Military Exercises and Threat Perception in Europe

NATO, Russia, and the Politics of War Games, 1975–2018

Thomas Hughes

Series: Cass Military Studies

This book explores the politics of military exercises in Europe between 1975 and 2018, revealing how NATO, the Soviet Union, and Russia have used exercises as political tools and how these activities shaped and reflected their perception of the threat environment. Drawing on extensive archival research and expert interviews, this work offers an examination of (and reflection on) European security by combining a detailed analysis of military exercises across three distinct periods (1975–1990, 1991–2013, 2014–2018) with an exploration of the development of Confidence- (and Security-) Building Measures, bridging Cold War and contemporary security environments.

Strategy Amidst Indifference

Australia and the Indian Ocean Islands, 1803 to 2025

Ashton Robinson

Series: Routledge Research in Strategic Studies

This book examines Australia's strategic attitude towards the Indian Ocean islands below the equator. Australian strategic theory, policy and practice have to date understandably prioritised China, Southeast Asia and the Pacific. The Indian Ocean islands filling Australia's western flank are now changing and growing rapidly, however, with a series of new strategic challenges that pose difficulties unaddressed by Canberra's current strategic settings. The book sees the disconnection as derived from Australia's history and explores how Australia found itself without influence in the Indian Ocean islands and what strategic and security hazards lie in continued indifference.

The Talent Imperative: Inside the US Army's Talent Management Transformation

Edited by Lee Robinson, Michael Arnold

The US Army faces an extraordinary people management challenge: managing more than one million service members worldwide who rotate through new roles every two to three years. For decades, the Army relied on a one-size-fits-all, Industrial Age personnel system that treated individuals as interchangeable parts. While effective in a previous era, this approach is increasingly misaligned with a strategic environment that demands adaptability, innovation, and speed. Recognizing that its legacy system was no longer sufficient, Army leaders undertook a rapid and far-reaching transformation to modernize how talent is identified, developed, and employed.

10TH EDITION

Akehurst's Modern Introduction to International Law

Alexander Orakelashvili University of Birmingham, UK

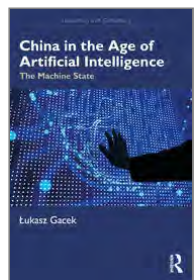

First published in 1970, Akehurst's Modern Introduction to International Law rapidly established itself as a widely used and successful textbook in its field. Being the shortest of all the major textbooks in this area, it continues to offer a concise and accessible overview of the concepts, themes, and issues central to the growing system of international law, while retaining Akehurst's original positivist approach that accounts for the essence and character of this system of law. It is an essential text for all undergraduate and postgraduate students of international law, government and politics, and international relations.

China in the Age of Artificial Intelligence

The Machine State

Łukasz Gacek

Series: Encounters with Complexity

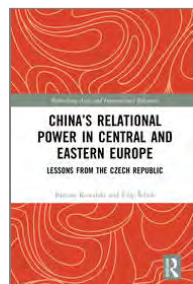

This book examines artificial intelligence in China not simply as a technological development, but as part of a longer reflection on order, authority, and the role of technique in social life. Rather than treating AI as a neutral sector of innovation, the book situates it within cultural and political traditions that shape how technology is understood, regulated, and integrated into state projects. Drawing on classical Chinese texts alongside contemporary policy documents and legal frameworks, the study shows how artificial intelligence has been embedded in a model of modernization grounded in planning, coordination, and infrastructural scale.

China's Relational Power in Central and Eastern Europe

Lessons from the Czech Republic

Bartosz Kowalski, Filip Šebok

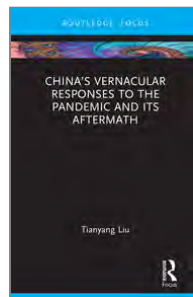

Series: Rethinking Asia and International Relations

This book examines the rise and fall of Sino-Czech relations after 2012, which coincided with China's outward political and economic expansion through the Belt and Road Initiative and the construction of a global network of partnerships, including in Central and Eastern Europe. Drawing on relational theory rooted in the Chinese concept of guanxi, the authors analyze to what extent China was able to secure the compliance of the Czech Republic with its core interests. The volume extends the application of relationality beyond its conventional focus on China's engagement with Africa, Southeast Asia, and Latin America.

China's Vernacular Responses to the Pandemic and Its Aftermath

Tianyang Liu Wuhan University, China

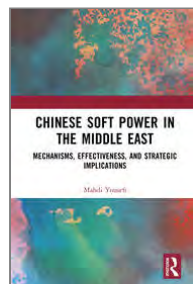

Rather than focusing solely on government policy, the book explores everyday life in urban and rural China during the pandemic. It shows how people navigated uncertainty and how those experiences continue to shape daily practices after the crisis. It also explores how large-scale public health measures were interpreted and adapted. This book will be valuable for scholars and students of politics, public health, and sociology, especially those interested in the unique Chinese experience of the pandemic.

Mechanisms, Effectiveness, and Strategic Implications

Mahdi Yousefi

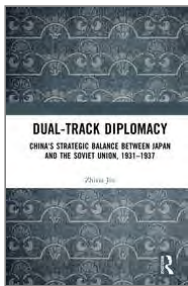

As China's footprint in the Middle East expands beyond energy and infrastructure, its pursuit of cultural and ideational influence has become a central pillar of its regional strategy. The book provides the first comprehensive, empirical analysis of how China projects soft power across this geopolitically vital region. Offering a rare insider's perspective informed by over a decade of cross-cultural engagement, it is an essential resource for scholars and students of International Relations, Middle East Studies, and Chinese Foreign Policy, as well as policymakers navigating the shifting global order.

Dual-track Diplomacy

China's Strategic Balance between Japan and the Soviet Union, 1931–1937

Zhixia Jin

Between 1931 and 1937, Nationalist China was caught between Japanese imperial expansion and the unpredictable intentions of the Soviet Union, facing an increasingly hostile external environment. This book reconstructs how China navigated this precarious situation through a sophisticated strategy known as 'dual-track diplomacy'. Moving beyond traditional narratives, it analyses the underlying mechanics of diplomatic practice, revealing how factional divisions, overlapping authorities, and secret channels were exploited as strategic assets. It will appeal to scholars and students of modern Chinese history and East Asian international relations.

Mediation and Peacebuilding in an Age of Division

The Wars in Ukraine, South Sudan, and Afghanistan

Daisaku Higashi University of Tokyo, Japan

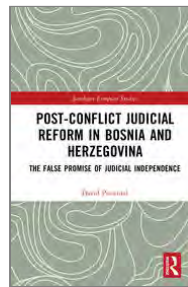

This book explores the major challenges of mediation during armed conflicts and post-conflict peacebuilding in an age of division, when the permanent members of the UN Security Council are fundamentally divided. The author argues that it is critical to mediate armed conflicts and implement peacebuilding by maintaining the fundamental rules of the international system, such as respecting "national sovereignty, borders of states, and self-determination of peoples" even in the age of division. At the same time, he calls for "adaptive peacebuilding," reflecting local contexts, histories, and political dynamics, avoiding text-tailored approaches.

