delaware, USA

Series: Politics of Education in Asia

Offering an illuminating exploration of power dynamics and colonial legacies within South Korean education, this timely book examines how the South Korean state governs through curriculum reform, turning public participation into a moralized and technical project of national development. This book draws on archival documents, policy reports, and extensive interviews with curriculum committee members to reveal how crisis narratives, future-oriented discourse, and OECD expertise shape contemporary educational reform.

2ND EDITION

Decolonizing Educational Research

From Ownership to Answerability

Leigh Patel Boston College, USA

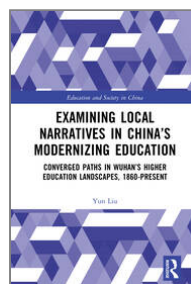

The 10th Anniversary Edition of Decolonizing Educational Research examines how coloniality manifests in contexts of knowledge and meaning making, specifically within educational research. Situated beyond popular deconstructionist theory and anthropocentric perspectives, it investigates the traditions of oppression, racism, and white supremacy that are systemically reseeded and reinforced by learning and social interaction. Through meaningful explorations into the often interrupted narratives of culture, history, place, and identity, a hopeful vision emerges to conceive of how research in secondary and higher education institutions might break free of colonial genealogies.

Gentile and Fascist Education

Educational Totalitarianism and Political-Pedagogical Theology

Fulvio De Giorgi

Series: Critical Global Citizenship Education

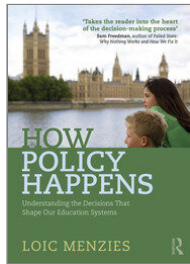

This book examines the educational philosophy of Giovanni Gentile (1875-1944), whose educational theories and cultural policies shaped the ideological foundation of Mussolini's fascist regime. Tracing the structural ambiguities within actualist philosophy and their practical implementation, the book illuminates how Gentile's educational totalitarianism was destined for failure—a defeat that paralleled fascism's broader collapse. With contemporary relevance for understanding neo-actualist movements and emerging authoritarian tendencies, this work offers crucial insights into the relationship between educational theory and political power.

How Policy Happens

Understanding The Decisions That Shape Our Education Systems

Loic Menzies

This book shows how policy really gets made — not in tidy theories or ministerial press lines, but in time-pressured collisions between convictions, evidence and conflicting demands. Combining anecdotes from the corridors of power with academic theory, and extensive interviews with senior policy-makers and former ministers, this book offers an engaging but rigorous account of how ideas become decisions. 'How Policy Happens: Understanding the decisions that shape our education system' is an essential guide for professionals working in the education and policy sectors including teachers, civil servants, politicians and academics.

Imagining Anti-oppressive Education Futures

Agitations for Justice

Edited by Sophie Rudolph University of Melbourne, Australia, Bonita S. Cables RMIT University, Australia, Stephen Chatelier University of Melbourne, Australia, Elisa Di Gregorio University of Melbourne, Australia, Alerik Fricker Deakin University, Australia, Archie Thomas University of Technology Sydney, Australia

Series: Local/Global Issues in Education

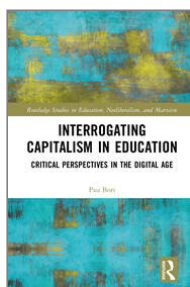

Schools, universities and education more broadly are at the centre of multiple contestations over the past, present and future. In the urgency of climate change, artificial intelligence, threats to the rights of marginalised groups, the rise of war, and ongoing colonial and capitalist dominance, challenges for education abound. An essential read for scholars, undergraduate and postgraduate students, as well as those engaged in education in schools and universities – including teachers, school leaders and parents – who are interested in the role of education in addressing issues of social justice in contemporary societies.

Interrogating Capitalism in Education

Critical Perspectives in the Digital Age

Pau Bori

Series: Routledge Studies in Education, Neoliberalism, and Marxism

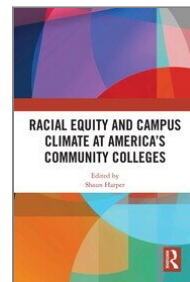

Informed by Marxist scholarship, this book aims to shed light on the complex relationship between capitalism, education, and digitalization. It is structured in two parts, related dialectically. The first part traces the new global educational order from the 1980s to the current highly digitalized moment. The second part draws on interviews with teachers and activists in Catalonia about the current educational orthodoxy, revealing the effect of neoliberal policies within schools, and what alternatives are offered by teacher resistance movements. The book closes with a chapter on the interplay between artificial intelligence, capitalism, and education.

6TH EDITION

Research on Educational Innovations

Arthur K. Ellis Seattle Pacific University, USA, Leanna B. Aker, David Wicks Nanjing University of Information Science and Technology, China

For over 25 years, Research on Educational Innovations has helped readers distinguish between innovative educational programs backed by credible research evidence and the faddish policy trends of the day. This fully revised and expanded 6th Edition offers a clear framework for evaluating educational innovations, for applying them responsibly in real contexts, and for interrogating the research base behind any new program or policy. Readers learn to ask disciplined questions about purpose, evidence quality, implementation conditions, and equity of outcomes, so that adoption decisions are guided by research rather than rhetoric.

11TH EDITION

The American School

From the Puritans to the Trump Era

Joel Spring Queens College and the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, USA

Series: Sociocultural, Political, and Historical Studies in Education

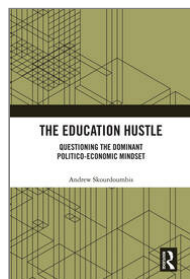

This 11th Edition of The American School follows the history of American education from the seventeenth century to the tumultuous, present political landscape. In particular, Spring frames current developments within the historic debate about how morality and religion should be reflected in school instruction, the role of civic and patriotic instruction, gender equality, and civil rights. A brand new Chapter 16 covers the Trump and Biden era from 2017 to Present, exploring meritocracy in education, book bans, the elimination of diversity, equality and inclusion efforts, and the controversy about gender identity, LGBTQ+ rights, and racial justice.

Bodies of Learning

How Embodiment Science Transforms Education

Guy Claxton, Emily Poel

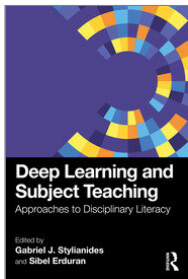

Bodies of Learning is a bold reimagining of education through the lens of embodiment science. Claxton and Poel challenge outdated assumptions that separate mind and body, revealing the interconnectedness of the 'bodymind'. Drawing on cutting-edge research in embodied cognition, this book integrates heart, gut, brain, feeling and action into the learning process, reshaping how we think about intelligence, learning, and teaching. Packed with actionable ideas and reflective exercises, Bodies of Learning is essential reading for educators, as well as anyone passionate about creating a truly holistic and effective education system for the future.

