Bouncer Culture and the Nighttime Economy

The Last Cursed Half Hour

Pietro Saitta

Series: Routledge Studies in Crime and Society

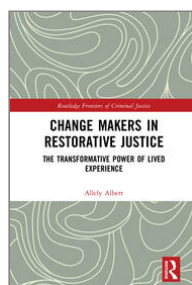

This book offers a sharp ethnographic immersion into the high-stakes world of nightclub security in Southern Italy. Following months of firsthand fieldwork, it uncovers how authority is truly negotiated beyond the velvet rope. This book will be of interest to criminologists studying informal social control, urban sociologists, anthropologists, security professionals, and policy planners.

Change Makers in Restorative Justice

The Transformative Power of Lived Experience

Allely Albert

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

This book examines non-state justice approaches to community safety and conflict transformation, focusing on a unique model of community-based restorative justice which emerged as part of the Northern Ireland peace process. Change Makers in Restorative Justice will be of interest to academics working in criminology and peacebuilding contexts, and will offer particular insight to those in the restorative justice field. Its findings will additionally be relevant to practitioners and policymakers due to its practical contribution towards improving justice and re-entry praxis through lived experience.

Contemporary Topics in Criminology

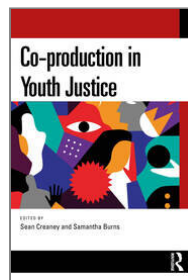

Edited by Laura Huey, Lorna Ferguson

This essential book brings together leading Criminology researchers from across the globe to explore the critical role of the 'evidence base' in crime and criminal justice. It began with a simple question: if experts were asked to write about the evidence base in their area of expertise, what would they say? Casting the net widely to ensure a diverse range of topics, contributors were given a straightforward brief: 5000 words on any aspect of the evidence base within their field. The result is a lively and accessible collection of papers offering critical assessments and insightful commentary on the state of research evidence.

Development of Criminal Policy in Central and Eastern European Countries

Similarities and Differences in Penal Policy

Edited by Miklós Lévay Eötvös Loránd University, Klára Kerecsi National University of Public Service, Zsófia Ivanics Eötvös Loránd University

Series: Directions and Developments in Criminal Justice and Law

This volume examines the evolution of criminal policy, focusing on penal policy in Central and Eastern European countries from the collapse of the Berlin Wall in 1989 to the present, analysing the policy decisions, regulations, and specific conditions that have influenced these developments. Employing a comparative methodology and incorporating two cross-cutting chapters on penal policy, sentencing practices, and the rise of penal populism, The Development of Criminal Policy in Central and Eastern European Countries is intended for students and scholars of criminology, criminal justice, criminal law, and political science.

Conceptualising the Victim

Child Criminal Exploitation and Processes of Victim Identification

Hannah Marshall

Series: Victims, Culture and Society

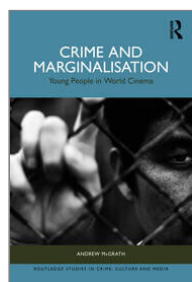

Drawing on empirical research that examines how processes of victim identification unfold in relation to cases of child criminal exploitation in the UK, the book explores four different qualities of the concept 'victim'. It provides ways of thinking about the concept of 'victim' as: incorporeal; binary; relational, and precarious. It considers possibilities of moving beyond the category 'victim' and finding alternative approaches of acknowledging and responding to harm in meaningful ways. This book will therefore be of interest to students and scholars of criminology and victimology. It will also be useful resource for professionals in policing, youth justice and victim support.

Cybercriminals (Yahoo Boys) and Society

Hustle Kingdoms, Occult Economies, and the Colonial Politics of Digital Fraud

Suleman Lazarus

This book offers a comprehensive sociological account of cyber-enabled fraud in Africa south of the Sahara, centred on Nigeria. Drawing on over a decade of ethnographic research, it examines online fraud not as isolated wrongdoing but as a patterned social response to postcolonial inequality, blocked mobility, and institutional failure. This book will be of interest to criminologists and sociologists studying cybercrime, financial crime, and informal economies. It will also be useful reading for scholars of cultural studies, social psychology, and African studies. It will also be valuable for policymakers and practitioners working on cybercrime prevention.

Enabling Change in the Investigation of Rape and Serious Sexual Offending

Learning, Development and Wellbeing

Edited by Emma Williams

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

Operation Soteria examined how police investigate rape and serious sexual offences. This book focuses on a critical but often overlooked aspect of that project: the role of learning, development, and officer wellbeing in these challenging investigations. The book provides practical, evidence-based tools for demand modelling, strategic change planning, and assessing officer learning—all grounded on rigorous theoretical foundations. This collection speaks to police professionals, criminal justice practitioners, policymakers, and anyone seeking to understand why meaningful change in this critical area of policing remains so elusive—and what we can actually do about it.

Ending Intimate Partner Abuse

Blending Psychological and Sociological Solutions

Leanne Nunn

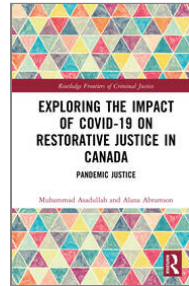

Despite sustained global attention, policy development, and research investment, the prevalence of intimate partner abuse (IPA) worldwide has not diminished. Ending Intimate Partner Abuse: Blending Psychological and Sociological Solutions advances the field of IPA prevention by presenting a theoretically grounded and empirically derived model of the earliest warning signs. It is valuable to researchers, practitioners, and policymakers in the fields of psychology, sociology, and criminology, particularly those working in gender-based violence.

Fathers in Prison

New Insights in Masculinities, Identity, and Carceral Space

Tess Bartlett

Series: Routledge Studies in Crime, Justice and the Family

This book offers new theoretical perspectives on masculinities, identity (and the self), and carceral space by examining the experiences of imprisonment and release of fathers within Victoria, Australia. It reimagines the prison and post-release space and what these could look like if the policy approach was gender-responsive and focused on the whole family. This book will be of interest to criminologists, penologists, and sociologists studying gender and imprisonment. It will also be useful for social workers, prison practitioners, and policymakers interested in family-focused rehabilitation measures.