Post-Conflict Judicial Reform in Bosnia and Herzegovina

The False Promise of Judicial Independence

David Pimentel

Series: Southeast European Studies

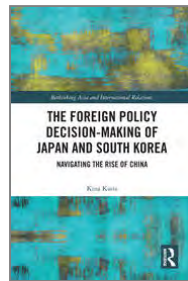

Judicial reform became a priority for international development in the 1990s and remains central to EU enlargement conditionality today. Yet despite significant investment, there is limited empirical evidence about the effectiveness of these initiatives. This book addresses this gap through a comprehensive longitudinal study of Bosnia and Herzegovina's post-war judicial reforms. Drawing on unique survey data from judges and prosecutors, it provides the first long-term empirical assessment of post-conflict judicial reform outcomes.

The Foreign Policy Decision-Making of Japan and South Korea

Navigating the Rise of China

Kina Kunz

Series: Rethinking Asia and International Relations

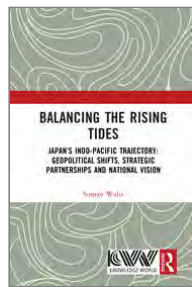

This book examines why Japan and South Korea have responded so differently to China's rise, analysing how international pressures and domestic politics together shaped their strategic choices. Drawing on secondary literature, government documents, and interviews in Japan and South Korea, the book combines qualitative comparative case studies with process tracing to uncover the determinants of each state's China policy. It shows that geography, material capabilities, and different stakes in the Korean Conflict produced more tensions Japan, while incentivising cooperation for South Korea.

The Makeover of Southern Europe

Fifty Years After the Transition to Democracy in Greece, Portugal and Spain

Edited by Jorge M. Fernandes, Nuno Garoupa, Maria Jose Hierro, Sofia Vasilopoulou

Series: South European Society and Politics

Drawing on the latest comparative research, The Makeover of Southern Europe traces the full arc of Southern Europe's democratic experience: from the turbulent transitions of the mid-1970s, through the consolidation of the 1980s and the modernisation that followed EU membership, to the severe stress tests imposed by the 2008 financial crisis and the more recent rise of populism and far-right politics. Covering institutions, political parties, gender equality, national identity, political trust, and public attitudes towards European integration, the book shows that shared historical origins do not produce identical destinies.

The Making of China's Working Class

A World to Lose

Marc Blecher

Series: Conceptualising Comparative Politics

The Making of China's Working Class: A World to Lose asks these three questions: what kind of class is the Chinese working class?; what are the historical forces and processes that have formed it?; and how does the pattern of class formation help explain the working class's reactions historically, presently, and even prospectively? Blecher offers a contribution not just to scholarship on Chinese labor politics, but on the country's politics and the state's hegemony more widely. The Making of China's Working Class is an outstanding resource for educators and students to understand Chinese politics and comparative working-class politics.

Trustworthy Elections

The Role of Electoral Management Bodies

Therese Pearce Laanela

Electoral management bodies (EMBs), the institutions designated to manage political change inclusively and peacefully, must be trusted for election results to be accepted. This book explores how stakeholder feelings of injustice complicate transactions and information flow with electoral authorities and deplete the legitimacy capital that EMBs require to expedite democracy. By highlighting stakeholder viewpoints, the book provides a social perspective to what has been seen as a technical and administrative problem and provides a broader range of pathways for EMB trust-building policy and practice.

Wanting Democracy

Cases, Theories and Realization

Rosemary H. T. O'Kane

In this book, Rosemary H. T. O'Kane asks why democracy is so deeply desired, yet why it often falls short in practice. O'Kane looks at real historical and contemporary cases while engaging with classic theories about bureaucracy, political parties, elites, and power. These lessons, additionally informed by the cases of India, South Korea, Taiwan and Sweden, are then used to build a "practical ideal" vision of representative democracy grounded in everyday realities. This practical ideal goes beyond elections and rights to include fair law, neutral bureaucracy, and an active society marked by equality and civic participation.

Changing Dynamics in the Arctic

Actors and Alliances

Edited by Uttam Kumar Sinha Fellow, Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses, New Delhi, India, Andreas Østhagen

This book addresses four key questions about contemporary Arctic geopolitics: How do Arctic states view security from a geopolitical perspective? What conditions could re-stabilize Arctic cooperation? What forces have shaped current Arctic dynamics? And what choices could foster future collaboration, innovation, and sustainability in the region? It presents diverse perspectives on how Arctic states are reassessing existing and future governance and security mechanisms in the region.

China's Hydropower Development in the Mekong Basin

Damming the Belt and Road Initiative

Phillip Guerreiro

Series: Rethinking Asia and International Relations

This book highlights the connections and consequences of China's regional foreign relations and the Belt & Road Initiative (BRI), a key part of which is China's involvement in hydropower projects. The connective nature of hydropower infrastructure illustrates the integrative component of China's dam development in the Mekong and establishes the foundation for the creation of a region. Laos, Thailand, Cambodia, and Vietnam have all played a role in absorbing either directly or indirectly the economic benefits of Chinese hydropower development in the Mekong basin, rather than portraying the BRI as a coercive tool, the book shows recipient states have agency in choosing to participate.

Bridging Europe's Divides through Regional Organizations

The Balkans, Brussels, and Beyond

Melanie H. Ram

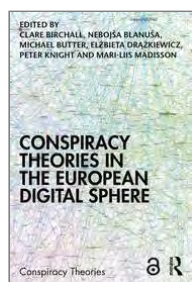

Series: Global Institutions

Amid a crisis of multilateralism on a continent rocked by war, this timely book shines light on the numerous international organizations that have brought together EU and non-EU countries in Europe since the Cold War ended and the Balkans fragmented. These regional and subregional intergovernmental organizations (IOs) – which have evolved and multiplied – provide fertile ground for the author's examination of international organization formalization, financing, overlap, adaptation, identity-building, proliferation, and persistence.

Disaster Displacement and International Protection in the EU

Challenges, Misconceptions, and the Way Forward

Chiara Scissa

Series: Trends and Perspectives in International Politics

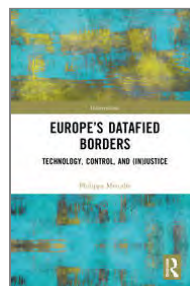

This book investigates the reasons behind the absence of consolidated protection concerning disaster displacement in the EU. 1) The way disaster displacement—along with its causes, dynamics, and the nature of harm—is conceptualized at both EU and national levels. 2) The interpretation and application of international protection statuses by asylum authorities and decision-makers, particularly in the context of disaster displacement. 3) The restrictive asylum policies adopted by decision-makers, which prioritize deterrence and create significant barriers to accessing protection.

Europe's Datafied Borders

Technology, Control, and (In)Justice

Philippa Metcalfe

Series: Interventions

This monograph examines the growing datafication of European borders, exploring how digital technologies reshape migration governance. The book reveals how such technologies increasingly function as tools of exclusion, surveillance, and control for those whose mobility rights are restricted – including people seeking asylum and illegalised migrants. As such, the book explores the datafied element of enforcing the exclusionary logics that underpin migration policies in Europe. Drawing on multi-sited ethnographic fieldwork in Greece and the United Kingdom, the book foregrounds the lived experiences of those navigating datafied systems.

