Marx

Jaime Edwards St. Norbert College, USA, Brian Leiter University of Chicago, USA

Series: The Routledge Philosophers

Karl Marx (1818-1883) was trained as a philosopher and steeped in the thought of Hegel and German idealism, but turned away from philosophy in his mid-twenties towards politics, economics and history. However, Marx's engagement with philosophy runs through most of his work, especially in his philosophy of history and in moral and political philosophy. Including annotated suggestions for further reading and a glossary of technical terms, this outstanding introduction is an indispensable introduction to Marx's philosophy. It will also be useful to those in related disciplines such as politics, sociology, history and economics.

Ancient Philosophy

A Contemporary Introduction

Christopher Shields University of Oxford, UK*Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy*

In this new edition, Shields reaches even further to include material on Neoplatonism and on Augustine and Proclus, capturing—from Thales of Miletus to the end of the 6th Century C.E.—all of what might be called ancient philosophy. It traces the important connections between the periods and individuals of more than 1200 years of philosophy's history without losing sight of the novelties and dynamics unique to each. The coverage of the Presocratics, Sophists, Plato, and Stoicism has also been expanded, so as to highlight Plato's responses to the Sophistic movement in the development of his Theory of Forms.

Animal Ethics

A Contemporary Introduction

Bob Fischer Texas State University, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy

Whereas most introductions to animal ethics are overviews of the literature, this book is an introduction to the practice – offering an accessible model of how animal ethics can be done. Taking an empirically informed perspective, it combines philosophy with key issues in animal science, conservation biology, economics, ethology, and law. It covers classic issues, such as eating meat and experimenting on animals, as well as less common topics, such as the sentience of insects and the ethics of pest control. Fischer shows the reader how they can make their own ethical assessments.

Dialogues on Ethical Vegetarianism

Michael Huemer University of Colorado, Boulder, USA.

Series: Philosophical Dialogues on Contemporary Problems

Worldwide every year, 83 billion animals are slaughtered on factory farms, at the end of brief lives full of suffering. Is it wrong to buy the products of this industry? In this book, two college students – a meat-eater and an ethical vegetarian – discuss this question in a series of dialogues conducted over five days. The two go on to discuss the vegan life, why people who accept the arguments often fail to change their behavior, and how vegans should interact with non-vegans. This Second Edition covers many new topics, from how to satisfy nutritional needs with plant-based foods to Progressive-inspired arguments for and against veganism.

What Do We Owe Other Animals?

A Debate

Bob Fischer Texas State University, USA, Anja Jauernig

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Philosophers Bob Fischer and Anja Jauernig agree that human society often treats animals in indefensible ways and that all animals have moral worth; they disagree on whether that worth is equal to that of humans. In What Do We Owe Other Animals?: A Debate, Fischer and Jauernig square off over this central argument in animal ethics. Jauernig defends the view that all living beings are of equal moral worth and are owed compassion, on account of which we are also obligated to adopt a vegan diet. Fischer denies that we have an obligation to become vegans, and argues for the position that humans morally matter more than all other living creatures.

Can War Be Justified?

A Debate

Andrew Fiala , Jennifer Kling

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Can war be justified? Pacifists answer that it cannot; they oppose war and advocate for nonviolent alternatives to war. But defenders of just war theory argue that in some circumstances, when the effectiveness of nonviolence is limited, wars can be justified. In this book, two philosophers debate this question, drawing on contemporary scholarship and new developments in thinking about pacifism and just war theory. Andrew Fiala defends the pacifist position, while Jennifer Kling defends just war traditions.

Dialogues on Gun Control

David DeGrazia

Series: Philosophical Dialogues on Contemporary Problems

What happens when two intelligent American college students with different attitudes about guns respectfully discuss the ethics of gun policy? What might a European exchange student add to the mix? All three characters are fictional, the creation of author David DeGrazia's imagination. But their conversations—well-informed by the latest empirical data and the best philosophical arguments—shed light on the reality of guns in the U.S. today. These dialogues introduce readers to the American experience with gun violence and gun policy, articulating ethical arguments supporting and opposing substantial gun control, and specific possibilities for reform.