How Crime Governance Defines the Urban Experience

The Maze of Security

Fernando León Tamayo Arboleda

Series: Routledge Studies in Crime, Security and Justice

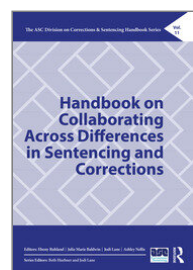

The book explores the complex links between war and order, presenting a well-founded and fresh view on how crime is governed in modern societies. It challenges existing analyses of the relationship between space and social control, offering an original theoretical perspective and a new analytical tool that paves the way for several lines of research examining how dynamic spaces of social control are designed across different spatiotemporal contexts. Both theoretically rich and accessibly written, this book will appeal to academics and general readers alike, especially those interested in understanding contemporary urban life.

Humanitarian Crime

Disasters, Dispossession, and Resistance in Port-au-Prince

Angela Sherwood

Series: Crimes of the Powerful

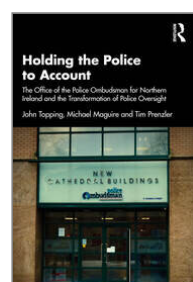

This is the first book to offer a compelling account of the structural forces embedded in humanitarian institutions, and the practices and forms of legitimation through which the violent effects of humanitarian intervention are typically produced and obscured. By situating humanitarianism within wider relations of sovereignty, accumulation, and control, the book opens new pathways for studying humanitarian power and its role within contemporary global violences. It is essential reading for all those engaged in work on crimes of the powerful, disaster recovery, state and corporate crime, and Caribbean Studies.

Inside the Bureaucracy of Immigration Detention

Disgust, Contempt, and Humiliation

Alethia Fernández de la Reguera

Series: Routledge Studies in Criminal Justice, Borders and Citizenship

This book examines the implementation of immigration policy in Mexico through an ethnographic and relational lens, focusing on the subjectivities of state officials. The analysis foregrounds the subjective dimensions of bureaucratic work—emotions, fears, desires, and forms of reasoning—and their direct impact on migrants' experiences of detention and deprivation of liberty. This book will be a valuable resource for criminologists, sociologists, and anthropologists engaged with questions of immigration and state power. It will also be useful to policymakers and practitioners working with migration governance and border control.

Kleptocratic Reputation Laundering and State Crime

Dilmira Matyakubova

Series: Crimes of the Powerful

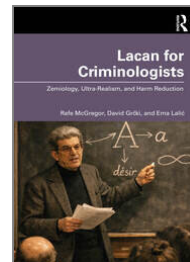

Drawing upon extensive empirical evidence, participant observations, and interviews, Kleptocratic Reputation Laundering and State Crime inspects state violence, corruption and authoritarian repression, and how competing narratives of change reflect these topics. Offering a critical exploration of the elite enablers of reputation laundering, using the Uzbek state as a primary example, this book interrogates their role and motivations in engaging in the coordinated campaigns to cultivate an original conceptual framework to elucidate such forms of complicity within influential institutions and elite milieus.

Lacan for Criminologists

Zemiology, Ultra-Realism, and Harm Reduction

Rafe McGregor, David Grčki University of Rijeka, Croatia
Ema Lalić University of Rijeka

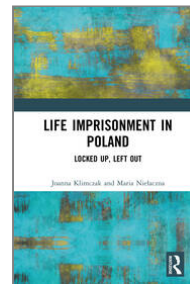

This book provides a clear and concise introduction to the work of French cultural icon Jacques Lacan for criminologists, sociologists, and social theorists. It engages directly with Lacan's Écrits and seminars to demonstrate their value to a critical criminology that is theory-led, evidence-based, and zemologically-focused. This book will be fascinating reading for cultural, critical, and ultra-realist criminologists, as well as students and scholars of sociology, cultural studies, and social theory.

Palestine in a Time of Genocide

The Global Responsibility for Gaza

Edited by Pietro Stefanini

Series: Crimes of the Powerful

This volume offers new directions in thinking about the 2023-2025 genocide in Gaza. Drawing on a range of perspectives—such as international law, anthropology, politics and international relations, Indigenous and settler colonial studies—the chapters reflect a collective affirmation of the continued utility and importance of the concept of genocide for making sense of Israel's destruction of Gaza. This book will be a useful resource to students and scholars of genocide studies, international law and relations, Middle East studies, conflict studies, and all those who insist on viewing Gaza not solely as a site of devastation, but as a crucible of global moral and political reckoning.

Pauline Tarnowsky's Les Femmes Homicides

Two Part Set

Edited by Lin Huff-Corzine , Kayla Toohy

Series: Routledge Studies in Crime and Society

Part I of the text outlines Tarnowsky's methodology and introduces some of the first motivational categories for women's homicidal behavior. Part II expands on these categories and further explores the relative importance of causal factors related to biology and social conditions. This historical work remains an essential reading for scholars and students of criminology, homicide studies, social history, gender studies, theory development, the history of ideas, law and criminology, and the social study of science.

Policing Eurovision

A Multi-Agency Approach

Michael Smith , Rebecca Phythian

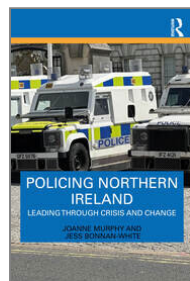

Using field observations, policy documents, interviews and surveys, this book offers a rare behind-the-scenes account of successful multi-agency working at a major event – specifically, how Liverpool planned and delivered the Eurovision Song Contest 2023. By opening a normally closed world, the book presents a unique multi-perspective view of how Eurovision was 'policed', the success behind the 'Liverpool approach', and what its story reveals about effective partnership working today. This book will therefore be of interest to practitioners, policymakers and academics and students across policing, public safety, event management and governance.

Policing Northern Ireland

Leading Through Crisis and Change

Joanne Murphy , Jess Bonnan-White

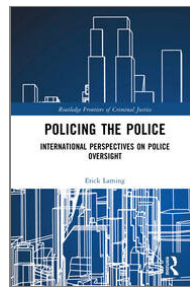

This book explores 25 years of policing in Northern Ireland, in the context of conflict and change. In doing so, it provides a comprehensive narrative of the transition from the Royal Ulster Constabulary to the Police Service of Northern Ireland. It weaves first-hand accounts with scholarly analysis, providing new insights into the challenges, processes and methods of policing change. This is a 'must read' for all those engaged in policing, the development of criminal justice in transitional settings, and Northern Irish history.