The Western Balkans and the Challenges of EU Accession

The Resilient Transformation

Edited by Igor Vidačak University of Zagreb, Croatia

Series: Southeast European Studies

This book provides a comprehensive, interdisciplinary analysis of the transformation of Western Balkan candidate countries as they move toward European Union (EU) accession. It assesses this multidimensional process as shaped both by reforms in the region and by developments within the EU itself. The volume examines enlargement credibility amid democratic backsliding, radical-right pressures, and debates on EU reform, alongside questions of strategic autonomy and authoritarian norm diffusion. It traces accession-driven change in public administration, regulatory capacity, the rule of law, and government–civil society relations.

Transnational Memory Activism in Bosnia and Herzegovina

The White Armband Day

Johanna Paul

Series: Southeast European Studies

This book provides an in-depth case study of White Armband Day, a civic and transnational protest against the denial of genocidal violence in Prijedor during the early days of the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina (1992-1995). It explores how this commemorative event emerged amid local memory struggles as a spontaneous global social media campaign for the victims' right to remember and traces its evolution into a transnational commemoration day, marked in Prijedor, across the post-Yugoslav region, within diasporic communities, and online.

Competing Roles, Diverging Strategies

Grand Strategy of Great Powers through the Lens of Role Theory

Çağla Kılıç

Series: Role Theory and International Relations

Focusing on the United States, China, and Russia, this book shows how the alignment and contestation of national role conceptions among leaders, factions, and opposition actors shape long-term strategic orientations. By measuring patterns of agreement and disagreement, it demonstrates when change is likely to be incremental and when it takes the form of sharper, critical shifts. Written for scholars and graduate students of International Relations, Foreign Policy Analysis, and Role Theory, this book provides an accessible approach to studying strategic change, and will also appeal to analysts seeking to better understand how great powers define and adapt their place in world politics.

Diplomatic Practices

How They Emerge and How They Matter

Iver B. Neumann Fridtjof Nansen Institute, Norway

Diplomacy is the lifeblood of the states system, shaping global interactions and maintaining order. In this book, Iver Neumann delves into the practices that define diplomacy, exploring how they evolve and vary across time and cultures. By combining historical analysis with observational insights, Neumann offers a groundbreaking approach to understanding the dynamic nature of diplomatic practices. From gift-giving to permanent representation, international law, and peacebuilding efforts, Neumann examines the core practices that have shaped diplomacy for centuries.

The Russian Orthodox Church's Wartime Public Diplomacy in Ukraine

Constructing the Russian World

Andis Kudors

Series: Studies in Contemporary Russia

This book reveals how the Russian Orthodox Church (ROC) has systematically transformed religious messaging into a strategic tool of warfare, supporting Russian military objectives while undermining Ukrainian resistance. It introduces an innovative interdisciplinary framework merging faith diplomacy with wartime public diplomacy theory, enhanced by framing analysis. This pioneering approach offers scholars a powerful new lens for examining religious communication during armed conflicts worldwide and provides rare insights into grassroots clerical collaboration with Russian forces.

Cyber Power in a Digital World

The Evolution of Digital Mentality and Cyber Power Perceptions

Bruna Toso de Alcântara , Donavon Johnson Florida International University, USA

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

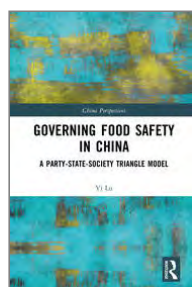

Cyber power is a concept that has gained relevance with geopolitical dynamics reaching cyberspace and the increasing intertwining between the physical and digital. In this regard, this concept has been treated through three theoretical lenses: realism, liberalism, and constructivism. This book explores these questions through a constructivist perspective: How do states' perceptions of cybersecurity shape the form of their power projection? Does that confer a new form of power relations, therefore, cyber power as a phenomenon? To tackle this, the authors utilize a case study approach of three conventional geopolitical European powers; the United Kingdom, France, and Germany.

Governing Food Safety in China

A Party-State-Society Triangle Model

Yi Lu

Series: China Perspectives

This book examines China's food safety co-governance system through the asymmetric party-state-society (PSS) triangle structure, drawing on theoretical insights and sixty-seven interviews conducted between 2018 and 2024. It traces the evolution of this framework from the 2008 melamine scandal to the present. It develops the concept of structured asymmetry, demonstrating how hierarchical authority and functional collaboration can coexist, which challenges the Western collaborative governance theory assumption. The book will appeal to scholars and practitioners of food safety law and policy, Chinese politics and governance, comparative public administration, and regulatory theory.

Peripheral Elites at the Core

Power, Representation, and Central Institutions

Edited by Jean-Baptiste Harguindéguy , Anastassia Obydenkova Uppsala University, Sweden, Victoria Veguilla

This book examines the often-overlooked dynamics of how political actors from peripheral regions engage with central authorities to shape national policymaking. While territorial movements advocating autonomy or independence have been widely studied, this work addresses a critical gap by exploring the complex interactions between regional elites and central political actors and institutions. By intersecting with three subfields of political science—regional studies, the sociology of elites, and ethnic studies—the chapters in this volume provide a thorough analysis of the persistence of subnational characteristics in modern states.

Sub-National Actors in Authoritarian and Illiberal Systems

Reframing Paradiplomacy

Ahmet Cemal Ertürk , Nur Sinem Kourou

Series: Routledge Studies on Paradiplomacy and City Diplomacy

This book explores how cities, regions, and sub-state actors engage in international politics as illiberalism and authoritarianism reshape the global order. Moving beyond the traditional association between paradiplomacy and democratic decentralization, the book investigates how subnational diplomacy operates under political constraint, centralization, and regime pressure. Drawing on diverse case studies from Turkey, Hungary, Taiwan, Iran, the United States, and Venezuela, the book introduces new conceptual tools—most notably competitive-disharmony—to capture the varied ways subnational actors cooperate with, resist, bypass, or reinforce central authority.

The Geopolitics in the Global Compacts

Edited by Nicholas R. Micinski , Camille Lefebvre

This book critically examines how states have leveraged the 2018 UN Global Compacts on Migration and Refugees to advance their geopolitical and strategic interests. Through a detailed analysis, it explores the emerging norm of state responsibility for managing migration while exposing the gaps, contradictions, and silences surrounding key issues such as non-refoulement, internal displacement, and climate migration. More than five years after the adoption of the Global Compacts, the authors provide a thought-provoking reflection on the assumptions, logics, and rhetoric underpinning these agreements and their implementation by states and international organizations.

Transparency and Oversight in Campaign Finance

A Case Study of the Alaska Public Offices Commission

Paul Dauphinais

Series: Routledge Research in American Politics and Governance

For fifty years, the Alaska Public Offices Commission has been responsible for enforcing the state's campaign finance, conflict of interest, and lobbying laws. This book traces APOC's turbulent history and shows how public opinion, court rulings, and repeated citizen-led initiatives kept the agency alive despite ongoing efforts to weaken it. By examining what happens after elections, how laws are implemented, how violators fare, and how voters respond when elected officials attempt to weaken oversight, the book offers a fresh perspective on democratic accountability.

Gaza, Genocide, and Academic Freedom

David Moshman

Series: Routledge Studies in Genocide and Crimes against Humanity

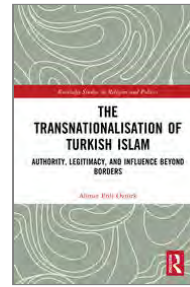

This book analyzes Israeli military actions in Gaza following the Hamas attacks of October 7, 2023, offering a rigorous assessment through the lens of genocide studies. Drawing on established theoretical frameworks, the author demonstrates how these events align with recognized definitions of genocide, challenging readers to confront difficult questions about collective violence and responsibility. The analysis explores how Israeli actions are shaped by historical trauma, particularly the Holocaust, and fears that Palestinian control of the same area would threaten Jewish existence.