Deep Learning and Subject Teaching

Approaches to Disciplinary Literacy

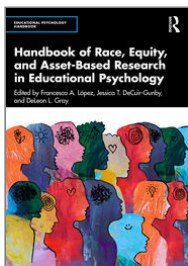

Edited by Gabriel J. Stylianides University of Oxford, UK, Sibel Erduran

Educators, and policymakers around the world are increasingly keen that students of all levels (school and university alike) develop 'deep learning'. But, what counts as deep learning and what does it look like in different disciplines? This book examines the issue of students developing 'deep learning' in different disciplines including mathematics, science, English, geography, history, religious education, and foreign languages. A commentary chapter draws out and highlights unifying cross-disciplinary aspects of deep learning making this a must read for all researchers, teacher educators and policy makers interested in deep learning across the disciplines.

Cultivating Calm in the Classroom

Strategies to Support the Regulation and Wellbeing of Staff and Children

Hollie Rankin , Corrin Watson

We often expect young people to self-regulate, however, they have not always been taught suitable strategies and need support to rehearse these regularly, when they are calm. Equally, a dysregulated adult cannot help a child to calm and must learn how to regulate themselves. This unique, practical and sensitively written book builds a deeper understanding of our nervous systems which will lead to impactful actions in the classroom. It is an essential resource for teachers in all settings looking to find balance and improved wellbeing within their busy lives.

States of Mind

How Adults and Young People Can Work Together to Change Education and Mental Health Systems

Chris Bagley, Bea Herbert

States of Mind critiques and reimagines the traditional paradigms that shape our mental health and school systems, showing that, by embracing a different worldview, we can work with young people in a way that fosters belonging, personal growth and collective action. Education should support us, both individually and collectively, to co-construct ways of being, thinking and acting authentically. This book is essential reading for teachers, educational psychologists, advocacy organisations, thinktanks, and all those wishing to create more hopeful, humane mental health and education systems.

A Lived Citizenship Approach to Unification Education

The Discursive Formation of Naturalized Citizens in a Divided Korea

Daeyoung Goh

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

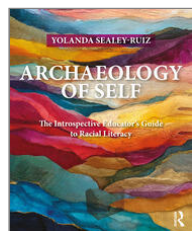

In South Korea, unification education (UE) aims to help students develop values and attitudes for Korean unification, anchored in democratic principles, national community consciousness, and national security awareness. Yet within this framework, the experiences of international immigrants remain largely absent from UE discourses. Drawing on in-depth interviews with naturalized citizens, this book highlights the experiences and thoughts of naturalized citizens to reimagine the concept of citizenship in UE. It is an essential reading for researchers in citizenship education, Korean studies, migration studies, curriculum theory, and comparative education.

Archaeology of Self

The Introspective Educator's Guide to Racial Literacy

Yolanda Sealey-Ruiz

Series: Equity and Social Justice in Education Series

Archaeology of Self: The Introspective Educator's Guide to Racial Literacy is an invitation to dive deep into the heart of teaching and the sacred work of self-awareness. It calls educators—and professionals from all walks of life—to embark on a lifelong journey of racial literacy, healing, and the pursuit of a bias-free existence. Blending personal narrative, poetry, and guided reflection, Archaeology of Self offers both a mirror and a map that takes readers through Dr. Yolanda Sealey-Ruiz's framework for excavating one's racial identity, confronting internalized bias, and teaching from a place of critical love, justice, and truth.

Becoming and Being a Moral-Political Education Teacher

Exploring Chinese Teachers' Experiences, 1978-2018

Huaxin Yang

Series: Routledge Series on Schools and Schooling in Asia

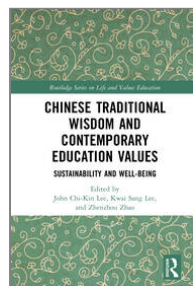

Providing authentic insights into the "China model" of citizenship education, this book draws on lived experiences to explore the professional lives of Chinese moral-political education teachers between 1978 and 2018. Rooted in Confucian philosophical and ethical frameworks shared across Asian countries, the study employs a distinctive theoretical framework of state legitimation to examine how teachers perceive and enact moral-political education in their daily practice. Using qualitative research methods, the chapters amplify the voices of educators who serve as agents of the Chinese state in educative legitimation, revealing rich, nuanced details of their lived experiences.

Adventurous Learning in Higher Education

A Metamodern Framework

Sarah Bowman University of the Arts, London College of Communication, UK, Josh Salter, Carol Stephenson Northumbria University, UK

Adventurous Learning in Higher Education invites readers to rethink what successful higher education should look like for individuals, institutions, and policymakers. Challenging neoliberal systems, the book proposes "pedagogies of adventure," grounded in a metamodern framework, to develop the capabilities and values needed for a sustainable and equitable society. It highlights barriers such as metrification and performance metrics and argues that only radical change can enable higher education to address the complex challenges and injustices of our time.

Blending Andragogy and Pedagogy for Adult Learners

Approaches for Higher Education

Joanne Bowser-Angermann

The book explores blending pedagogy and andragogy for adult learners in higher education. Drawing on research, it shows how autonomy and practical application improve engagement and motivation while strengthening analytical and problem-solving skills. It provides adaptable, instructor-friendly strategies and frameworks to create learner-centred classrooms. Rather than replacing one approach, it advocates balanced integration, leveraging the strengths of both to deliver effective and relevant learning experiences.

Edited by A. J. Demoskoff, Matthew Zantingh

Series: Routledge Research in Religion and Education

This book explores the implications of Charles Taylor's analysis of secularity for the work of humanities education in Christian institutions of higher learning. It argues that by locating themselves and their scholarship within Taylor's open frame, scholars can draw on the resources of their disciplinary expertise within the various branches of the humanities to overcome the polarizing tendencies of modern life to the benefit of all. The contributors to the volume challenge and encourage scholars in the humanities to call their students into dialogue with Taylorian themes and concepts as good neighbors working for the flourishing of the academy and the wider world.

Examining the Consequences of the Dismantlement of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion in Higher Education

Edited by Larry J. Walker, Tryan L. McMickens North Carolina Central University, USA, Robert T. Palmer Howard University, USA, Alonzo M. Flowers III, Amy E. French, Rosa M. Banda

This important volume examines the nuances of diversity, equity, and inclusion in American higher education. Featuring contributions from a nationally recognized group of scholars at the forefront of addressing anti-DEI efforts, this book tackles the central question: "What is DEI in higher education?" The chapters establish a foundation for addressing myths and disinformation on the topic and provide actionable recommendations to help navigate the challenges of fostering access and success for all students. A vital resource for shaping practice and policy during these turbulent times, this book equips higher education professionals with the tools to champion equity and inclusion.