Is It Wrong to Buy Sex?

A Debate

Holly Lawford-Smith, Angie Pepper

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Is it wrong for a man to buy sex from a woman? Lawford-Smith argues that commercial sex is quintessentially hierarchical sex, and it is wrong both to have and to perpetuate a market in, hierarchical sex. Pepper argues that men are permitted to buy sex from those women who freely choose to sell it. Important issues are at stake in these two positions, such as issues of gender equality and the rights of individuals. The two authors debate the ethical issues involved in the decision to buy sex, arguing passionately for very different conclusions, in a way that is lively, constructive, and sure to leave readers with a lot to think about.

The Ethics of Abortion

Women's Rights, Human Life, and the Question of Justice

Christopher Kaczor Loyola Marymount University, USA

Series: Routledge Annals of Bioethics

Appealing to reason rather than religious belief, this book is the most comprehensive case against the choice of abortion yet published. This third edition critically evaluates all the major grounds for denying basic rights to fetal human beings. It also provides several (non-theological) justifications for the conclusion that all human beings, including those in utero, should be respected as persons. This book also critiques the view that abortion is not wrong even if the human fetus is a person. Answering the arguments of defenders of abortion, it provides reasoned justification for the view that all intentional abortions are ethically wrong.

Environmental Ethics for the Long Term

An Introduction

John Nolt

Broad in scope, this introduction to environmental ethics considers both contemporary issues and the extent of humanity's responsibility for distant future life. John Nolt interweaves contemporary science, logical analysis, and ethical theory into the story of the expansion of ethics beyond the human species and into the far future. ## Can We Know Anything?

A Debate

Bryan Frances, Michael Huemer University of Colorado at Boulder, USA

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

In this book, Michael Huemer and Bryan Frances debate whether - and how - we can gain knowledge of the world outside of our own minds. Starting with opening statements, the debate moves through two rounds of replies. Frances argues that we lack knowledge because, for example, we cannot rule out the possibility that we are brains in vats being stimulated to create an illusion of living in the real world. Huemer disagrees that we need evidence against such possibilities to gain knowledge of the external world, arguing that we can presume that things are as they appear unless we acquire specific grounds for thinking otherwise.

3RD EDITION

Epistemology

A Contemporary Introduction to the Theory of Knowledge

Robert Audi University of Notre Dame, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy

Epistemology, or "the theory of knowledge," is concerned with how we know what we know, what justifies us in believing what we believe, and what standards of evidence we should use in seeking truths about the world and human experience. This comprehensive introduction to the field of epistemology explains the concepts and theories central to understanding knowledge. Along with covering the traditional topics of the discipline in detail, Epistemology explores emerging areas of research. The third edition features new sections on such topics as the nature of intuition, the skeptical challenge of rational disagreement, and "the value problem" – the range of questions concerning why knowledge and justified true belief have value beyond that of merely true belief. Updated and expanded, Epistemology remains a superb introduction to one of the most fundamental fields of philosophy.

Should We Maximize Utility?

A Debate about Utilitarianism

Ben Bramble Australian National University, James Lenman University of Sheffield

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Utilitarianism directs us to act in ways that impartially maximize welfare or utility or at least aim to do that. Some find this view highly compelling. Others object that it has intuitively repugnant results; that it condones evildoing and injustice; that it is excessively imposing and controlling; that it is alienating; and that it fails to offer meaningful practical guidance. The two authors debate various forms of this longstanding ethical theory, arguing for very different conclusions, in a way that is sure to leave readers with new views of their own moral thoughts and lives.