Policing the Police

International Perspectives on Police Oversight

Erick Laming

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

This book examines the various systems, processes, and agencies responsible for overseeing police conduct across Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, and to a lesser extent, the United States, and Republic of Ireland. It argues that while police oversight systems have improved in their capacities to hold police accountable internationally, they continue to be plagued by internal and external issues that inhibit their full potential in serving as high-standard gatekeepers for police conduct. This book will therefore be of interest to students and scholars of policing studies, as well as professionals and policymakers engaged with policing.

The Architecture of Violence

Towards a Theory of Infrastructural Harm

Simon Hallsworth University of Suffolk, UK

Series: New Directions in Critical Criminology

This book offers a new way of understanding harm in modern society. Rather than treating violence as the result of breakdown or failure, it argues that many forms of harm are built into the very systems designed to organise and protect social life. Laws, institutions, technologies, and policies can produce damage not by malfunctioning but by working exactly as intended. Written as an exercise in criminological noir, wide-ranging in scope, yet clear in argument, The Architecture of Violence speaks to readers interested in power, society, and the hidden structures that shape everyday life.

Vietnamese Organized Crime in its International Dimension

The Collected Case Studies

Edited by Hai Thanh Luong , Filip Kraus , Miroslav Nožina , Daniel Silverstone

Series: Routledge Studies in Crime and Justice in Asia and the Global South

A comprehensive global investigation into Vietnamese organised crime overseas (VOCO) elucidates the mechanisms by which migration, inequality, and trust networks facilitate illicit economies, ranging from cannabis cultivation to human trafficking and wildlife smuggling. By integrating theoretical insights with practical examples, this work offers a unique perspective on crime as a global phenomenon intertwined with migration and social vulnerability. Its relevance, timeliness, and accessibility make it valuable for a diverse audience, including academics, students, journalists, practitioners, and individuals concerned with social justice and international security.

International Investment Arbitration and Inappropriately Obtained Evidence

Aleksander Godhe

This book provides a comprehensive analysis of inappropriately obtained evidence in international investment arbitration, an increasingly pressing issue given technological advances and evolving notions of impropriety. Despite the broad procedural discretion of investment tribunals, clear guidance on approaching inappropriately obtained evidence remains lacking, risking inconsistency and unfairness. To address this gap, the book proposes a structured evidentiary test, drawing on doctrinal, empirical and comparative analyses. It will be of interest to practitioners and researchers in the field of international investment arbitration and beyond.

Sovereign Debt Restructuring and Contract Law

A Good Faith and Relational Contract Approach

Francis Chukwu

Series: Routledge Research in Finance and Banking Law

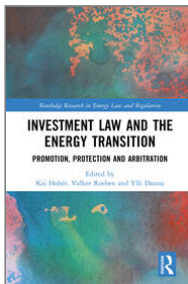

This book tackles the challenge of holdout creditor disruption of sovereign debt restructuring, where creditors reject collective agreements to pursue full loan recovery in domestic courts. Critically examining the contemporary statutory and contractual approaches to sovereign debt restructuring, the book presents their usefulness and limitations, including the potential major impact of the doctrine of merger in rem judicatum. It will be of interest to practitioners, researchers, and policy makers in contract law, finance law, relational contract theory, good faith, and sovereign debt.

Tax Avoidance in Case Law

European Perspectives

Edited by Dominik Jan Gajewski

Series: Routledge Research in Tax Law

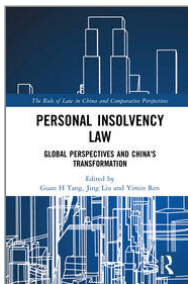

This book elaborates on the issue of tax avoidance in the light of domestic case-law of the European Union Member States and the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU). Analysing the most common tax avoidance instruments in European case-law, the volume discusses transfer pricing, double taxation treaties, and the anti-avoidance clause. Using eight countries as case studies, the book compares their different approaches to tax avoidance from the perspective of both the tax policy of the state and the strategies used by international holding companies. It will be of interest to researchers in the field of tax law, tax avoidance law, financial law and European law.

Noncompete Agreements in Business Law

Protective Strategies, Employee Restrictions, and Confidential Information

Kurt M. Saunders , Michelle Evans

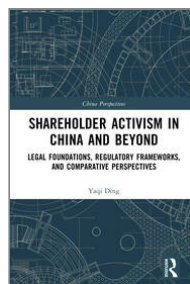

This book explores the legal landscape of noncompetition agreements, both past and present, as a means of safeguarding trade secrets in business law. Noncompete agreements have long been one of the measures that businesses have used to protect trade secrets and confidential information. However, recent state and federal attempts to ban or limit noncompetes are resetting the competitive environment, prompting businesses to reassess their reliance on noncompetes and begin exploring alternatives. The book provides readers with an international and comparative perspective of these issues. It will be of interest to researchers of business law, trade law and employment law.

Commercial Contract Law

Exemption, Frustration and Force Majeure

Ndubuisi Augustine NwaforSeries: Routledge Research in International Commercial Law*

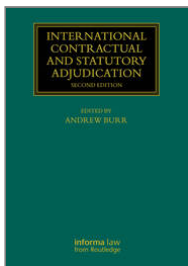

This book offers a critical and comparative analysis of exemption, frustration, and force majeure within the framework of three pivotal legal instruments: the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (CISG), the UNIDROIT Principles of International Commercial Contracts (UPICC) and English contract law. Rooted in principles of fairness and legal predictability, the book argues that the CISG, UPICC and English law provide mechanisms through which contractual obligations may be excused when unforeseen events render performance impossible. The book will be of interest to researchers in the field of commercial law, contract law and business law.

Artificial Intelligence and Selling Citizenship

Due Diligence and Citizen by Investment Programmes

Jeiel D. Joseph

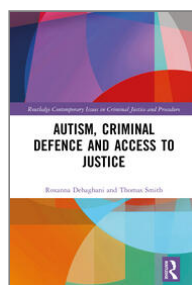

Series: The Law of Financial Crime

This book offers a critical examination of the due diligence frameworks employed by select Commonwealth Island Citizenship by Investment (CBI) programs. It delves into the consequences of the weaknesses in the frameworks, and argues that the failure to integrate AI tools into due diligence processes represents a missed opportunity to address the inherent vulnerabilities of the CBI industry. The book will be of interest to academics, researchers and policy makers working in the areas of Financial Crime, International Law, Global Security, AI and Law, Immigration and Citizenship Law.