The UN's Multidimensional Approach to the Israel–Arab Conflict, 1967–1982

An Architecture for Peace

Diego Salama

Series: Global Institutions

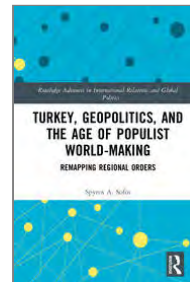

This book examines how the United Nations Secretariat built a coordinated regional peacekeeping architecture across the Israel–Arab conflict between 1967 and 1982, tracing its operational achievements and the structural limits that ultimately constrained them. Drawing on previously classified UN archives, the book offers the first integrated institutional history of four UN operations — UNTSO, UNEF II, UNDOF, and UNIFIL — treated not as isolated deployments but as components of a deliberately managed regional system.

Turkey, Geopolitics, and the Age of Populist World-Making

Remapping Regional Orders

Spyros A. Sofos

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

This book explores Turkey's transformation into an active and influential emerging power under the Justice and Development Party (AKP) and President Recep Tayyip Erdoğan. It argues that populist governance and foreign policy are not separate domains but expressions of a common political logic. Erdoğan's populism does not simply shape Turkey's international engagement; it extends into it, producing a distinct form of populist revisionism that reworks regional orders in line with domestically forged antagonisms.

Against Post-Truth

An Empirical-Theoretical Inquiry into News Media

Matteo De Toffoli

Series: Politics, Media and Political Communication

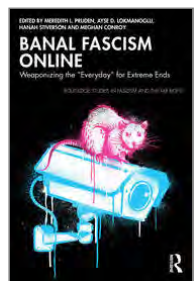

Against Post-Truth: An Empirical-Theoretical Inquiry into News Media delivers a refreshingly critical perspective on the post-truth debate, challenging the naturalized status of this concept as an epochal crisis in contemporary epistemology, media and politics. The book is crafted in a clear and accessible language and will be of interest to scholars and students in media studies, political theory, philosophy and discourse analysis. It equips readers with conceptual tools to critically deconstruct the common post-truth narratives and provides valuable insights for navigating the challenges and anxieties of our time without falling into simplistic or utopian solutions.

Banal Fascism Online

Weaponizing the "Everyday" for Extreme Ends

Edited by Meredith L. Pruden Kennesaw State University, USA, Ayse D. Lokmanoglu Northwestern University, USA, Hanah Stiverson University of Michigan, USA, Meghan Conroy Atlantic Council, Washington DC, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Fascism and the Far Right

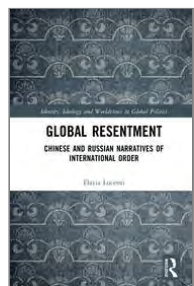

This book offers a novel lens through which to research, conceptualize, and understand fascism and its place in today's political culture. It allows space for its authors to explore fascism as it exists in the digital world, outside the rigid boundaries of historically-recognized fascist states. This will appeal to academics, students, politicians, journalists, and anyone concerned about the precarity of liberal democracy and its potential replacement with, at best, illiberal democracy and, at worst, fascism.

Global Resentment

Chinese and Russian Narratives of International Order

Flavia Lucenti

Series: Identity, Ideology and Worldviews in Global Politics

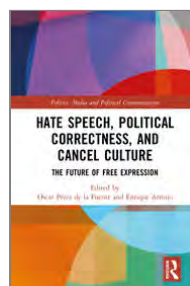

Global Resentment investigates the role of China and Russia in global politics, treating each country as a distinct case study. Its central premise is that both China and Russia have long sought recognition within the Liberal International Order but have perceived themselves as being excluded from the dominant social group, consisting mainly of Western or pro-Western actors. Global Resentment will be of significant interest to scholars and students of International Relations, Chinese Studies, Russian Studies, Social and Political Psychology, as well as to think tank analysts specialising in international politics.

Hate Speech, Political Correctness, and Cancel Culture

The Future of Free Expression

Edited by Oscar Pérez de la Fuente Carlos III University of Madrid, Spain, Enrique Armijo

Series: Politics, Media and Political Communication

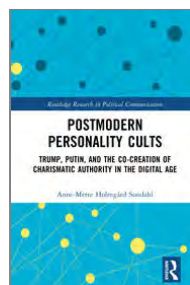

Hate Speech, Political Correctness, and Cancel Culture critically examines the challenges posed by modern discourse in democratic societies. It explores the intersection of hate speech, political correctness, cancel culture, and disinformation, and offers a comparative and multidisciplinary perspective on their ethical, legal, and societal implications. Hate Speech, Political Correctness, and Cancel Culture is a valuable resource for anyone seeking to understand how modern discourse shapes public life in the digital era. It will be of great interest to students and scholars of politics, philosophy and ethics, media and communication studies, and law.

Postmodern Personality Cults

Trump, Putin, and the Co-Creation of Charismatic Authority in the Digital Age

Anne-Mette Holmgård Sundahl

Series: Routledge Research in Political Communication

Postmodern Personality Cults introduces a new conceptual understanding of personality cults for the digital age. Departing from existing literature on the topic, this book foregrounds the crucial role of bottom-up participation in shaping contemporary personality cults. Using Vladimir Putin and Donald Trump as case studies, Sundahl demonstrates how today's leaders exercise far less control over their visual narratives, bridging theories of charismatic authority and the postmodern society to reconceptualize personality cults. This book will be of particular interest to scholars interested in political legitimacy and political communication in the age of social media.

The Market Impact of Wartime Political Rhetoric

Voices of the Russian-Ukrainian War

Maksym Filatov, Edoardo Pagliarini

Series: Politics, Media and Political Communication

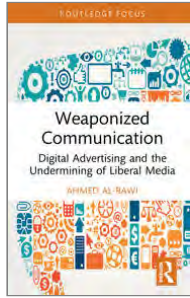

The Market Impact of Wartime Political Rhetoric: Voices of the Russian-Ukrainian War offers a striking new account of how political speeches became an economic force during the first year of the Russian-Ukrainian war. Focusing on 2022, it shows how public addresses by Vladimir Putin and Volodymyr Zelensky influenced energy markets, investor expectations, inflation, and currency stability across a deeply interconnected global economy. The Market Impact of Wartime Political Rhetoric will appeal to students and scholars and readers interested in Europe, North America, international politics, energy security, and the economic effects of war.

Weaponized Communication

Digital Advertising and the Undermining of Liberal News Media

Ahmed Al-Rawi Simon Fraser University, Canada

Series: Routledge Research in Political Communication

This book provides the first systematic empirical study of how liberal mainstream news media are targeted through social media advertising campaigns. Drawing on original materials, Ahmed Al-Rawi examines the weaponization of misinformation discourses, such as “fake news,” disinformation, and fact checking, across Facebook and Google ads. This book combines qualitative and interpretive analysis with a range of digital methods to offer a holistic understanding of this evolving phenomenon. By mapping advertisers’ strategies, audience targeting, and spending patterns, the book reveals the systematic nature of these campaigns and their implications for political communication.