Logic Works

A Rigorous Introduction to Formal Logic

Lorne Falkenstein Western University, Canada, Scott Stapleford St. Thomas University, Canada, Molly Kao

Logic Works is a critical and extensive introduction to logic. It asks questions about why systems of logic are as they are, how they relate to ordinary language and ordinary reasoning, and what alternatives there might be to classical logical doctrines. The book covers classical first order logic and alternatives, including intuitionistic, free, and many-valued logic. It also considers how logical analysis can be applied to carefully represent the reasoning employed in academic and scientific work, better understand that reasoning, and identify its hidden premises.

9TH EDITION

Core Questions in Philosophy

Elliott Sober, Joel Velasco Texas Tech University, USA.

In this 9th edition, Elliott Sober and Joel Velasco use an engaging lecture-style format to show students how philosophy is best used to evaluate many different kinds of arguments and to construct sound theories. Well-known historical texts are discussed, not as a means to honor the dead or merely to describe what various philosophers have thought but to engage with, criticize, and even improve ideas from the past. In addition - because philosophy cannot function apart from its engagement with the wider society - traditional and contemporary philosophical problems are brought into dialogue with the physical, biological, and social sciences.

From Socrates to the Supreme Court

An Introduction to Philosophy through the Law

Kenneth Glazer University of Maryland, USA.

Philosophy and law are separate disciplines but they deal with many of the same issues, from the meaning of equality and liberty, the nature of knowledge, reasoning, and mental states, to the indeterminacy of language, causation, free will, luck, and personal identity. This textbook introduces philosophy to undergraduates in a new and refreshing way—by using cases, concepts, and doctrines from the law to illustrate philosophical issues. It introduces the major areas in the discipline: moral and political philosophy, epistemology, metaphysics, philosophy of mind and language, alongside philosophy's great thinkers.

Philosophic Classics: From Plato to Derrida

Edited by Forrest Baird

Series: Philosophic Classics

Contains essential writings of the most important philosophers from almost two millennia of Western philosophy. Baird follows the criteria established by Walter Kaufmann: (1) to use complete works or, where more appropriate, complete sections of works (2) in clear translations (3) of texts central to each thinker's philosophy or widely accepted as part of the "canon." To make the works more accessible to students, most footnotes treating textual matters (variant readings, etc.) have been omitted and important words from antiquity have been transliterated and put in angle brackets.

Medieval Philosophy

A Contemporary Introduction

Andrew W Arlig

Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy

This book presents a new, contemporary introduction to medieval philosophy as it was practiced in all its variety in Western Europe and the Near East. In addition to some of the perennial questions posed by philosophers, such as "Can we know anything, and if so, what?", "What is the fundamental nature of reality?", and "What does human flourishing consist in?", this volume looks at what medieval thinkers had to say about our obligations towards animals and the environment, freedom of speech, and how best to organize ourselves politically. It assumes only a minimal familiarity with philosophy.

Is Morality Real?

A Debate

Matt Lutz, Spencer Case

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

We often say that actions like murder and institutions like slavery are morally wrong. And sometimes people strenuously disagree about the moral status of actions, as with abortion. But what, if anything, makes statements about morality true? Should we be realists about morality, or anti-realists? After the authors jointly outline the major contemporary positions in the moral realism debate, each author argues for his own preferred views and responds to the other's constructive arguments and criticisms.

Do Numbers Exist?

A Debate about Abstract Objects

Peter van Inwagen , William Lane Craig

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Craig argues that there are no abstract objects, whereas Van Inwagen argues that there are. Their exchange explores various arguments about the existence and nature of abstract objects. They focus especially on whether our ordinary and scientific thought and talk commit us to abstract objects, surveying the options available to us and the objections each faces. The debate covers central problems and methods in metaphysics, and also delves into theological questions raised by abstract objects.

Experiencing Phenomenology

An Introduction

Joel Smith University of Manchester, UK

Phenomenology is the study of what it is like to experience things, from mental states and consciousness to bodily-awareness, human agency and emotions. It is a fundamental area of study within philosophy and major methodological approach to studying the human sciences in general. This book is an outstanding introduction to phenomenology. Approaching fundamental questions in phenomenology from an analytical perspective but paying careful attention to classic phenomenological texts, it provides the book with a clarity and breadth that will be welcomed by students coming to the subject for the first time.