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion in Criminal Justice Education

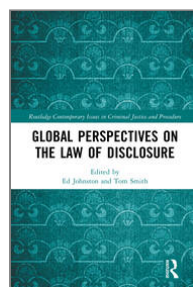

Edited by Catherine D. Marcum

This comprehensive collection addresses the urgent need for inclusive pedagogical approaches in criminal justice education, presenting nine evidence-based articles that examine diversity, equity, and inclusion across undergraduate and graduate programmes. Contributors explore innovative teaching strategies, from implementing trigger warnings and validating transgender identities to integrating formerly incarcerated students and utilising extended reality technologies in policing courses. The volume demonstrates how educators can transform traditional criminal justice curricula through culturally responsive pedagogy, diversified datasets, and global perspectives.

Illicit Enrichment and Unexplained Wealth in Africa

Colonial Legacies and Anti-Corruption Enforcement in Nigeria and Kenya

Folashade Adeyemo

Series: The Law of Financial Crime

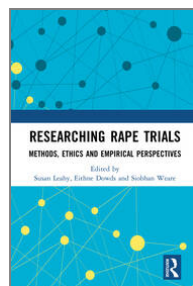

This book offers a governance-centred analysis of unexplained wealth regulation in post-colonial states. Drawing on comparative socio-legal analysis of Nigeria and Kenya, alongside high-capacity jurisdictions such as the United Kingdom, Australia, and Ireland, it demonstrates that the effectiveness of asset recovery mechanisms depends on judicial credibility, institutional coordination, political insulation, and the integrity of evidentiary processes. It will be a valuable guide for students, academics, policymakers, international banking law practitioners and those interested in economic and financial crime from a developing and emerging economies perspective.

Study Abroad and Cultural Exchange in Criminal Justice Education

This book presents nine compelling articles written by academics reflecting on their experiences with study abroad and international education. Together, the contributions offer a rich and nuanced exploration of how global learning transforms both teaching and scholarship in criminal justice education. The chapters address topics such as program design, ethical engagement, cultural adaptation, and the long-term impact of study abroad on academic and personal development. Drawing from a variety of international contexts, the authors illustrate how immersion in global environments fosters innovation in pedagogy, deepens empathy, and strengthens connections across borders.

Vulnerability and Sexual Assault Law

The Inadequacy of the Autonomy-based Approach

Sorcha McCormack

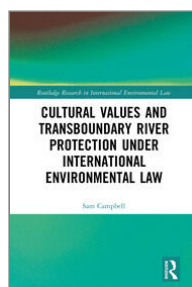

Series: Routledge Contemporary Issues in Criminal Justice and Procedure

This book critiques the autonomy based theoretical foundations of the legal response to sexual offences. To do so it examines the legal treatment of incapacitated rape victims arguing that the autonomous foundations have created a hierarchal response that forces individuals to be responsible for avoiding harm. The book blends theory and policy to offer new and holistic ways to rethink our response to sexual offences and challenges the formulation of the subjective nature of consent and sexual assault. The book will be of interest to researchers, academics and policy-makers working in the areas of Criminal Justice, Criminology, Gender Studies and Social Policy.

Land, Control and Transnational Corporations

Local Communities and the Adequate Standard of Living

Verónica Torres-Marengo

Series: Routledge Research in Human Rights Law

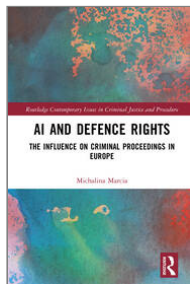

This book argues that in the era of transnational corporations' control, a right to land for local communities requires a right to control land. Despite notable advances in the legal protection of the rights to land, this study demonstrates these are not yet effective for local communities. The monograph presents an innovative approach at a unique time in the international debate over the right to land which can be further applied to strengthen the protection of other socio-economic rights. It will be of interest to academics, researchers and policy-makers working in the areas of International Human Rights Law, Agrarian Studies and Business Law.

AI and Defence Rights

The Influence on Criminal Proceedings in Europe

Michalina Marcia

Series: Routledge Contemporary Issues in Criminal Justice and Procedure

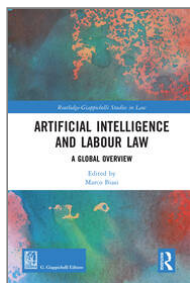

This book examines the implications of integrating AI into criminal proceedings from a defence rights perspective. It considers important questions: How can AI systems be leveraged to support both the state authorities and the defence? What challenges do they present to defence rights? And does the current regulatory framework sufficiently safeguard against the risks to defendants' rights? For legal scholars, policymakers, and practitioners, this book is a useful guide to navigating the rapidly changing legal landscape at the intersection of technology and fundamental rights.

Artificial Intelligence and Labour Law

A Global Overview

Edited by Marco Biasi

Series: Routledge-Giappichelli Studies in Law

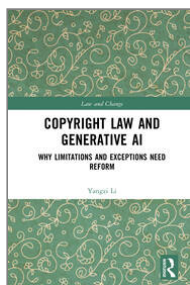

This volume provides a comprehensive legal analysis of the impact of Artificial Intelligence (AI) on the organization of work. As algorithmic management is proliferating across industries, market players have started utilizing automated decision-making tools throughout the entire employment lifecycle, from hiring to contract termination. The core message of the book is that AI is a driver of both risks and opportunities for work; hence, a moderate and careful approach by the policy makers and by the social partners is due in order to strike a fair balance between the promotion of the technological progress and the protection of workers' rights.

A Philosophical Approach to War Crimes Trials

Between Theory and Practice

Edited by Wibke K. Timmermann, Predrag Dojčinović

Series: Routledge Research in Legal Philosophy

This volume examines the underexplored relationship between philosophy and international criminal law, disciplines commonly separated despite their shared engagement with truth, responsibility, and judgment. The discussions, written by philosophically and scientifically informed scholars and experienced international law practitioners, revisit foundational philosophical ideas, critically reassess their assumptions, and translate them into operational tools for international criminal jurisprudence. The volume aims to expand the analytical resources available to judges, prosecutors, defense counsel, investigators, and scholars.