György Lukács and the Marxist Approach to Theory of Law

Origins and Development of Juridical Complex, Language and Interpretation

Vitor Bartoletti Sartori

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

This book rethinks the Marxist critique of law by exploring the late works of Hungarian philosopher György Lukács, arguing that law cannot be fully grasped through rigid legal categories alone but must be examined within the wider context of social reproduction. By engaging critically with major legal theorists like Kelsen, Hart, and Dworkin, Sartori shows how Lukács's philosophy offers a deeper, more flexible framework for understanding legal thought in complex societies. He challenges dominant Marxist approaches, especially the Pachukanian tradition, and highlights the need for a more open-ended framework for understanding law, ideology, and social complexity.

Hegel and MacIntyre

Reason in History

Edited by Michael Lazarus, Caleb Bernacchio, Ahmad Fattah, David Kretz

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

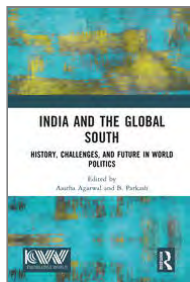

Hegel and MacIntyre: Reason in History brings the work of foremost Anglophone moral philosopher Alasdair MacIntyre into dialogue with G. W. F. Hegel—two rationalist historicists whose affinities and tensions have often been noted, yet never before explored at book-length. The contributions in this collection, by leading Hegel and MacIntyre scholars and critical theorists, examine a wide range of questions about moral life under conditions of late-capitalist modernity. The book will be of interest not only to scholars of MacIntyre and Hegel, but also to all who work in modern moral, social, and political thought, especially Marxism, neo-Aristotelianism, and Thomism.

Intergenerational Survivors of Genocide and Mass Atrocities

Lived Experiences of Knowledge Providers

Edited by Saghar Shahidi-Birjandian, Sarah Seislmeyer-Snyder

Series: Routledge Studies in Genocide and Crimes against Humanity

This unique volume brings together intergenerational survivors of genocide and mass atrocities, who are actively engaged in producing knowledge related to their lived and inherited experiences, to share their stories. Centering survivor positionality as a source of epistemic insight rather than bias, the book examines how intergenerational experiences shape scholarship, pedagogy, advocacy, healing, and atrocity prevention practice. Contributors reflect on the benefits, risks, and ethical tensions of this focal positionality while offering concrete recommendations to reduce harm and strengthen support across academic, humanitarian, and policy domains.

Populism, Demagoguery, and Tyranny

Contemporary Challenges to Constitutional Democracy

Tomás Pacheco-Bethencourt

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

In Populism, Demagoguery, and Tyranny, Tomás Pacheco-Bethencourt examines the political challenges posed by populism to constitutional democracy, with a twofold aim of clarifying its impact and addressing it effectively. He combines conceptual history, history of political thought, political history and political philosophy to help analyze the political impact of populism on constitutional democracies. Pacheco-Bethencourt begins his analysis with ancient Greece's institutional framework, before diving into examples of populist movements in Argentina, Venezuela, Hungary, Poland, France and Spain.

Revisiting Cultural Rights

On the Plausibility and Efficacy of Differentiated Citizenship

Ajay Raina

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

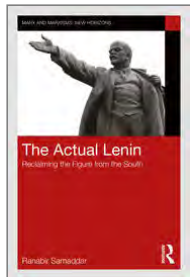

Revisiting Cultural Rights reevaluates the 'consensus' liberal view on minority cultural rights from a new, empirically informed perspective to argue that its justificatory machinery is not very persuasive, and that the normative goals of the view can instead be efficaciously reached from within the classic liberal framework of equal, universal rights. This book argues that these ends are better served by improving cross-cultural interaction and exchange, secular formal-education, 'capability' formation, and policies of 'inductive' civic identity formation.

The Actual Lenin

Reclaiming the Figure from the South

Ranabir Samaddar

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

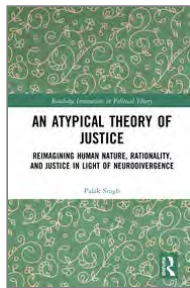

The Actual Lenin is a fresh and accessible reinterpretation of Lenin by placing his ideas alongside the political realities of the Global South. Drawing on clear readings of What Is to Be Done?, The State and Revolution, and key episodes in Southern political history, the book explores how Lenin understood crisis, organisation, and political timing. It demonstrates how thinking and acting within conjuncture offers practical tools for analysing contemporary conflicts across the South, and connects longstanding debates in Marxism with current Global South scholarship to provide an alternative to traditional Lenin studies.

An Atypical Theory of Justice

Reimagining Human Nature, Rationality, and Justice in Light of Neurodivergence

Palak Singh

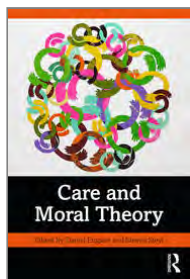

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

Palak Singh confronts these questions head on by exposing the neurotypical biases embedded in liberal theories of justice and proposing a radical alternative: an atypical, neuroplurilistic justice. Through a critical engagement with Rawls, Kant, Nussbaum, and feminist and disability theorists, she reveals how psychopathic instrumentalism, autistic rule-based reasoning, and other atypical cognitive profiles disrupt conventional notions of reciprocity, public reason, and moral personhood. This book bridges political philosophy, cognitive science, and disability studies to offer a groundbreaking and transformative framework.

Care and Moral Theory

Edited by Daniel Engster, Steven Steyl

Drawing together some of the world's leading care theorists, Care and Moral Theory addresses the question: is care ethics a moral theory? Early chapters situate care ethics in relation to other moral theories and highlight its unique methods and aims. Middle chapters offer analytical clarity to key concepts in the moral theory of care. A final set of chapters offer a whole new framework for thinking about care ethics. Despite the diversity of perspectives included in this book, the chapters as a whole are all oriented around the common project of elucidating the characteristics of a moral theory of care.

Contemplative Praxis and Politics

Edited by James K. Rowe University of Victoria, Canada,
Shannon L. Mariotti, Farah Godrej

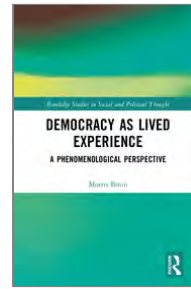

This book is the first collection to systematically map the political implications of contemplative practices of all kinds – Buddhist meditation, yoga, Indigenous ritual and more – with an explicit focus on the political. In addition to making a novel argument about the author's own area of expertise, each chapter includes a literature review that maps existing research and commentary at the intersection of contemplative praxis and applicable terrain of political struggle. Readers will come away with both a broad and deep understanding of emerging themes, new areas of research, and future directions.

Democracy as Lived Experience

A Phenomenological Perspective

Morris Bosin University of Maryland, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

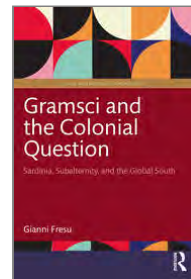

With this book, Morris Bosin offers a phenomenological approach to understanding democracy, not as a static system of institutions, but as a lived experience shaped by perception, participation, and meaning making. Rather than focusing solely on laws and procedures, the book examines how citizens feel freedom, legitimacy, and collective will in everyday contexts and how alienation from these experiences fuels disaffection. Drawing on continental philosophy, Bosin engages thinkers such as Levinas, Merleau-Ponty, Husserl, and Arendt to illuminate the existential dimensions of democratic theory.