Exploring Communities of Practice in Higher Education

Building an Inclusive University Culture

Edited by Steven Pattinson Northumbria University, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Higher Education

Exploring how wide-ranging debates have supported, extended, repositioned, or conflicted with the original notion of Communities of Practice (CoPs) as sites of situated learning, this book argues that they can be cultivated and managed in higher education settings to create and support an inclusive culture for teaching and research, and career development. Ultimately examining the potential for Communities of Practice to shape the future of academic institutions, this book will appeal to scholars, researchers and postgraduate students in higher education, inclusive education, and educational policy.

From Critical Thinking to Criticality

A Higher Education for a Troubled World

Ronald Barnett Institute of Education, University of London, UK, Martin Davies

Series: World Issues in the Philosophy and Theory of Higher Education

From Critical Thinking to Criticality argues for renewing critical thinking across the university. It examines why critical thinking is under threat and develops the idea of "criticality" as central to the university's role in a complex world. Addressing challenges such as ecological crises, artificial intelligence, political populism, and the post-truth era, the book calls for universities to foster deeper critical engagement among students and scholars.

Helping Skills for Working with College Students

Applying Counseling Theory to Student Affairs Practice

Monica Galloway Burke, Jill Duba Sauerheber, Aaron W. Hughey, Karl Laves

A primary role of student affairs professionals is to help college students dealing with developmental transitions and coping with emotional difficulties. Becoming an effective helping professional requires the complex integration of intrapersonal, interpersonal, and professional awareness, and knowledge. For graduate students preparing to become student affairs practitioners and for higher education professionals seeking practical ways to support students, this fully revised textbook provides the skills necessary to facilitate the helping process and understand how to respond to student concerns and crises, including how to make referrals to appropriate campus or community resources.

Higher Education in a Postdigital World

Learning Everywhere

Maggi Savin-Baden Prof of Higher Education Research at Coventry University, UK, Joan Ball

Learning Everywhere reimagines what counts as a learning space, arguing that traditional, bounded environments are insufficient in a postdigital era. It explores how learning spaces have expanded and how learners navigate both structured and unstructured experiences. Addressing key questions on identity development, social practice, and learning design, the book examines how learning is negotiated, embodied, and assessed across contexts. It invites educators to rethink learning and development for a rapidly evolving world.

Onto-Epistemic Educational Injustice in Higher Education

Who Gets to Know, Who Gets to Be

Michelle Ocriciano University of Queensland, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Higher Education

Drawing from philosophy of education, decolonial thought, social epistemology and Japanese aesthetics, the book develops the concept of onto-epistemic educational injustice through theoretical analysis of how injustice in educational contexts, particularly higher education, operates at both epistemological and ontological levels. Through examination of language practices, academic conventions, and philosophical traditions such as the Japanese concept of ma (間), the book considers how approaches to understanding educational injustice might engage more comprehensively with the intersection between knowing and being.

Reimagining the Academic Presidency

A Leadership Guide Amidst Uncertainty and Upheaval

Terrence MacTaggart, Alvin Schexnider, Deborah Lieberman

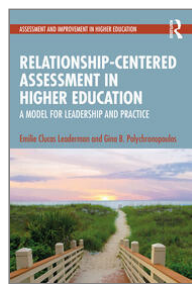

This book presents a fresh, realistic, and thought-provoking perspective on what it means to be a successful president in today's destabilized higher education landscape. This book illustrates how skilled leaders can transform domestic and international adversity into opportunity, regain lost confidence, and redeem themselves in the public eye. It explores seven critical danger zones for presidents while addressing the unique challenges faced by distinct institutional contexts. While an essential resource for current and aspiring academic presidents, these insights will be of interest to trustees, instructors, and scholars of higher education administration.

Relationship-Centered Assessment in Higher Education

A Model for Leadership and Practice

Emilie Clucas Leaderman, Gina B. Polychronopoulos

Series: Assessment and Improvement in Higher Education

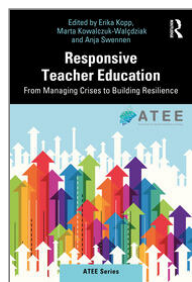

This book offers a practical, human-centered framework for fostering meaningful relationships in higher education assessment. Recognizing that the hardest part of assessment isn't the data but engaging faculty and staff, the authors present the RARE Model—Relate, Affirm, Readiness, and Embolden—to provide leaders with the relationship-building skills essential to their success. The text includes a flexible toolkit of concrete strategies, microskills, and reflective exercises within the RARE Model, enabling readers to transform stakeholder connections into intentional, co-designed partnerships tailored to their unique contexts, roles, and needs.

Responsive Teacher Education

From Managing Crises to Building Resilience

Edited by Erika Kopp Eötvös Loránd University, Hungary, Poland, Marta Kowalczyk-Walędziak University of Białystok, Poland, Anja Swennen Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, Netherlands.

Series: ATEE Series

Teacher education faces unprecedented challenges—from global teacher shortages and shifting policies to the rapid growth of digital learning. Building on discussions from the 2024 ATEE Annual Conference in Budapest, this book explores how the field is responding to change. Across ten chapters, scholars and practitioners from diverse contexts examine alternative pathways into teaching, research-informed teacher education, reflexive practice, and the long-term integration of online learning. Rather than viewing crises only as barriers, the contributors treat them as opportunities to rethink assumptions, disrupt routines, and drive innovation in teacher education.

Strengthening Indonesia's Higher Education System

Landmark Insights for Developing Leadership

Edited by Hamish Coates, Leo Goedegebuure

Series: Asian Higher Education Outlook

This volume brings together applied insights and practical tools shaped through the 2025 Strengthening the Higher Education System in Indonesia (SHESI) leadership program, a major Australia-Indonesia initiative designed to build capabilities and networks required for reform. Rather than presenting international "best practice" as a blueprint, the book shows how leaders can adapt strategies to Indonesia's diverse institutions and regions. The authors distill insights from a suite of leadership projects into compelling insights about how Indonesia is advancing its higher education system, institutions and leadership.

Student Success in Historically Black Spaces

How HBCUs, Black Churches, and the Divine Nine Demonstrate the Benefits of Separatism in Higher Education

Heather E. Burton

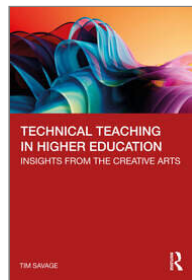

Student Success in Historically Black Spaces argues that higher education institutions and educational community spaces that have historically served Black students are, and continue to be, spaces that foster positive identity reinforcement, a sense of belonging, and dignity for Black students, thereby promoting educational success. This compelling text will be useful for scholars, researchers, and graduate students in Higher Education, Sociology, African American Studies, and Religious Studies who want to understand the impact of philosophical thought on Black community advancement. It will also be of value to faculty and Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion practitioners.