Film Censorship in the Asia-Pacific Region

Legal Frameworks and Filmmakers' Perspectives

Saw Tiong Guan

Series: Routledge Research in Media Law

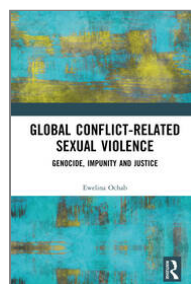

This book is a comparative study of state-based censorship laws and practices in the Asia Pacific region. It provides crucial historical context for each of the common law traditions in Malaysia, Australia and Hong Kong – all former British colonies – and compares it to the tradition of civil law and the lèse majesté law in Thailand. It analyses the approach to film censorship of four Asian-Pacific countries. It does so largely from a doctrinal perspective, reviewing each country's legal history and impact on the local film industry. Chapters detail censorship practices in each jurisdiction and judicial review and insights relevant to the Malaysian film industry.

Genocide, Impunity and Justice

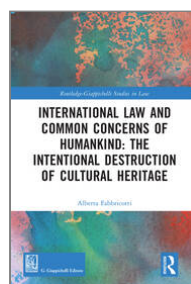

Ewelina U. Ochab

This book examines some of the recent manifestations of sexual violence as atrocity crimes, and especially, prohibited acts to bring about genocide, the responses to these crimes, and issues that continue to be neglected, including in relation to the duty to prevent. By combining thematic chapters on international law and accountability with case studies, the study provides a balance between theoretical critique and empirical analysis. The book will be of interest to academics, researchers and policy-makers working in the areas of International Criminal Law, International Humanitarian Law, Human Rights Law, Constitutional Law, Legal History, Security Studies and Genocide Studies.

International Law and Common Concerns of Humankind: The Intentional Destruction of Cultural Heritage

Alberta Fabbriotti

Series: Routledge-Giappichelli Studies in Law

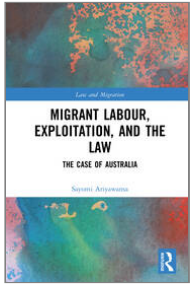

This book explores the possibility of extending the CCH designation to include the "intentional destruction of the cultural heritage of humankind" (IDCHH). A comprehensive definition of IDCHH is provided. The arguments in favour of such inclusion are based on a systematic comparison of the qualifying features of the two legal concepts: CCH and IDCHH. These arguments also consider a modern, integrated approach to solving major global problems internationally, which recognises the destruction of cultural heritage, climate change and the loss of biodiversity as interconnected phenomena requiring consistent and uniform political and legal responses.

Migrant Labour, Exploitation, and the Law

The Case of Australia

Sayomi Rushini Ariyawansa

Series: Law and Migration

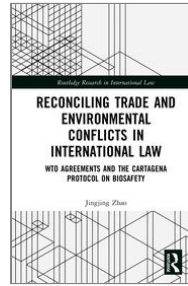

This book examines the treatment of temporary migrant workers in developed nations, using Australia as a key case study. It examines the role of the State in enacting rights restrictions and exclusions based on temporary migrant status, and how this has led to their exploitation within the workplace and community. The book sets out a framework for examining and identifying potential policy responses to the exploitation of temporary migrant workers. The work will be a valuable resource for researchers, academics and policy-makers working in the areas of Migration Law, Labour Law and Modern Slavery.

Reconciling Trade and Environmental Conflicts in International Law

WTO Agreements and the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety

Jingjing Zhao

Series: Routledge Research in International Law

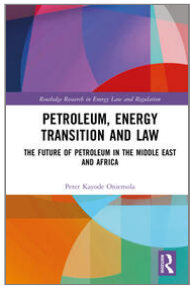

Sustainable development calls for a balance to be struck between the promotion of trade and environmental protection. This book investigates how to strike such a balance in practice by assessing the relationship between WTO Agreements and the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety. The book provides a systematic exploration of how the general international rules on conflict of norms apply to the relationship between the two WTO Agreements and the Protocol. It will be a valuable resource for scholars and policymakers in the fields of international economic law, international environmental law and public international law.

Petroleum, Energy Transition and Law

The Future of Petroleum in the Middle East and Africa

Peter Kayode Oniemola

Series: Routledge Research in Energy Law and Regulation

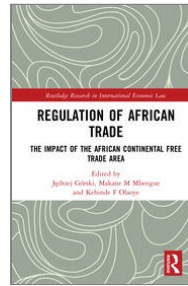

This book examines the future of petroleum exploration and production in the Middle East and Africa within the context of the global transition to alternative energy sources. It analyses the legal issues and implications of the energy transition for petroleum exploration and production in the Middle East and Africa, as well as the need for domestic laws to be revisited and prepared for managing the challenges that may arise from decarbonisation. The book will be of interest to researchers and practitioners in the field of energy law, climate law and energy geopolitics.

Regulation of African Trade

The Impact of the African Continental Free Trade Area

Edited by Jędrzej Górski, Makane M Mbengue, Kehinde Olayo

Series: Routledge Research in International Economic Law

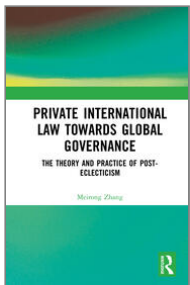

In 2018, member states of the African Union signed the African Continental Free Trade Area Agreement (AfCFTA) to implement a single continental market for goods and services and establish a continental customs union. This book discusses regulatory developments across the African continent meant to accommodate and/or further drive economic realities on the ground. The focus here is on the trade in goods. Written by a combination of academics and practitioners, the work will be a valuable resource for those working in the areas of International Economic Law, International Trade Law, African Law and Development.