Gramsci and the Colonial Question

Sardinia, Subalternity, and the Global South

Gianni Fresu

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

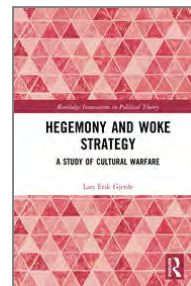

Although Antonio Gramsci is widely known as the theorist of hegemony, his enduring relevance to struggles against colonial oppression across the Global South reveals a deeper, often overlooked dimension of his thought. Through a rigorous engagement with Gramsci's writings, Fresu reexamines key categories of Marxist theory, situating them within the socio-political contradictions of Sardinia and the broader Italian national formation. Gramsci and the Colonial Question provides a fresh and interdisciplinary perspective on Gramsci's legacy, challenging dominant interpretations that marginalize Sardinian history and offering new insights into the conceptual renewal of Marxism.

Hegemony and Woke Strategy

A Study of Cultural Warfare

Lars Erik L. Gjerde

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

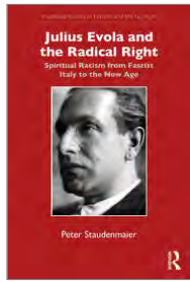

Hegemony and Woke Strategy explores how wokeism functions as a distinct ideological force within the contemporary culture war, challenging liberal and socialist traditions through strategic uses of identity politics. Grounded in Gramscian theory and informed by poststructuralist and Marxist scholarship, Lars Erik Gjerde analyzes how cultural struggle operates as a bid for hegemony. Intended for scholars and advanced students in political theory, cultural studies and sociology, this book will also appeal to researchers interested in ideology, identity politics, and the intersection of culture and power in shaping contemporary political dynamics.

National Role Conceptions and Divergent Behaviours in a Similar Structure

Comparative Role Theory Analysis of Qatar and the United Arab Emirates

Yusuf Bera Topaloğlu

Series: Role Theory and International Relations

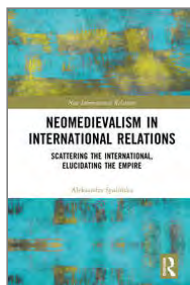

Qatar and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) share historical, political, cultural, and structural similarities. However, they have adopted divergent and often conflicting foreign policies towards Middle Eastern crises and civil wars since the Arab uprisings began in 2011. This book explores why these two non-democratic, small-sized, neighbouring Gulf monarchies, constrained by similar structural factors, pursued divergent and conflicting foreign policies in the civil wars of Yemen, Libya, and Syria from 2011, the onset of the Arab uprisings, to 2021, the Al-Ula Agreement.

Neomedievalism in International Relations

Scattering the International, Elucidating the Empire

Aleksandra Spalińska

Series: New International Relations

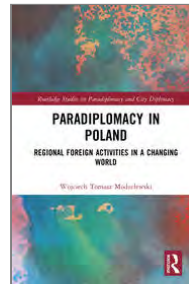

This book explores the evolution of neomedievalism and its transformative role in rethinking world politics. Drawing on Hedley Bull's concept of a post-state-centric world, the book examines how neomedievalism, with its metaphorical reference to the Middle Ages, offers a fresh lens through which to understand the fragmentation of state authority, the rise of non-state actors, and the impacts of globalization and technology. The book investigates neomedievalism in International Relations (IR) theory, arguing that it illuminates the process of "scattering the international"—the breakdown of state-centric world politics and the decentralization of political power.

Paradiplomacy in Poland

Regional Foreign Activities in a Changing World

Wojciech Tomasz Modzelewski

Series: Routledge Studies in Paradiplomacy and City Diplomacy

This book offers the first comprehensive English-language analysis of regional paradiplomacy in Poland and engages with the latest research on the phenomenon of paradiplomacy both globally and in Poland. As regions increasingly engage in international cooperation beyond traditional state diplomacy, this study provides essential insights into how voivodeships, the primary administrative-territorial unit in Poland, navigate global partnerships and pursue autonomous foreign policy objectives. Drawing on extensive research across all 16 Polish regions, the author examines both the theoretical foundations and practical manifestations of regional paradiplomacy.

Subversive Negri

From the Refusal of Work to the Multitude

Roberto Nigro

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

The first English-language introduction to the entire work of world-renowned theorist and activist Antonio Negri, this book reconstructs his philosophy and critically discusses the existence of the revolutionary power of the multitude. Roberto Nigro demonstrates that Negri's insistence on the ontological dimension counters the poverty of the present, which is understood as the impossibility of finding practical answers to the question of revolutionary subjectivity. Authoritative, informative and engaging, Subversive Negri will be essential reading for both the academy and politically engaged audience of non-specialist readers.

The Populist Tradition

A Critical-Historic Approach

Edited by Déborah Cohen, Federico Tarragoni

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

The Populist Tradition: A Critical-Historic Approach offers a new approach to studying "populism", treating it not as a negative, but as a concept that demands popular participation in democracy, whether self-organised or representative. Leading specialists in democratic populism from around the world and across disciplines come together to reconnect present-day populism with its past to grasp the anti-democratic roots of the current critique of populism to better redefine it. This crucial book is recommended for scholars in history, political sciences and sociology, as well as anyone interested in revisiting populism's historical trajectories and socio-political dynamics.

The Biopolitical Body of Capital

From Labour Value to Labour Legislation

Jacques Bidet University of Paris Nanterre, France

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

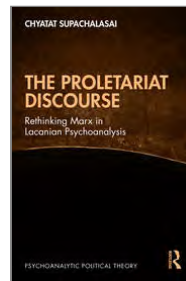

Originally published in French, this English edition translated by Jacques Bidet offers a rigorous and interdisciplinary reading of Capital, challenging dominant mainstream interpretations that overlook Marx's critique of capitalist society. Centering on the chapter "The Working Day," the book reveals Marx's analysis of labor exploitation as a biopolitical struggle between capital and living labor. Drawing on Foucault's concept of biopolitics, it reframes wage labor as a conflict over bodily autonomy, social reproduction, and the limits of capitalist control.

The Proletariat Discourse

Rethinking Marx in Lacanian Psychoanalysis

Chyatat Supachalasai

Series: Psychoanalytic Political Theory

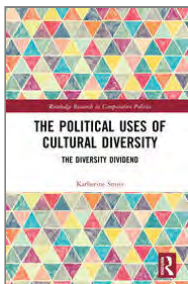

This book offers a reinterpretation of Marx's concept of the proletariat through a Lacanian lens, drawing on the works of Karl Marx and Jacques Lacan, and argues that Lacan's notion of capitalist discourse reveals an inherent "non-relationship" aspect within this discourse, indicating the position of proletariat discourse. The Proletariat Discourse will be of great interest to scholars and readers interested in Lacanian-Marxist partnership, psychoanalysis, political thought, Lacanian studies, and critical theory.

Virtual Worlds, Real Politics

Ethical Competencies for the Next Digital Age

Liza Ireni-Saban, Francesca Consolaro

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

While technological advancements dominate much of the conversation on virtual platforms and the political power that ensues, there remains a crucial gap in knowledge when addressing fundamental questions about the distribution of power, the formation of political communities, and the application of ethical principles in these digital contexts. This book examines how political theory engages with the evolving moral landscapes shaped by digital environments, while providing a comprehensive analysis of how political and ethical theories can be applied within the simulated ecosystems to promote just governance, responsible citizenship, and meaningful civic participation.