The Community-Centric Path to Rebuilding Trust in Higher Education

Byron P. White

This book reimagines community engagement as an operational driver for sustaining universities in the face of societal and economic headwinds. By elevating engagement as an organizational practice across institutional operations, White shows how universities can thrive by pursuing deeper and sustainable community alignment. This book is informed by interviews with higher-ed leaders, examination of emerging frameworks, and profiles of exemplary institutions. Tailored for higher education leaders, community engagement practitioners, and scholars, this volume makes a compelling case for integrating public impact with organizational transformation.

The Invisible Tax

How Universities Shape Chinese International Students' Wellbeing in the United States

Xinxin Wang

Chinese international students contribute billions to U.S. universities but face an "invisible tax" of institutional neglect. This mixed-method study reveals that campus climate, rather than formal support services, shapes student wellbeing, exposing how universities profit while undervaluing students' cultural and social capital. The book is an essential resource for researchers, academics and graduate students in international education, higher education studies and organizational behavior, particularly those examining policy volatility, institutional support systems and student wellbeing.

An Education in History and Memory

The Civil War and Historical Consciousness

Gabriel A. Reich

This book examines the role of education as a space where young people can confront difficult histories that challenge dominant social narratives, exploring the relationship between historical memory, sensemaking, and civic judgment. It connects philosophical conceptions of historical consciousness to empirical research and contemporary and timely examples. These include the current culture-war battle over K-12 school history curricula, the impact of nationalism on historical consciousness, the complicated nature of U.S. Civil War memory, and the struggle over Confederate monuments in Richmond, Virginia.

Reinvigorating STEM with Project-Based Learning

A Toolbox for Secondary Educators

Sarah DiMaria , Carlee Madis , Sheila Orr

Reinvigorating STEM with Project-Based Learning is a practical guide for secondary school STEM educators and instructional coaches who want to design hands-on learning experiences that cultivate belonging without abandoning the strong teaching practices they already use. Project-Based Learning (PBL) is a widely embraced approach for engaging students in meaningful, real-world STEM learning, but well-intentioned projects too often fall short of their transformative promise. By the end, you will find that PBL is not an add-on but a comprehensive approach to reinvigorate your STEM classroom.

Asian Australian Cultural Politics in Education

Local and Global Perspectives on Asian Racialisation and Anti-Asian Racism

Edited by Aaron Teo University of Southern Queensland, AUS, Tisha Dejmamee University of Technology Sydney, Australia, Ian Ang University of Western Sydney, Australia

Series: Local/Global Issues in Education

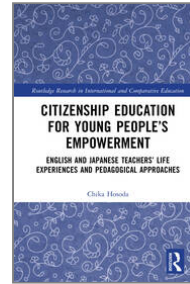

This book delves into the dynamics of contemporary Asian racialisation and anti-Asian racism, exploring how these entangled phenomena shape the experiences of Asian communities across various education contexts. In interrogating the nuances of Asian racialisation within education settings, it considers context-specific opportunities for anti-Asian antiracism in educational institutions, and explores the potential of antiracist public pedagogy. This important resource will inform the research and practice of educators, researchers, policymakers, administrators, and advocates who have an interest in race and education.

Contemporary Critical Theory and Latin America

A South-North Dialogue on the Crises of the Present

Edited by Alexis Gros, Agustín L. Prestifilippo, Santiago M. Roggerone

Series: Critical Global Citizenship Education

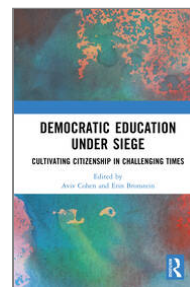

The central intuition guiding this book is that to adequately confront the multiple crises of the present, Critical Theory must engage with Latin American realities and perspectives. The volume has two closely linked objectives: first, to offer an updated and comprehensive overview of the multifaceted relationship between the Frankfurt School and Latin America; and second, to foster a mutually enlightening dialogue between Latin American and Global Northern perspectives in Critical Theory, with a particular focus on contemporary social and political realities.

Investigating the Sustainable Development Education Goal in Bangladesh and India

Experimentality in Education Policy

Rino Wiseman Adhikary Deakin University, Australia

Series: Politics of Education in Asia

The author reveals an intriguing transformation in education policy as the laboratory and experimentation enter and alter the domain of social governance globally. He examines the global framing of the UN Sustainable Development Goal on Education (SDG 4) and its national implementation in two South Asian countries, Bangladesh and India. The book demonstrates how global organisations such as the UNESCO Institute for Statistics, together with national governments, have designed the implementation of SDG 4 in the image of the laboratory. The author traces the preparatory history of these policy laboratories through a combined genealogy of the laboratory and experimentation.

Tagore and Education

Ratna Ghosh

Series: Routledge Key Ideas in Education

This volume offers a detailed interpretation of Rabindranath Tagore's philosophy and how these ideas relate to his pioneering experiments in education. Author Ratna Ghosh considers how Tagore's ideas have expanded her own thoughts on "education," underscoring the price of ignore, the lack of liberty, and the significance of inclusion. The author also considers how Tagore's ideas apply to contemporary education, including multicultural education, democratic education, and social justice. This is a valuable resource for undergraduate and postgraduate-level courses in educational foundations, philosophy of education, multicultural and social justice education, and comparative education.

AI and Reading Instruction

Digital Partners for Deepening Comprehension and Discussion in K-12 Classrooms

Mary Ehrenworth, Philip Seyfried

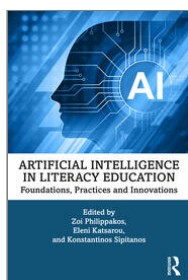

There are innovative, beautiful, personal ways that AI can deepen reading instruction—and most teachers simply need to be introduced to them. When willingness to explore AI combines with the urge to empower readers, remarkable things become possible. Inside, you'll find examples of research-based theoretical stances, practical tips, AI-student discussions, teacher-created chatbots, and co-created learning tools that show what this work looks like in practice along with a companion website. Students need deeper reading comprehension and critical thinking skills. This book demonstrates how thoughtful AI integration increases accessibility and equity for each student reader.

Classic Texts in Contemporary Classrooms

Engaging Today's Students with Timeless Literature

Travis Leech, Sasha L. Jaramillo, Tony Perez

How do we make classics like Animal Farm, The Great Gatsby, and To Kill a Mockingbird feel urgent and relevant to students whose worlds of TikTok, influencers, and teenage angst feel so far removed from these celebrated novels? How do we honor literary heritage while honoring and amplifying contemporary student voices? This book introduces the Big Fundamental—a simple but powerful way to help adolescent readers find meaning in classic literature. Instead of asking them to hunt for symbols they don't care about, this approach helps students discover powerful lenses for reading each text, inviting them to explore the classics through relevant ideas.