What is Consciousness?

A Debate

Amy Kind Claremont McKenna College, USA, Daniel Stoljar

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

What is consciousness and why is it so philosophically and scientifically puzzling? This book is a debate between two philosophers who are united in their rejection this kind of "standard" physicalism - but who differ sharply in what lesson to draw from this. Amy Kind defends dualism 2.0, a thoroughly modern version of dualism (the theory that there are two fundamentally different kinds of things in the world, those that are physical and those that are mental) decoupled from any religious or non-scientific connotations.

The Emotions

A Philosophical Introduction

Julien Deonna University of Bern, Switzerland, Fabrice Teroni

The emotions occupy a central place in human life. At the same time, they present deep philosophical problems that have preoccupied philosophers such as Aristotle, David Hume and William James. Are emotions feelings, thoughts, or experiences? If they are experiences, what are they experiences of? Are emotions rational? Is there a science of the emotions? The Emotions: A Philosophical Introduction introduces and explores these questions and more in a clear and accessible way. Including chapter summaries and guides to further reading, it is an ideal starting point for any philosopher or student studying the emotions. It will also be of interest to those in related disciplines such as psychology and political theory.

Is It Wrong to Buy Sex?

A Debate

Holly Lawford-Smith , Angie Pepper

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Is it wrong for a man to buy sex from a woman? Lawford-Smith argues that commercial sex is quintessentially hierarchical sex, and it is wrong both to have and to perpetuate a market in, hierarchical sex. Pepper argues that men are permitted to buy sex from those women who freely choose to sell it. Important issues are at stake in these two positions, such as issues of gender equality and the rights of individuals. The two authors debate the ethical issues involved in the decision to buy sex, arguing passionately for very different conclusions, in a way that is lively, constructive, and sure to leave readers with a lot to think about.

A Debate

Matt Lutz , Spencer Case

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

We often say that actions like murder and institutions like slavery are morally wrong. And sometimes people strenuously disagree about the moral status of actions, as with abortion. But what, if anything, makes statements about morality true? Should we be realists about morality, or anti-realists? After the authors jointly outline the major contemporary positions in the moral realism debate, each author argues for his own preferred views and responds to the other's constructive arguments and criticisms.

Philosophy of Sex and Love

An Opinionated Introduction

Patricia Marino

From the 1970s until recently, philosophers' discussions about sex and love have tended to dwell on certain metaphysical questions (e.g., whether we have reasons to love) or—in ethics—on questions about perversion and normalcy. In the last few years, however, philosophers have foregrounded political concerns and begun to focus on a wide range of emerging social issues. In this student-friendly introduction to the subject, Patricia Marino offers a contemporary approach to sex and love, highlighting the social, political, and economic problems at play in issues like same-sex marriage, sexual objectification, ethical non-monogamy, and many more relevant topics that will interest readers today.

Thinking About Statistics

The Philosophical Foundations

Jun Otsuka

Simply stated, this book bridges the gap between statistics and philosophy. It does this by delineating the conceptual cores of various statistical methodologies (Bayesian/frequentist statistics, model selection, machine learning, causal inference etc.) and drawing out their philosophical implications. Portraying statistical inference as an epistemic endeavor to justify hypotheses about a probabilistic model of a given empirical problem, the book explains the role of ontological, semantic, and epistemological assumptions that make such inductive inference possible.

Do We Have a Soul?

A Debate

Eric T. Olson , Aaron Segal Professor of Philosophy, Yeshiva University

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Are we made entirely of matter, like sticks and stones? Or do we have a soul—a nonphysical entity—where our mental lives take place? The authors Eric T. Olson and Aaron Segal begin this accessible and wide ranging debate by looking at the often-overlooked question of whether we appear in ordinary experience to be material things. The debate takes in large philosophical questions extending well beyond dualism and materialism. The book features clear statements of each argument, responses to counter-arguments, in-text definitions, a glossary of key terms, and section summaries.