Private International Law Towards Global Governance

The Theory and Practice of Post-Eclecticism

Meirong Zhang

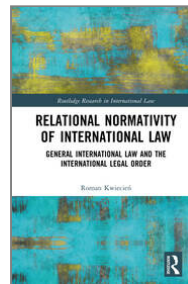

Adopting a pioneering 'post-eclectic' paradigm, this book systematically demonstrates that private international law must incorporate 'global common values' into its normative foundation. Moving beyond abstract theory, it provides a practical roadmap for addressing 'vertical' normative conflicts in four critical domains: the digital economy, decentralised finance, transboundary ecological supply chains, and cross-border bioethics. It is an essential resource for legal scholars, practitioners, and policymakers seeking institutional solutions to secure a sustainable and just globalised world.

Relational Normativity of International Law

General International Law and the International Legal Order

Roman Kwiecień Jagiellonian University in Kraków, Poland

Series: Routledge Research in International Law

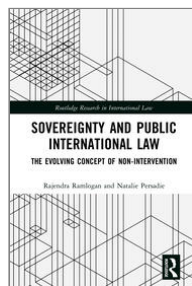

This book provides a comprehensive assessment of general international law and its normative relevance to the international legal order. The book demonstrates how relational normativity is an intrinsic feature of international law that characterises it as a legal order. It argues that this is of crucial importance for the sources of international law as well as for normative conflicts between its rules and principles. It will be of interest to researchers and practitioners in the field of international law and legal theory.

Sovereignty and Public International Law

The Evolving Concept of Non-Intervention

Rajendra Ramlogan , Natalie Persadie

Series: Routledge Research in International Law

This book explores the evolution of one of the main principles of sovereignty in public international law: non-intervention. Providing a framework to understand the main and current challenges to the centuries-old concepts of sovereignty and territorial sovereignty, the book covers topics such as self-determination, secession, and the use of force. Additionally, it highlights the transnational nature of cyberspace, and the challenges associated with its regulation and protection. The book will be of interest to researchers in the field of public international law, sovereignty and international relations.

The Anatomy of International Arbitration

Edited by Anna Petrig , Yarik Kryvoi

This book offers a clear and intellectually rigorous gateway into international arbitration. The book's original "anatomical" approach dissects arbitration into its core components to show how this dispute resolution system operates in practice. It examines cross-cutting issues such as sources of law and soft law, institutional and ad hoc arbitration, diversity, digitalisation, review mechanisms, and the enforcement of awards. Written by leading practitioners, academics, and arbitral institutions figures, the volume serves as both an accessible entry point and a comparative resource for scholars, practitioners, and policy-makers.

Visas in Migration and Asylum Law

The Key that Opens the Door

Edited by Francesco Luigi Gatta , Mario Savino

Series: Law and Migration

This book explores and discusses the different perspectives stemming from the visa as a tool of international mobility. The first part focuses on the visa as an instrument for migration control, contextualizing the rationale behind its invention and the legal challenges it raises. The second part focuses on the visa as a tool for asylum, examining its use for humanitarian purposes, including resettlement schemes and emergency-related evacuation initiatives put in place in different legal systems. It will be of interest to academics, researchers and policy-makers working in the areas of Migration and Asylum Law, International Human Rights Law and Political Science.

Climate and Energy Law

Building Sustainable Global Governance for the 21st Century

Rafael Leal-Arcas

Series: Routledge Research in Energy Law and Regulation

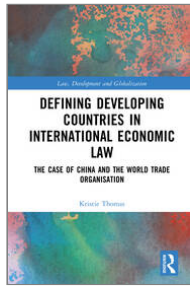

This book offers a bold and timely rethinking of how sustainable energy transitions can be achieved in an era of climate urgency and geopolitical uncertainty. Challenging the traditional top-down model of governance, the volume advances a compelling argument for a bottom-up transformation driven by citizens, prosumers, cities, and new market actors. Bridging trade, energy, climate change, and sustainability, this work highlights a crucial knowledge gap and offers an innovative governance framework fit for the 21st century. It is essential reading for scholars, policymakers, and practitioners in climate law, energy law, and global governance.

Regional Trade Agreements in Africa

Implementing the African Continental Free Trade Area

Yakubu Nagu Centre for Comparative Law in Africa,
University of Cape Town, South Africa

Series: Routledge Research in International Economic Law

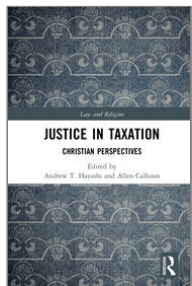

This book discusses the transformative potential of the African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA) and its profound impact on three distinct member states: Nigeria, Kenya, and Ethiopia. It explores how the AfCFTA, grounded in Pan-African values and founded upon trade theories, can provide a pathway to inclusive and sustainable development. It discusses whether AfCFTA's rules-based trade framework alone can catalyse development and argues that effective implementation hinges upon aligning domestic environments with the core aims of the AfCFTA and bolstering institutional capacity in its member states. It will be of interest to scholars of trade law and with an interest in the AfCFTA.

Law, Nature and the Ecosystem Approach

Modelling a Transcultural Eco-Legal Framework across Europe and Latin America

Edited by Silvia Bagni, Serena Baldin, Veronica Federico

This book argues that, beyond the apparent fracture between humans and Nature that defines the Anthropocene crisis, there exists a shared cultural foundation in legal traditions, converging on the recognition of the intrinsic value of Nature and of the ecosystem interconnections between human and non-human life. Divided into five parts, the book maintains a balance between theoretical and empirical, combining foundational legal and philosophical discussions with practical case studies and applications. It will be of interest to those working in the areas of Legal Philosophy, Environmental Law, Constitutional Law, Comparative Law, Human Rights, Anthropology and Environmental Studies.

The Guardian of the Constitution Controversy

Kelsen contra Schmitt, 1927-1933

Christopher Adair-Toteff University of South Florida, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Legal Philosophy

Widely considered two of the most controversial legal scholars, Hans Kelsen and Carl Schmitt have been the subject of debate for almost a century. This book focuses on a limited, but extremely important, controversy between Kelsen and Schmitt: the answer to the question regarding the proper guardian of the constitution. As much about the conflict between pluralism and unity and between democracy and autocracy as it is about a specific historical controversy, this study will be of interest to academics and researchers working in the areas of Jurisprudence and Legal Philosophy, Constitutional Law and Theory, Political Philosophy and Legal History.