2ND EDITION

Developing Writing Teachers

Practical Ways for Teacher-Writers to Transform their Classroom Practice

Terry Locke The University of Waikato, New Zealand, Lucinda McKnight Associate Professor in the Faculty of Arts and Education and Australian Research Council DECRA fellow at Deakin University, Australia.

Newly updated to incorporate the impact of AI, and other societal changes, this 2nd edition of Developing Writing Teachers is a research-informed textbook for pre-service or practicing teachers of writing in school settings, including teachers of English language arts. Practical and accessible while drawing on a range of relevant research and theory, this text is distinguished by its dual focus—on teachers as writers and the teaching of writing. Part I addresses the question: What does it take for a teacher of writing to develop an identity as writer? Part II focuses on pedagogical practice and helping writer-teachers develop a toolkit to take into their classrooms.

Reading Comprehension as Intertextual Practice

Building Meaning Together

David Bloome Professor Emeritus from The Ohio State Univ., USA., Ayanna F. Brown Professor, Erikson Institute, USA., Huili Hong Professor, Vanderbilt University, USA., Maria Beatriz Pinto Doctoral student at the University of Pennsylvania, Graduate School of Education, USA.

Building on recent scholarship in sociolinguistics, discourse analysis, and social practice theories, Reading Comprehension as Intertextual Practice: Building Meaning Together reconceptualizes reading comprehension as intertextual practices. Rather than view reading comprehension as the interaction of a reader and a text, the book outlines reading comprehension as a set of dynamic social practices enacted by people in and across social events in which they together build and assign meaning to one or more written language texts. This is a key resource for scholars, graduate students, and teachers in reading and literacy education.

Rethink and Revise

A Roadmap to Brave Change in K-2 Reading Instruction

Lizzie Hetzer

As schools navigate the changing landscape of reading instruction, many educators are left wondering how to move forward in big ways to better align their practices to what they are learning about the science of reading. In Rethink and Revise, Lizzie Hetzer brings those questions to life, sharing the ways she has revised her own teaching, and the tools and strategies she's learned along the way. Lizzie Hetzer invites us to reflect on goals and get curious about new possibilities, recognizing that change is hard—but feels easier to navigate when we keep our goals for students at the center.

Studies in Teaching and Learning Chinese as a Second Language

Singapore Perspectives from K-12 Classrooms

Edited by Limei Zhang

Series: The Routledge Series on Chinese Language Education

This cutting-edge collection of empirical research focuses on teaching and learning Chinese as a Second Language (CSL) in Singapore and contributes to CSL or Chinese as a Foreign Language (CFL) pedagogy directly by closing the gap between research and practice. Moving from theory to practice, this volume is an essential and rich resource for courses in Teaching Chinese to Speakers of Other Languages (TCSOL) programs, pre-service teaching-training courses and those who are interested in upgrading their second language acquisition knowledge bases and techniques.

Play and Mathematics in Early Childhood Education

Perspectives and Practices across Countries and Cultures

Edited by Oliver Thiel Queen Maud University College, Norway, Elizabeth Carruthers, Chrystalla Papademetri

Series: Towards an Ethical Praxis in Early Childhood

This innovative book examines the dynamic intersection between play and mathematics in early childhood education, challenging traditional educational approaches. Through international perspectives and practices, it demonstrates how mathematical concepts naturally emerge through children's play and how educators can enhance mathematical learning without disrupting the play experience. This essential resource serves early childhood educators, researchers, students, and policy makers committed to enhancing mathematics education quality and effectiveness. It provides practical guidance for promoting more equitable and engaging approaches to mathematical learning in the early years.

Reasoning Together

Collaborative Problem-Solving Routines in Mathematics, Grades 1-3

Vivian Quan

Imagine your students working in groups around the room, collaborating and communicating about mathematics problems worth solving. Imagine that this happens every day. In Reasoning Together, Vivian Quan introduces math routines designed for student collaboration. More than any one-day task, these routines powerfully engage young learners as they hone their math understandings and collaborative skills. Quan knows productive math collaboration doesn't just magically happen on its own. Instead, Reasoning Together illustrates how teachers can teach math content and collaboration side by side.

2ND EDITION

Teaching Mathematics Through Problem-Solving

A Pedagogical Approach from Japan

Akihiko Takahashi DePaul University, USA

Series: Studies in Mathematical Thinking and Learning Series

This new edition offers an in-depth introduction to teaching mathematics through problem-solving, providing lessons and techniques for primary and secondary classrooms. Based on the successful Japanese approaches of Teaching Through Problem-solving (TTP) and Collaborative Lesson Research (CLR), the author demonstrates how educators can make creative and adaptive problem-solving the main way students learn. New to this edition are classroom case studies, examples for additional grade bands, and tips for overcoming challenges when implementing or justifying TTP. Suitable for pre-service and in-service math educators, this book offers an innovative approach to teaching mathematics.

AI Unplugged

The Hype and Hope in Education Futures

Stephen Murgatroyd, J-C Couture

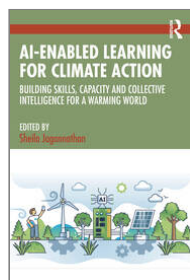

AI Unplugged -The Hype and Hope in Education Futures addresses a comprehensive range of challenging and potential-rich scenarios for the integration of generative artificial intelligence into curriculum, instruction, and assessment in schools. It does so from a critical perspective, seeing teaching and learning as an intensely human activity. AI can help, but not replace the work that skilled, professional teachers do. School professionals in training will come away with a substantive, evidence-based means of discovering and integrating AI in ways that accommodates common uncertainties and greater preparation to manage risks and lead change.

How to Be an Outstanding Form Tutor

A Guide to the Most Important Job in School

Edited by Andy Allman, Sophie-Lauren McPhee

The role of form tutor changes over key stages and has an understated value in a secondary school's pastoral care system: they are likely the first adult in school to greet a child each morning, thereby potentially setting the tone for the day and they are the go-to person for any problems that child encounters. This book is a comprehensive guide on how to do much more than take the register and give out notices. Guidance for first time form tutors, a source of renewed enthusiasm for seasoned professionals and a training manual for pastoral leaders, this one-stop shop for all form tutoring needs is an essential part of every school toolkit.

Mental Health

Practical Support for Effective Teaching and Learning with Pupils aged 11-18

Joanna Feast

Series: PSHE Toolkit

This book presents a practical and compassionate guide to embedding mental health into school life. It explores how mental health education can be integrated across the curriculum, tutor time and pastoral care, offering age- and stage-appropriate strategies that invite self-awareness and emotional literacy. Whether you're a PSHE lead, form tutor or senior leader, this resource empowers you to navigate sensitive topics with confidence, competence, clarity and care. Ultimately, it champions the idea that mental health education is not an add-on, but a vital component of preparing young people for life, emotionally, socially and academically.