50 Puzzles, Paradoxes, and Thought Experiments

Torin Alter , Amy Kind , Robert J. Howell

Series: Puzzles, Paradoxes, and Thought Experiments in Philosophy

Imaginative cases, or what might be called puzzles and other thought experiments, play a central role in philosophy of mind. The real world also furnishes philosophers with an ample supply of such puzzles. This volume collects fifty of the most important historical and contemporary cases in philosophy of mind and describes their significance. The authors divide them into five sections: consciousness and dualism; physicalist theories and the metaphysics of mind; content, intentionality, and representation; perception, imagination, and attention; and persons, personal identity, and the self.

What is Consciousness?

A Debate

Amy Kind Claremont McKenna College, USA, Daniel Stoljar

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

What is consciousness and why is it so philosophically and scientifically puzzling? This book is a debate between two philosophers who are united in their rejection this kind of "standard" physicalism - but who differ sharply in what lesson to draw from this. Amy Kind defends dualism 2.0, a thoroughly modern version of dualism (the theory that there are two fundamentally different kinds of things in the world, those that are physical and those that are mental) decoupled from any religious or non-scientific connotations.

Bence Nanay

Series: The Basics

This book combines approaches from philosophy, psychology, and neuroscience in the study of perception. In addition to appealing to readers from all three of these disciplines, Perception: The Basics is a perfect introduction for students and general readers. Besides addressing the classic questions of how perception works, the book highlights the intricate connections between perception and action and on perception that is not triggered by sensory input, like mental imagery, dreaming, and hallucination.

Is There a God?

A Debate

Graham Oppy Monash University, Australia, Kenneth L. Pearce Trinity College Dublin, Ireland

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Kenneth L. Pearce argues that God is a real answer to the deepest question of all: why is there something rather than nothing? Graham Oppy argues that we should believe that there are none but natural causal entities with none but natural causal properties—and hence should believe that there are no gods. Beginning from this basic disagreement, the authors proceed to discuss and debate a wide range of philosophical questions, including questions about explanation, necessity, rationality, religious experience, mathematical objects, the foundations of ethics, and the methodology of philosophy.

Reasoning about God

An Introduction to Thinking Logically about Religion

Harry J Gensler

Reasoning about God is an introduction to philosophy of religion, meeting college students where they are with their own doubts and questions. Each chapter begins with a passage from a fictional student, who raises intellectual problems against God, which is followed by the author's informed and easy-to-understand analysis. This debate structure allows student readers to clearly see the clash of ideas, gets them involved in the issues, and encourages their critical thinking (since students are pushed to find flaws in the ideas). It emulates the structure the author followed successfully in his Ethics: A Contemporary Introduction.

According to one of these views, presentism, the present is special: only the present things exist. According to the alternative view, eternalism, our world is a giant four-dimensional block of spacetime in which all things, past, present, and future, exist.

Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy

Describes and evaluates the most important debates in this growing area of research, covering metaphysics, epistemology, physics, philosophy of language, philosophy of mind, cognitive science, rationality, and art. Can we know what time really is? Is time possible, especially given modern physics? Must there be time because we cannot think without it? What do we experience of time? Can the philosophy of time help us understand biases toward the future and the fear of death? How is time relevant to art? What could time travel be? Chapters begin with helpful introductions and end with study questions and annotated further readings lists.

Philosophy of Time: The Basics

Graeme Forbes

Series: The Basics

What is time? Does it pass? Is the future open? Why do we care? Philosophy of Time: The Basics doesn't answer these questions. It does give you an opinionated introduction to thinking a bit more deeply about them. Written in a way that assumes no philosophical background from its readers, this book looks at central topics in philosophy of time and shows how they relate to other time-related topics -- from theoretical physics (without the maths!) to your own mortality.