Charitable Donation Law

Remapping Risk in Giving

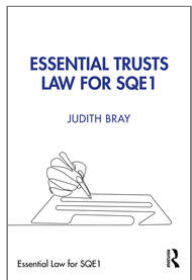

John Picton

Charitable donation law faces a persistent challenge when testators leave gifts to charities that no longer exist, creating uncertainty that often leads to costly litigation between intended beneficiaries. This book examines how traditional legal scholarship has attempted to resolve these disputes, and proposes fundamental reforms to create robust, donor-friendly frameworks. This interdisciplinary analysis will be of particular interest to researchers in charity law and comparative legal studies. The book's integration of doctrinal analysis with policy critique and reform proposals makes it essential reading for academics working at the intersection of private law and social policy.

Lawyers, Gatekeeping and Access to Justice

A Critical Analysis

Edited by Jonathan Soeharno, Birgit Spiesshofer

Series: Globalization: Law and Policy

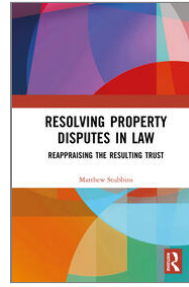

Lawyers face increasing pressure from clients, politicians, prospective hires, international and civil society organisations to act as gatekeepers: to reject certain clients or cases or mitigate their involvement. This volume discusses the key dimensions of gatekeeping, the risk of abuse of identifying lawyers with their clients in authoritarian regimes, the limits of partisan lawyering and the legal boundaries to representation. The contributions will provide solid, multi-faceted, balanced and comprehensive guidance for lawyers, academic researchers, regulators, bar associations and law societies.

Resolving Property Disputes in Law

Reappraising the Resulting Trust

Matthew Stubbins

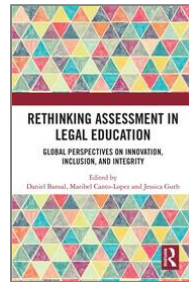

This book offers a comprehensive examination of the resulting trust, a foundational legal mechanism for determining the beneficial ownership of property in the absence of express evidence. Arguing that the resulting trust fulfils a critical role in resolving property ownership disputes, the volume explores three distinct factual contexts in which the trust is applied: property law, insolvency law, and the interaction of the law with domestic relationships. It will be of interest to researchers in the field of property law, equity and trust law, and insolvency law.

Shakespeare at Large

Law and the First Folio

Edited by Matteo Nicolini

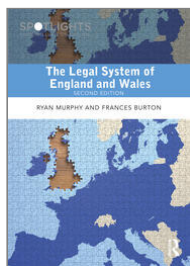

This collection celebrates the quadricentennial anniversary of Shakespeare's First Folio (1623), examining the intersection of law, literature, history, and performance through eight scholarly essays. The volume explores how the First Folio serves as a crucial lens for understanding the politico-legal implications of Shakespeare's works, addressing themes of identity, authorship, orality, performance, and print culture in early modern England. Contributors examine parliamentary representation, legal subjectivity, authorship and ownership rights, and comparative legal vulnerabilities across different cultural contexts.

Against Legal Punishment

An Argument for Abolition

Nathan Hanna

Series: Routledge Research in Legal Philosophy

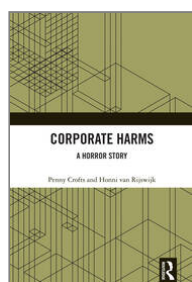

This book argues that legal punishment is almost never morally justified. It stakes out and defends novel positions in some longstanding debates in criminal law theory and ethics, including debates about the nature of punishment, the relevance of intentions to ethics, the significance of moral desert, and the implications that moral risk has for the criminal law. The book provides an accessible and thoroughly researched defense of a rarely defended position in the philosophy of punishment, making the book of interest to both established researchers in this area as well as students who are looking for an introduction to the topic.

Law and Thing Theory

The Return of the Precritical

Jean d'Aspremont

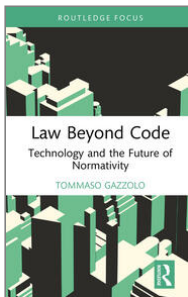

The Law of Things examines how law operates not only through words but through things, systematically conferring upon the world, the State, the people, sex, race, nature, and culture a thingly materiality treated as outside language, representation, and perception. It argues that law, in thingifying what it encounters, makes use of a precritical and authoritarian epistemology that forecloses contestation across legal and political life.

Law in a World of Multiple Legal Orders

A Global Introduction to Law

Jean-Yves Gontier

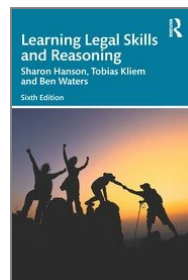

Law in a World of Multiple Legal Orders offers a foundational understanding of what law is and how it operates, while acknowledging that contemporary law is unavoidably cross-border. Starting with the basic idea of law and its relationship with justice, the book introduces the main legal traditions, courts and constitutions, before moving on to civil procedure and litigation, legal borrowing between systems, international and supranational law - including European law - and the growing role of alternative dispute resolution, such as arbitration and mediation.

The Skills of Modern Advocacy

Jaime Hamilton K.C., Nigel Booth

The Skills of Modern Advocacy provides a comprehensive practical guide to modern advocacy, explaining its core components and demonstrating how you can develop and apply the necessary skillsets in practice. Presented as an engaging mix of explanation and practical examples, each aspect of modern-day advocacy is considered in three stages to suit all readers: the essential rules, practical how-to demonstrations and advanced technique. The book begins with an introduction to the language and etiquette of advocacy before moving to the important witness handling skills involved in examination-in-chief, cross-examination, re-examination and dealing with expert witnesses.

Biomedical Practices, Religion, and the Law

Perspectives from the Middle East and Europe

Edited by Federica Sona, Marie-Claire Foblets, Shai Lavi, Hagai Boas The Van Leer Jerusalem Institute, Israel

Series: Law and Anthropology

This book deepens our understanding of the social, legal, and anthropological issues that arise from the global proliferation of advanced biomedical technologies and how they enable people to use their bodies to express individual and collective identities. The authors explore cross-cultural comparisons and what they can tell us about how the symbolic dimension of the body, as a locus of identity, impacts medical practices. The book will be of interest to researchers, academics, and policymakers working in the areas of Legal Anthropology, Comparative Law, Law and Religion, Medical Anthropology, Medical Law and Ethics, and Sociology of Medicine.