Power and Resistance in Global Artificial Intelligence Governance

Algorithmic Colonialism

Zhiyi Liu

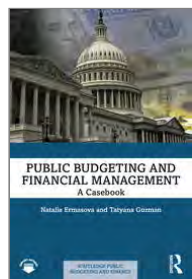

This book examines how artificial intelligence is reshaping global power dynamics. Through 'algorithmic colonialism'—the extraction of data, labour, and natural resources from the Global South to fuel Western technological dominance, it reveals how AI systems exacerbate the inequalities between wealthy nations and the developing world. It highlights innovative forms of resistance, such as India's public digital infrastructure and Africa's linguistic AI initiatives, and advocates "planetary solidarity" as an alternative framework. It is essential reading for anyone seeking to understand the role of AI in 21st-century global inequality and the struggle for technological sovereignty.

Reason, Crisis, and Europe

Conceptual and Historical Perspectives

Edited by Marco Piasentier , Panu-Matti Pöykkö

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

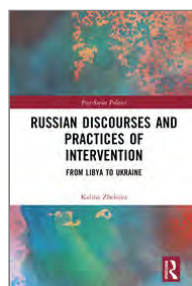

This volume examines the intertwined meanings of reason, crisis, and Europe against the backdrop of acute political, ethical, and geopolitical instability. Eschewing any singular diagnosis or overarching interpretive frame, it assembles a range of disciplinary, methodological, and normative approaches in productive tension. Through analyses of war and unrest, democratic backsliding, persistent colonial legacies, neoliberal forms of governance, and divergent philosophical lineages, the volume invites readers to reassess the foundations, limits, and possible futures of European thought and institutional life.

Russian Discourses and Practices of Intervention

From Libya to Ukraine

Kalina Zhekova

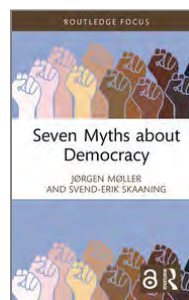

Series: Post-Soviet Politics

This book investigates Russian approaches to military intervention, war and armed conflict in relation to the wars in Libya, Syria, and Ukraine. It provides a comprehensive examination of Russian resistance to, and initiation of armed interventions as enabled by the collective, rather than Kremlin-centric, production of danger and Otherness. It explores the discursive interactions between the Parliament, the Presidency, and the government to highlight the social processes and mechanisms that made various forms of intervention and violent military actions conceivable, imaginable, and ultimately possible over time.

From Algorithms to Evidence

Using GenAI in Evaluation Practice

Edited by Kerry Bruce, Valentine J Ghandi, Steffen Bohni Nielsen

Series: Comparative Policy Evaluation

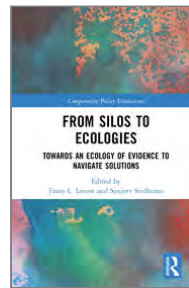

From Algorithms to Evidence: Using GenAI in Evaluation Practice offers a timely, practice-grounded guide for evaluators and development professionals navigating the fast-moving world of generative AI. Building on the foundations laid in Artificial Intelligence and Evaluation (2025), this volume moves decisively from theory to application. It documents how evaluators across the globe are already using GenAI in real projects, showing not only what worked, but also what failed, why, and under what conditions. The result is a clear, practitioner-centered resource that cuts through hype and provides grounded, real-world insight.

From Silos to Ecologies

Towards an Ecology of Evidence to Navigate Solutions

Edited by Sanjeev Sridharan, Frans L. Leeuw

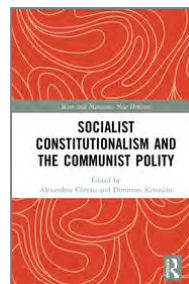

Series: Comparative Policy Evaluation

From Silos to Ecologies offers a new way to understand how knowledge is generated, interpreted, and used to address today's most complex social challenges. It introduces the concept with clarity and purpose, showing why single studies, narrow methods, or rigid evaluation systems are no longer sufficient for problems shaped by complexity, uncertainty, and rapid change. Through contributions from leading scholars and practitioners, the volume demonstrates how different forms of evidence can work together to support better decisions in areas such as maternal health, brain health, poverty reduction, and community-led innovation.

Socialist Constitutionalism and the Communist Polity

Edited by Alexandros Chrysis, Dimitrios Kivotidis

Series: Marx and Marxisms: New Horizons

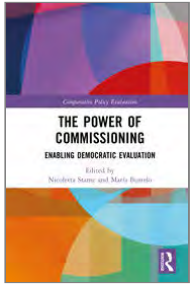

This collection of essays provides the first collaborative intervention to ongoing debates about law and politics under capitalism from an explicitly socialist constitutionalist perspective. Drawing inspiration from socialist thinkers and historical attempts to build socialism, contributors explain the relevance of socialist conceptions of democracy and rights for contemporary struggles for social emancipation. Consolidating Marxist approaches to public law and constitutional theory, this book offers a rigorous contribution to the elaboration of Marxist theory and a re-examination of foundational constitutional concepts, questions, and debates.

Analyzing American Democracy

Politics and Political Science

Jon R. Bond , Lydia M. Andrade , José D. Villalobos

The sixth edition of Analyzing American Democracy, like its predecessors, seeks not only to educate students about American government and politics, but also to teach two general lessons. First, as citizens of the world, as individuals pursuing an education, a career, and a fulfilling life, students have a lot of good, self-interested reasons to know how politics and government affects their lives. Second, if they want to know more about politics, approaching it scientifically is the most systematic and useful way to do so, and to prepare them for democratic citizenship regardless of the career they choose.

Anatomy of Illegal Power

Violence, Organized Crime and Corruption in Latin America

Lucía Dammert

This book explores how illicit markets shape politics and society across Latin America. Moving beyond crime statistics, it reframes crime as a form of power, exposing the hidden structures that link organized crime to fragile institutions, entrenched corruption, and political disaffection. With a regional lens enriched by case studies from Brazil, El Salvador, Central America, and Chile, the book demonstrates how illicit economies regulate territory, shape politics, and erode democracy. This is essential reading for students and scholars in politics, sociology, criminology, and Latin American studies, as well as professionals in policy, journalism, and international organizations.

Campaigns and Elections

Players and Processes

Stephen K. Medvic

Stephen K. Medvic's Campaigns and Elections is a comprehensive yet compact core text that addresses two distinct but related aspects of American electoral democracy: the processes that constitute campaigns and elections, and the players who are involved. In addition to balanced coverage of process and actors, it gives equal billing to both campaigns and elections and covers contests for legislative and executive positions at the national, state, and local levels, including issue-oriented campaigns of note. The book concludes with a big-picture assessment of campaign ethics and implications of the "permanent campaign."