Decolonial Entanglements

Praxis, Pedagogy, and Social Theory

Edited by Jairo I. Fúnez-Flores, Ana Carolina Díaz Beltrán, Nathalia E. Jaramillo

Series: Decolonial Entanglements

This book responds to a critical geopolitical moment where decolonial thought, praxis, and pedagogy confront urgent questions of resistance in the face of Palestinian genocide and scholasticide, alongside other forms of state-sanctioned colonial violence against Black, Indigenous, immigrant, and displaced peoples worldwide. By bringing together anticolonial concepts, decolonial methodologies, and abolitionist thought, it challenges colonial systems of knowledge amplifying theoretical frameworks and practical pedagogical approaches that center knowledge rooted in collective struggles and movements.

Developing the Philosophy and Praxis of Education through Fire-craft and Threshold Experiences

Education as Kindling

Jonathan M. Code Royal Agricultural University, UK

Series: Routledge International Studies in the Philosophy of Education

Drawing on research gathered from North America, Scandinavia, Western Europe, South Africa, China and the UK, this book arises out of an immersion in fire-craft and is inspired by kindling as a guiding imagination for a re-evaluation and re-articulation of educational purpose. The book challenges assumptions regarding the purpose of education and prevailing perspectives on why and how students are educated, drawing theoretical considerations out of, and in relation to, an embodied educational activity.

The Soul of Education

Inspiring Spiritually Compassionate Changemakers

James Biddulph, Nitesh Gor

The Soul of Education is a deeply integrative exploration (both spiritual and secular) of what it means to reclaim the moral, spiritual, and relational heart of schooling. Drawing together contemporary educational research, insights from Vedic philosophy, and lived practice, the book invites readers to re-examine the purposes and possibilities of education in a rapidly changing world. This book is ideal for educators, parents, policymakers, and anyone invested in the future of education. It speaks to those seeking alternatives to materialism and performativity, offering tools to address the challenges of growing up in a technologically advanced, socially fragmented world.

Thinking Together in Primary Science

An Oracy-Based Approach to Teaching About the Nature of Science and Scientific Thinking

Neil Phillipson SAPERE registered trainer, UK, Rupert Wegerif

This book offers eight fully resourced lesson plans aimed at ages 9–11 to get teachers and primary-aged children talking together about science. The lessons will help children to form a stronger relationship with science and to understand how scientific thinking can help them in everyday life. The book empowers teachers to teach science with greater depth and meaning while embedding oracy into the curriculum. Building on the evidence-based Thinking Together approach, it uses stories to spark dialogue that deepens children's understanding of science, fosters a closer connection to the subject, and helps protect them from the misinformation so prevalent in today's world.

A Framework for Researching International Schooling and the International Baccalaureate

Towards a Reflexive Practice

Iman Azzi University College London, UK

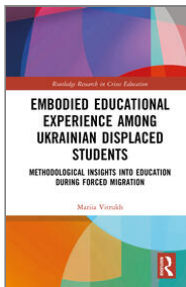

Guiding scholars to think about international education as a field of research as opposed to practice, this book addresses the rapidly evolving, yet increasingly distinct fields of international schooling and the IB, ultimately introducing reflexive practice as an essential framework for research in both areas. Calling for a reassessment of the relationship between the IB and international schools, this book will be invaluable for doctoral students in the field of education research methods, as well as international and comparative education. Scholars and academics involved in reflexivity, along with schools and schooling more broadly will also find the volume of use.

Embodied Educational Experience Among Ukrainian Displaced Students

Methodological Insights into Education During Forced Migration

Mariia Vitrukh

Series: Routledge Research in Crises Education

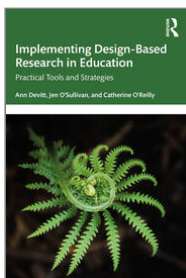

This book engages embodied inquiry and analysis of education in the context of forced migration. Informed by somatic practice, it offers methodological body-based tools to explore students' forced migration (embodied) experiences as those are lived. It utilizes the innovative body-based approach to understanding forced migration in its continuous movement and becoming, never complete, continually under construction, with interwoven lifelines of human and non-human constituents and their entangled relationships, meanwhile offering a unique insight into educational context as the war is ongoing, which brings challenging ethical, theoretical, and methodological conversations.

Personal Knowledge Management as and for Postqualitative Inquiry

Caitlin R. Kight

Series: Qualitative and Visual Methodologies in Educational Research

This book introduces a novel approach to social science data analysis by connecting personal knowledge management (PKM) with postqualitative inquiry (PQI). While both approaches are gaining global interest, scholars often struggle with how to apply them in practice. The book explores how PKM and PQI interact and how this dialogue can support research and communication. Drawing on scholarly literature and real-world case studies, it shows how PKM techniques—traditionally used to organise information—can also support the interpretation and analysis of research data. It is suitable for readers new to PKM or PQI, including students, postdocs, and established researchers.

Not One More Teacher Lost

How We Can Save the Profession

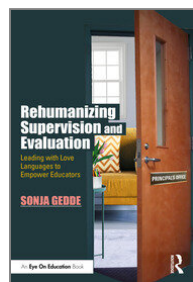

Brad Gaynor

This book is a bold, timely and deeply human call to action for one of Australia's most trusted – and most undervalued – professions. Teachers are not just leaving classrooms; they're leaving a profession they once loved. Brad Gaynor explains why – and what must change. Written for teachers, school leaders and system decision makers alike, this book is a blueprint. Whether you've worked in education for three years or thirty, it speaks to your experience, your fatigue and your hope. Because saving the profession starts by listening to the people who know it best.

Rehumanizing Supervision and Evaluation

Leading with Love Languages to Empower Educators

Sonja M. Gedde

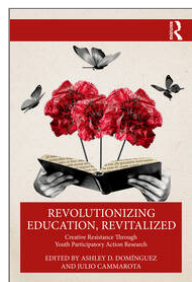

Rehumanizing Supervision and Evaluation recognizes a simple but urgent truth: in a profession built on relationships, educational supervision has too often become transactional, compliance-driven, and disconnected from the human elements of teaching and learning. Not another dull coaching text on how to give feedback or conduct evaluations, this is a love letter and roadmap for restoring the human aspects of school leadership, helping leaders support inspired and effective teaching and learning in their schools.

Revolutionizing Education, Revitalized

Creative Resistance Through Youth Participatory Action Research

Edited by Ashley D. Domínguez University of Arizona, USA, Julio Cammarota University of Arizona, USA

Revolutionizing Education, Revitalized is a critical exploration into the evolution of Youth Participatory Action Research (YPAR) through the lens of creative resistance, emphasizing the role of art-based approaches in inquiry and activism for youth. This volume highlights innovative strategies and creative endeavors to mobilize knowledge for educational change and liberation. Combining conceptual notions with practical guidance, this interdisciplinary exploration of YPAR is important reading for practitioner-scholars and graduate students engaged in PAR or YPAR, as well as graduate students and practitioners in social justice education or community-based programs.