Informed Consent in Medical Ethics, Regulation, and the Law

A Unified Model

Louise Austin Dr Louise Austin, Leicester Law School, University of Leicester, University Road, Leicester, LE1 7RH, UK

This book constructs a model of informed consent to surgery utilising empirical ethics and socio-legal analysis to bring together medical ethics, medical professional regulation, and medical law. The work includes an original socio-legal analysis of the models of informed consent to surgery present in court judgments and fitness to practice decisions. It constructs such a model using the empirical ethics methodology of reflexive balancing to both develop and challenge its construction. The book will be an invaluable resource for students, academics and researchers working in the area of Medical Law and Ethics and Bioethics.

Nanomedicines in Patent Law

Innovation in Comparative Context

Muhammed Faris Vazhathodi

This book critically examines the evolving landscape of nanomedicine and its intersection with patent law, focusing on the Indian patent system in comparison with both US and EU frameworks. Through a detailed scientific and legal analysis, this volume explores whether nanomedicine inventions meet patentability criteria and examines how current regulations shape innovation in the field. It reveals that nanomedicine innovation, particularly in cancer therapeutics, is often driven by regulatory compliance rather than genuine therapeutic advancements. This book will be of interest to researchers in the field of nanotechnology, intellectual property and patent law.

Administrative Law and Public-Private Partnerships

A Comparative Analysis of England and India

Santanu Sabhapandit

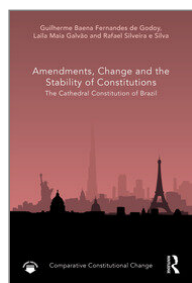

This book develops an understanding of how the public-private distinction operates in judicial review and freedom of information laws in England and India, and examines how the distinction may affect public law accountability for Public-Private Partnerships. Drawing on experiences from England, it examines some of the public law concerns that arise from the participation of the private sector in the provision of public sector services. The book will be of interest to practitioners, academics, researchers and policy-makers working in the areas of Comparative Law, Public Law and Administrative Law.

Amendments, Change and the Stability of Constitutions

The Cathedral Constitution of Brazil

Guilherme Baena Fernandes de Godoy , Laila Maia Galvão , Rafael Silveira e Silva

Series: Comparative Constitutional Change

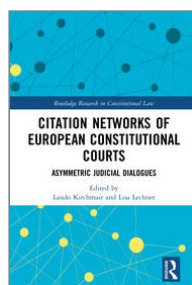

The numerous amendments to the Brazilian Constitution of 1988 have led many to question its effectiveness, stability, and legitimacy. This volume presents a timely and thorough quantitative and qualitative analysis of these amendments and the solidity of constitutions more generally. By examining the nature and extent of changes over three decades, the study directly addresses contemporary concerns about the evolving nature of Brazilian constitutional law. The work will be a valuable resource for academics and researchers working in the areas of Constitutional Law and Politics, Legal Theory and Comparative Law.

Legal Frameworks and Sustainable Development

Bridging the Governance Gap in the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor

Mehran Idris Khan

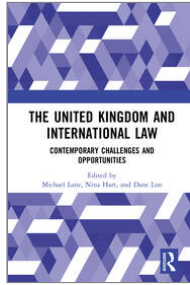

The China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) represents the largest infrastructure project of its kind, spanning 3,000 km and linking two nations. This monograph is the first to provide a comprehensive analysis of the environmental governance gaps and reform pathways of the CPEC. Rather than merely critiquing current trajectories, it proposes a three-pillar approach and a bilateral institutional framework in the form of a Joint CPEC Environmental Commission. Through legal analysis and comparative institutional assessment, the book offers policymakers, civil society, and scholars a practical blueprint for sustainable transnational development.

The United Kingdom and International Law

Contemporary Challenges and Opportunities

Edited by Michael Lane, Nina M Hart, Dane Luo

This collection brings together experts in academia, legal practice, and policymaking to interrogate the UK's multi-dimensional relationship with international law. It distils this relationship into two lenses and three themes. The two lenses capture the UK's bi-directional, or internal and external, relationship with international law, while the three themes focus on specific aspects of the UK's role in relation to international law: namely, the UK's role as a receiver, shaper, and actor obliged to comply with international law. This collection is a must-read for academics, lawyers, students and policymakers alike.

Law and Resistance

Toward a Performative Epistemology of Law

Awol Allo

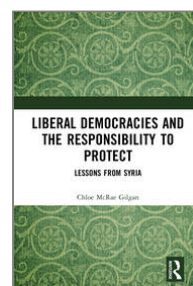

This book explores a fundamental paradox at the heart of law and resistance: while law emerges from acts of resistance, it systematically denies this origin once established. Law and Resistance considers the different ways in which a politics of resistance is enabled in the courtroom: as it uncovers a performative logic that contingently conditions, and thus breaks open, law's otherwise closed normativity.

Minorities, Identity and Inter-marriage

A European Perspective

Edited by Karolina Lendák-Kabók, Martin Klatt

Series: Routledge Advances in Minority Studies

Inter-marriages, uniting partners from diverse social, ethnic, religious, or racial backgrounds, play a pivotal and perhaps conflictual role in shaping group identities. Celebrated by some for fostering social integration, they are perceived by others within ethnic minority circles as a form of acculturation or even assimilation. This volume delves into the intricate interplay between identity, kin-state identity policies, and inter-marriage, particularly among national minorities. The collection will be of interest to academics and researchers working in the areas of Anthropology, Law, Sociology and Minority Studies.

Arctic Oil Pollution and Legal Liability

From Ships to Offshore Installations

Ilker K. Basaran

Series: IMLI Studies in International Maritime Law

This book provides a comprehensive and critical analysis of the legal liability and compensation frameworks governing accidental oil pollution in the Arctic, addressing both ship-source spills and offshore installations. Drawing on scientific analysis of oil behavior in ice-covered waters, the book demonstrates how Arctic conditions complicate detection, causation, compensation, and enforcement. Through a comparative assessment of the CLC/Fund regime, the U.S. Oil Pollution Act (OPA), and the fragmented offshore liability landscape, it reveals structural gaps in the global legal order. This book will be useful to researchers in maritime law, Arctic governance and energy regulation.