Capitalism, Climate Change, and the Food System in Latin America

Processed Diet

José Manuel Leal García

Series: Transforming Environmental Politics and Policy

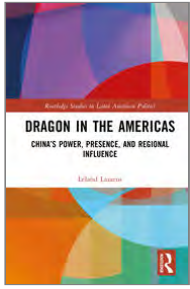

Capitalism, Climate Change, and the Food System in Latin America illustrates the relationship between climate change politics and food systems through a critical International Political Economy perspective. Economic globalization has changed our daily habits. Specifically, it has significantly influenced our food and dietary habits. Capitalism, Climate Change, and the Food System in Latin America will be of great interest to students and scholars of environmental politics, international relations, human geography, food studies, and Latin America, as well as to policymakers in the fields of environmental, economic, and food policy.

Dragon in the Americas

China's Power, Presence, and Regional Influence

Leland Lazarus

Series: Routledge Studies in Latin American Politics

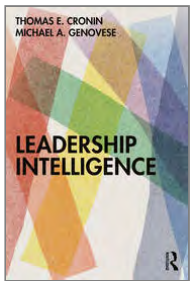

Dragon in the Americas offers a sweeping, on-the-ground analysis of how China is reshaping Latin America and the Caribbean across trade, technology, security, and geopolitics—revealing growing strategic competition in the Western Hemisphere. Drawing on original research, fieldwork, and policy experience, the book examines China's effort to establish "strategic support points" via ports and the Panama Canal, digital infrastructure, space cooperation, critical minerals and security partnerships.

Memoryscapes of Disappearance in Mexico

Danielle House

Series: Interventions

This book argues for a broadening of the ways memory is conceptualised and practiced. Drawing on extensive fieldwork with artists, relatives, activists, and academics who are engaging in memory practices to fight for justice and search for Mexico's disappeared, it takes a rich empirical approach to explore memory work in depth. Disappearance in its ambiguity is always present, never in the past, and so disrupts many assumptions about how and when to memorialise traumatic events, and in Mexico disappearance is ongoing, further challenging assumptions of role of memory work and past atrocity.

Narratives, Technology, and the Shaping of US–China Relations

Wired Rivals

Karine Pontbriand

Series: Routledge Studies on the Asia-Pacific Region

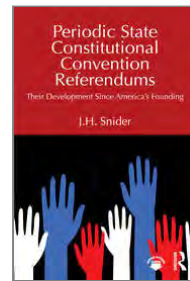

Pontbriand examines how political leaders have shaped America's most significant bilateral relationship through strategic narratives. Focusing on the Obama and Trump administrations, this book explores how US leaders perceived and narrated the relationship between information technology and interdependence, and how these narratives influenced foreign policy shifts and America's evolving relations with China. By blending international relations theory with narrative analysis, the book offers a deeper insight into how language and storytelling shape foreign policy decisions.

Periodic State Constitutional Convention Referendums

Their Development Since America's Founding

J.H. Snider

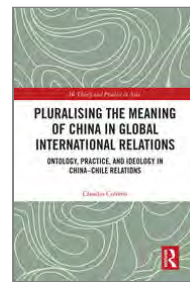

Vital reading for all politics students, this book teaches the reader both the history of the Periodic Constitutional Convention Referendum and provides modern day case studies to enable you to come to your own conclusions on the necessity of the Periodic Constitutional Convention Referendum. The first half of this book covers PCCR's democratic function and its structural-legal, intellectual, and political history. The second half of the book provides contemporary case studies of PCCR referendums in three states: Maryland, Alaska, and Rhode Island. An essential read for students and scholars of state and federal politics.

Pluralising the Meaning of China in Global International Relations

Ontology, Practice, and Ideology in China–Chile Relations

Claudio Coloma

Series: IR Theory and Practice in Asia

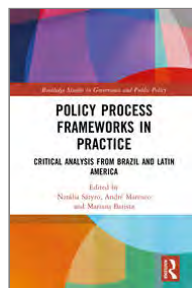

Coloma examines the bilateral relationship between China and Chile over the past decades and explore an approach that accounts for the plurality of political and ideological dimensions in international relations, particularly concerning non-Western and non-European countries. The book develops three key claims. Firstly, two socialist countries can arrive at antagonistic understandings of socialism and yet articulate ideological convergences around other elements. Secondly, a communist country can obscure its political divergence from an anti-communist regime by redefining its ideological horizon.

Policy Process Frameworks in Practice

Critical Analysis from Brazil and Latin America

Edited by Natália Sátyro, André Marenco, Mariana Batista

Series: Routledge Studies in Governance and Public Policy

Policy Process Frameworks in Practice offers a fresh and critical look at the main frameworks used to study policy processes, with a unique focus on their application in Brazil and Latin America. By shifting attention to the Global South, the book challenges the idea that frameworks developed in the Northern Hemisphere are only applied elsewhere, showing instead how they are reshaped and enriched in new contexts. Each chapter follows a clear and accessible structure: a concise overview of the framework, a systematic review of its reception in Brazilian and Latin American scholarship, and a critical discussion of whether and how causal explanations are employed.

Taiwan and Cross-Strait Relations in an Era of Great Power Rivalry

Navigating Rising Tensions and Strategic Ambiguity

Dongtao Qi National University of Singapore, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

Qi provides a comprehensive exploration of the complex and evolving dynamics in and between Taiwan, China, and the United States from 2016 to 2024. Through three unique analytical perspectives, these chapters delve into 23 significant political, economic, and social developments that have shaped the Taiwan issue. It provides a broad spectrum of political, economic, and social developments, extending beyond the first term of Tsai Ing-wen's administration and provides valuable frameworks that extend beyond the Taiwan context, applicable to state-society relations in other countries and other geopolitical conflicts.

Testing Democracy in the Donald Trump Era

Edited by Paweł Laidler, Jared Sonnicksen, Maciej Turek

Series: Routledge Research in American Politics and Governance

This volume examines the state of American democracy during the "Donald Trump Era," spanning 2015 to 2025. Edited by leading scholars, this book brings together contributors from political science, law, sociology, and media studies to place these upheavals in sharp historical perspective. Together they draw comparisons to past democratic crises such as the Civil War, Watergate, and the New Deal, while offering interdisciplinary insights into polarization, populism, and democratic resilience. This book offers scholars a comprehensive interdisciplinary analysis of a pivotal phase in U.S. politics, while giving students clear, accessible explanations of complex issues.

The Endgame Election?

European Views on the United States Elections of 2024

Edited by Maciej Turek, Philipp Adorf

Series: Routledge Research in American Politics and Governance

The Endgame Election? examines whether the 2024 U.S. presidential election marks a decisive turning point in American democracy by analyzing the contest and its broader political context from the perspective of European scholars. This volume examines how Donald Trump's return to power unfolded against the backdrop of democratic backsliding, institutional fragility, and shifting electoral coalitions. It analyzes the internal transformations of the Democratic and Republican parties, the role of media ecosystems and misinformation, the dynamics of voter suppression and the Electoral College, and the growing openness to executive aggrandizement within parts of the Republican Party.

US Strategic Narratives of China's Belt and Road Initiative

Narrative Contestation in the Era of Returning Great Power Rivalry

Shihui Yin

Series: Routledge Studies in US Foreign Policy

China's rapid (re)ascendancy as a global power, fuelled by its Belt and Road Initiative (BRI), has become arguably the most significant challenge to United States dominance, reshaping international relations and sparking debates over the future of the global order. This book examines how the US has received and strategically constructed narratives around China's BRI to counter its influence. Offering a thorough analysis of US narratives and policies, it explores economic, security, technological, and political dimensions.