5TH EDITION

The School in the United States

A Documentary History

Edited by James W. Fraser New York University, USA,
Dominic J. Brewer New York University, USA.

This book collects a wide range of essential primary documents of the history of education in the United States, from colonial America to present-day political upheaval. Judiciously assembled by two scholars expert in education history, policy, and economics, this substantively revised new edition incorporates many different sources, from first-person accounts to textbook excerpts and presidential speeches. Comprehensive enough to be read as a main text but selective enough to supplement another, this book makes accessible key readings in the history of American education in a format that encourages students to make their own evaluations as they engage with major historical debates.

Developing Your School's Student Support Teams

A Practical Guide for K-12 Leaders, Student Services Personnel, and Mental Health Staff

Howard Blonsky, Steve Berta, James Wogan

The second edition is a practical manual for current and future practitioners working with schools to establish, facilitate, and sustain coordinated teams in support of students' social, emotional, and behavioral health. Students come to school each day with a range of issues that complicate their learning, engagement, and overall well-being. While school psychologists, counselors, social workers, and nurses are employed in many school districts, their schedules often make it difficult to collaborate effectively in developing and implementing comprehensive intervention plans. This book is filled with strategies designed to address these issues.

Exploring Mental Health in Education

Key Debates and Critical Issues

Edited by Purvi Gandhi, Edward Sellman

Series: The Routledge Education Studies Series

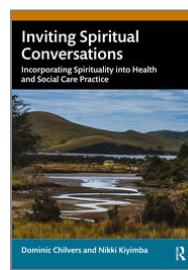

This book offers a critical and thought-provoking exploration of mental health in education at a time when concern, awareness and intervention have never been higher, yet outcomes often remain uncertain. It moves beyond individualised and crisis-led responses to consider mental wellbeing in educational contexts more holistically. Written in an accessible style, this book will be of value to teachers, school leaders, education studies students at undergraduate and postgraduate level, policymakers, and others interested in how education systems can better support the mental health of students and staff.

Inviting Spiritual Conversations

Incorporating Spirituality into Health and Social Care Practice

Dominic Chilvers, Nikki Kiyimba

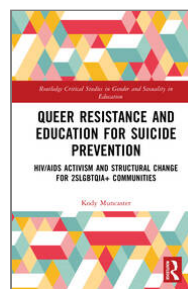

This book takes a fresh look at spirituality within health and social care practice. It begins by suggesting that spirituality is a capacity selected during evolution that has become integral to human flourishing. Practitioners are provided with an innovative framework for considering spirituality for themselves and their clients. Educators will discover a guided curriculum for teaching this important topic and students will learn essential knowledge and skills for their future work. This is an essential guide to navigating this challenging terrain and working respectfully with the spiritual aspect of a client's identity.

Queer Resistance and Education for Suicide Prevention

HIV/AIDS Activism and Structural Change for 2SLGBTQIA+ Communities

Kody Muncaster

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Gender and Sexuality in Education

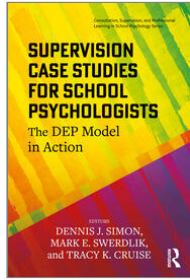

This book takes inspiration from AIDS activist history to argue that current individualized approaches to the queer suicide crisis could be expanded to include structural work. Critiquing initiatives that fail to address traumatic conditions causing queer suicidality, it proposes adapting AIDS activist strategies as educational resistance to the structural forces that make many queer people not want to be alive. Examining both lived realities and educational implications, it makes an urgent case for the importance of addressing six critical areas for queer folks, especially trans youth, in an increasingly conservative climate.

Chicana/o–Latina/o Youth and the Making of Identity

Intra-Ethnic Divisions, Youth Cultural Worlds, and the Anthropology of Getting Schooled

Daniel Diaz Reyes

Series: Routledge Research in Race and Ethnicity in Education

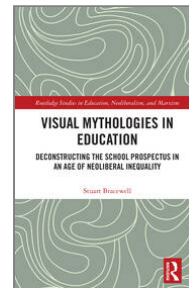

This book presents a rich and immersive ethnographic exploration of the experiences of Chicana/o–Latina/o students and the Chicana/o–Latina/o scholastic youth culture in American middle schools. Employing an intra-ethnic differentiation theoretical framework, it seeks to understand how students create and negotiate a variety of racial, class, ethnic, academic, and “social clique” identities in order to navigate both official and hidden curriculum demands of school. It will appeal to researchers and scholars with interests in multicultural education, ethnography, anthropology, school culture, the sociology of education, identity studies, and diversity and inclusion in education.

Visual Mythologies in Education

Deconstructing the School Prospectus in An Age of Neoliberal Inequality

Stuart Bracewell

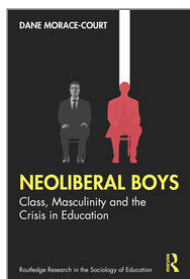

Series: Routledge Studies in Education, Neoliberalism, and Marxism

Visual Mythologies in Education examines how schools reproduce privilege and disadvantage through an analysis of the visual imagery in their promotional materials. The core argument presented in this volume is that the class, race, and gender distinctions embedded in school imagery, such as uniforms, architecture, and curriculum depictions, appeal to parents engaged in the neoliberal practice of school choice. The book's objective is to deconstruct these common visual tropes using a semiotic approach, drawing on theories like Barthes' Mythologies and synthesise Marxist and Postmodern concepts to provide a novel, provocative analysis of inequality in schools.

Critical Multicultural and Environmental Justice Education

Creating Relevant and Sustaining Spaces for Learning in High-Need Contexts

Patricia L. Marshall

This book presents a clear, concise, and engaging discussion of critical multicultural and environmental justice education (CMEJE), elucidating what it is; why it is urgent for teaching professionals who work in urban and rural high-need contexts; and how to implement it. Critical concepts such as geography of opportunity, sustainability, and space/place identity are deftly integrated into discussions that explain how belonging, relevance, and responsiveness are central to academic success. At its heart, it serves as an urgent reminder that educators must acknowledge and respond to the cultural and environmental realities that shape where and how young people live, learn, and grow.

Cultivating Care, Wellbeing, and Reflection in Teacher Education

Stories That Teach

Kinga Varga-Dobai Professor of Language and Literacy in the School of Education at Georgia Gwinnett College, USA.

This book explores how storytelling can be used as a care-oriented, trauma-informed, and socially, culturally, and emotionally sustaining teaching tool in teacher education. It positions storytelling as a transformative literacy practice that integrates care, cognition, identity, and learning, and is grounded in relational ethics and transnational feminist perspectives on voice, identity, and belonging. This is a valuable resource for teacher educators in literacy and language education, as well as preservice teachers seeking to develop reflective, relational, and care-oriented pedagogical practices.