The Philosophy of Happiness

An Interdisciplinary Introduction

Lorraine L. Besser

This book brings together emerging research on happiness within a philosophical perspective. It explores both philosophical theories of happiness as well as the central lines of research prominent within the empirical study of it. By analyzing how particular contributions of each field or line of research inform the contributions of others, the book helps readers develop a greater understanding of the whole of happiness.

The Philosophy of Well-Being

An Introduction

Guy Fletcher

Well-being occupies a central role in ethics and political philosophy, including in major theories such as utilitarianism. It also extends far beyond philosophy: recent studies into the science and psychology of well-being have propelled the topic to centre stage, and governments spend millions on promoting it. What is well-being? Which theories of well-being are most plausible? In this comprehensive introduction to the topic, Guy Fletcher unpacks and assesses these questions and many more. Essential reading for students in ethics and political philosophy, and also suitable for those in related disciplines such as psychology, politics and sociology.

Engaging Political Philosophy

An Introduction

Robert Talisse Vanderbilt University, USA

This book undertakes a critical, dynamic survey of the contemporary scene. It focuses on five topics: Liberty, Authority, Justice, Democracy, and Globalization. Each receives a separate chapter, and the chapters provide a philosophically engaging exploration of each topic from the point of view of contemporary political philosophy. The most important figures and books are discussed, but they provide neither the animus nor the organizational structure for the book: the chapters are driven by the most compelling and intuitive arguments and ideas. Engaging Political Philosophy leaves the reader with the sense that there remains a plenitude of still unresolved philosophical debates.

Is Political Authority an Illusion?

A Debate

Michael Huemer University of Colorado at Boulder, USA,
Daniel Layman Davidson College, USA

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Michael Huemer argues that political authority is an illusion and that no one is entitled to rule over anyone. He discusses and rebuts the major theories supporting political authority's rightfulness: implicit social contract theory, hypothetical contract theories, democratic theories of authority, and utilitarian theories. Daniel Layman argues that democratic governments have authority because they are needed to protect our rights and because they are accountable to the people. Each author writes two replies directly addressing the arguments and ideas of the other.

Moral Institutions

An Introduction to Philosophy, Politics, and Economics

Mario I. Juares-Garcia Tulane University, USA.

Philosophy, Politics, and Economics (PPE) is a promising approach to understanding our complex world and addressing contemporary social issues. But what is it? In this book, Mario I. Juares-Garcia, straightforwardly explains to beginners what PPE is and why it's so useful. The book uses a unified PPE approach for undergraduate students that differs from a simple combination of moral philosophy, political science, and economics so that the reader can appreciate PPE's distinct and unique virtues. It focuses on two institutions that have been fundamental in making the world a better place: governments and markets.

What Makes Life Meaningful?

A Debate

Thaddeus Metz , Joshua W. Seachris

Series: Little Debates about Big Questions

Can human life be meaningful? What does talk about life's meaning even mean? What is God's role, if any, in a meaningful life? These three questions frame this one-of-a-kind debate between two philosophers who have spent most of their professional lives thinking and writing about the topic of life's meaning. In this wide-ranging scholarly conversation, Professors Thaddeus Metz and Joshua Seachris develop and defend their own unique answers to these questions, while responding to each other's objections in a lively dialogue format.

Virtue Ethics

A Contemporary Introduction

Liezl Van Zyl

Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy

Virtue Ethics Today: A Contemporary Introduction presents readers with an engaging overview of contemporary problems, positions and arguments in this rapidly growing field. It includes debates between virtue ethicists and their critics, as well as debates among virtue ethicists themselves. Each chapter begins with a discussion of a central topic in normative ethics, one that students already will have encountered in an introductory course in moral philosophy or applied ethics. The choice of questions and the discussions themselves challenge the reader to think beyond the ways normative ethics usually operates, and thus clearly demonstrates what is distinctive about virtue ethics.