Fostering Activism in Teacher Education

Preparing ELA Teachers Who Engage the World

Mike P. Cook

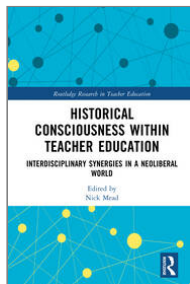

Drawing on interview and observation data of five ELA teacher educators, this book highlights the ways teacher educators make activism part of their preparation of future teachers and provides snapshots of four themes—centering students, framing courses, explicit assignments, and self-care and navigating political contexts. This is an excellent resource for teacher educators who want to incorporate activism into their work. It is particularly beneficial for ELA teacher educators in both pre-service teacher and graduate courses, as well as teacher education courses that focus on critical literacy, critical pedagogy, civic-engagement, equity, and diversity.

Historical Consciousness within Teacher Education

Interdisciplinary Synergies in a Neoliberal World

Edited by Nick Mead Oxford Brookes University, UK
Series: Routledge Research in Teacher Education

This collection examines the emerging interdisciplinary possibilities at the intersection of history of education, teacher education, and professional practice, responding to the urgent need to confront the influence of neoliberalism on teacher training across Europe and beyond. Building on collaborative work undertaken in Italy, Spain, Turkey and England, it argues that historical consciousness can challenge hegemonic narratives within contemporary teacher education policy and practice. This book is written for scholars of education, history of education specialists, university and school-based teacher educators, policymakers, and postgraduate or trainee teachers.

How Teacher Educators Do Policy

Intellectual Work, Values, and Principles

Edited by Clare Brooks Institute of Education, University of London, UK, Joanna McIntyre University of Nottingham, UK, Katharine Burn University of Oxford, UK, Lindsay Hetherington, Trevor Mutton University of Oxford, UK

How Teacher Educators Do Policy examines how university-based teacher educators in England responded to major reforms to Initial Teacher Education following the 2021–24 ITT Market Review. Drawing on interviews with programme leaders in research-intensive universities, it explores changes to curriculum, partnerships, mentoring, and professional learning. Using Lee Shulman's concept of signature pedagogies, the book shows how leaders balanced policy demands with core educational values, with international reflections from Maria Teresa Tatto, Lee Ruzsnyak, and Sinikka Neuhaus.

The Heart and Craft of Classroom Management

Building Belonging to Transform Behavior

Joseph S. McQueen

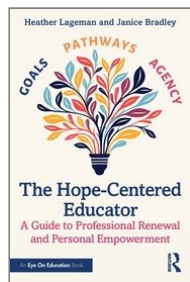

Classroom management is often framed as control—rules, consequences, and compliance. The Heart and Craft of Classroom Management offers a different, more sustainable approach: one rooted in belonging, nervous-system awareness, and intentional structure. Drawing on decades of experience as a teacher, behavior specialist, and school leader, Joseph S. McQueen reframes behavior as communication and positions relationships as the foundation of effective classroom practice. The Heart and Craft of Classroom Management provides a compassionate, realistic framework for leading classrooms with clarity, dignity, and calm—especially in today's increasingly complex educational landscape.

College Student Development Theory in Action

A Guiding Framework for Higher Education Practice

Kristen A. Renn Michigan State University, USA, Chayla Haynes Texas A&M University, USA, Alex C. Lange Colorado State University, USA, Cristóbal Salinas Jr. Florida Atlantic University, USA, Rosemary J. Perez University of Michigan, USA

This is a timely and accessible source for teaching and learning college student development theory. Designed for Student Affairs and Higher Education graduate courses, this textbook takes an empirically-based, theory-in-practice approach. It presents foundational concepts of how student development occurs and then brings readers through a series of cases to introduce theories of social identity and cognitive, intercultural, and holistic development. Taking a critical approach and integrating sociopolitical contexts with reflective practice, this book emphasizes the value of using key concepts to adapt to changing contexts within higher education and student affairs practice.

Equity by Design in STEM Higher Education

Communities of Practice, Action Plans, and Institutional Change

Edited by Angelina E. Castagno Northern Arizona University, Anita Antoninka, Catherine R. Propper

Series: Routledge Research in STEM Education

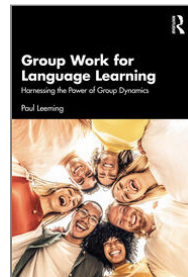

This edited collection presents stories of how university STEM faculty can engage in systemic change towards greater equity. Sharing both successes and struggles, the collection highlights the impact of collective learning that a well-designed community of practice can have on both individual faculty members and the wider research community. In each chapter, faculty reflect on their goals, implementation processes, measurable impacts, and the barriers and strategies they encountered along the way. A unique, and forward-thinking collection, this book will serve as both model and practical guide for educators seeking to advance similar equity work at their own institutions.

Group Work for Language Learning

Harnessing the Power of Group Dynamics

Paul Leeming Kindai University, Japan

Group work is used extensively in general education, and particularly in the language classroom where interaction is an essential part of learning another language. This text guides language teachers how to implement group work in the classroom as well as providing a summary of key research into the theory behind the psychology of group dynamics and language learning. Given the prevalence of groupwork in the language classroom, this practical guide for language teachers wanting to implement groupwork in their own classroom is a must-read.

Reciprocity as a Principle of Educational Discourse

Selected Writings of Martin Nystrand

Martin Nystrand

Series: Routledge Research in Education

This book collates Martin Nystrand's research across his forty-year career, bringing together his studies on the dialogic organization of both writing and classroom discourse. Drawing from the conceptual framework of the Bakhtin Circle and other related works, this collection elucidates the role of reciprocity in the management and transformation of conversant interaction in both writer-reader interaction and in classroom discourse. A foundational work in dialogic pedagogy, this volume is essential reading for teachers and researchers interested in dialogic pedagogy, discourse studies, education research, and historiography.

AI and Security in China's Higher Education

Challenges and Responses

Xiaoshu Xu

Series: China Perspectives

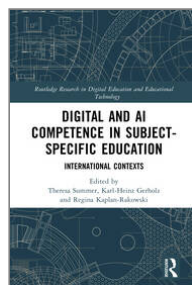

The book explores how universities can harness the power of artificial intelligence (AI) while safeguarding privacy, equity, and academic values. Drawing on established frameworks like DigCompEdu, TRI, and UTAUT, it offers practical, step-by-step strategies. These strategies help build essential competencies in pedagogy, ethics, and cybersecurity. The book offers a clear, non-technical toolkit to help educators and undergraduates assess their AI and information security competence. It will appeal to librarians, booksellers, faculty developers, and administrators seeking practical, future-ready approaches for AI-enabled, security-conscious universities.
