Anthropology Reconsidered

Science, Social Organization, Epistemology

Murray J. Leaf

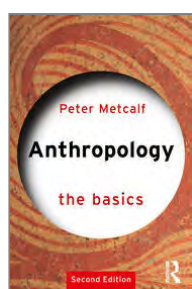

Anthropology Reconsidered argues that anthropology can and should be considered a genuine science of humanity. The work traces the evolution of anthropological thought from its 18th-century origins through contemporary debates, analyzing how competing epistemological traditions have shaped theoretical approaches to social organization and kinship studies. The primary audience includes student and professional anthropologists, particularly ethnologists, along with historians of ethnology, social psychologists, sociologists, philosophers of science, and intellectual historians, written to be accessible while maintaining scholarly rigor and international relevance.

2ND EDITION

Anthropology: The Basics

Peter Metcalf

Series: The Basics

The ultimate guide for the student encountering anthropology for the first time, Anthropology: The Basics is a student-friendly text that explains and explores key anthropological concepts including: what is anthropology? how can we distinguish cultural differences from physical ones? what is culture and how do anthropologists study it? what are the key theories and approaches used today? How has the discipline changed over time? New to this edition are a reframing of gender and feminist theory, discussions of queer anthropology, as well as an entirely new chapter on decolonizing anthropology.

Anything but Orthodox

Anthropological Observations of Islam in the 21st Century

Edited by Jack David Eller Woxsen University, India

Series: Anthropology of Now

The book is a study of the dynamic, multi-faceted, and even unorthodox things that are happening within Muslim-majority societies. The volume should be of interest to scholars and students of Islam (and other religions), as well as general readers, who want to see beyond the stereotypes of Islam and appreciate today's Muslims as makers of their own, often unorthodox, cultural realities.

Behind the Scenes of EU Projects

Gregor Cerinšek

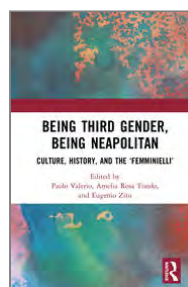

This book offers a novel anthropological account of how European Union's research, development, and innovation projects are imagined, enacted, and experienced. In contrast to the majority of existing literature, which focuses on management techniques, performance metrics, or policy frameworks, this book brings into focus the overlooked everyday realities of project life: its unwritten rules, social rituals, symbolic capital, and linguistic choreography. This book contributes to contemporary debates in anthropology, critical policy analysis, and higher education studies by offering not only critique but also a deeply reflexive tool for scholars, students, and practitioners.

Being Third Gender, Being Neapolitan

Culture, History, and the 'Femminielli'

Edited by Paolo Valerio, Amelia Rosa Tundo, Eugenio Zito

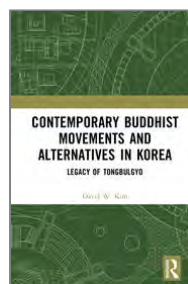

This book introduces the Neapolitan 'femminielli', their customs and practices through essays originally published in Italian and newly translated into English. Contributors explore different facets of this human experience and demonstrate its extreme complexity across historical, socio-cultural, literary, iconographic, and artistic dimensions. Their efforts show the femminielli to be a very articulated and at the same time fluid reality, multifaceted and dynamic, in relation to its contextual dimensions. Scholars and students of Cultural Anthropology, Psychology, Gender Studies, History, Performance, and Literature will all find something engaging and timely in this collection.

Contemporary Buddhist Movements and Alternatives in Korea

Legacy of Tongbulgyo

David W. Kim

This book provides a comprehensive exploration of the history and practices of native Buddhist movements in contemporary Korea. It begins with a historical emergence of Korean Buddhism, followed by the colonial transmission of Japanese Buddhism in East Asia. This work will be an essential resource for scholars and students of Buddhist Studies, Korean Studies, Anthropology, Sociology, Cultural Studies, Religious Studies, and Political Science. It will also appeal to policymakers, religious practitioners, and general readers interested in Asian spirituality, cultural identity, and the interplay between tradition and modernity.

Ecology, Space, and Identity in the Eurasian Region

Between the Local and the Global

Edited by Lili Di Puppo, Arnab Roy Chowdhury

Series: Rethinking Globalizations

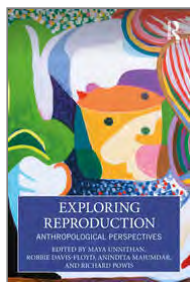

The chapters in this volume examine grassroots responses to environmental disruptions caused by modernizing legacies and ongoing extractive practices. It is demonstrated that ways of relating to the natural environment and space in the Eurasian region are deeply intertwined with questions of identity, which, in turn, reshape social life and communities' political engagement with the state. The transformative role of ecology, space, and identity in reshaping the social and political arenas in these regions is tracked, offering insights into the complex interplay between modernization, environmental change, and human agency.

Exploring Reproduction

Anthropological Perspectives

Edited by Maya Unnithan, Robbie Davis-Floyd Rice, Anindita Majumdar, Richard Powis

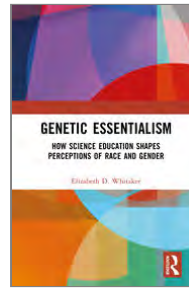

Exploring Reproduction: Anthropological Perspectives introduces students to the anthropology of reproduction, examining how human reproduction is shaped by cultural, historical, and political forces. This textbook draws on foundational anthropological concepts—like personhood, stratified reproduction, and biopolitics—and critically explores how reproduction intersects with gender, sexuality, kinship, and power. It is ideal for advanced undergraduate and graduate students in anthropology, gender studies, public health, and related fields exploring reproduction, identity, and power.

Genetic Essentialism

How Science Education Shapes Perceptions of Race and Gender

Elizabeth D. Whitaker California Polytechnic State University, USA

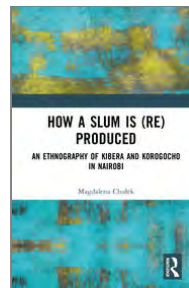

The book's first chapter examines genetic essentialism's key features, current manifestations and impacts, and historical precedents. The middle chapters analyze how science textbooks and curricula enable and may amplify essentialist reasoning through simplified explanations of genetics, reproductive biology, and human evolution. These chapters build a more accurate view through research in fields including anthropology, biology, education, history of science, psychology, and sociology. The overall aim is to spotlight genetic essentialism in instructional resources and refute it through evidence and education.

How a Slum is (Re)Produced

An Ethnography of Kibera and Korogocho in Nairobi

Magdalena Chulek

How a Slum is (Re)Produced: An Ethnography of Kibera and Korogocho in Nairobi offers an in-depth ethnographic analysis of how slums are produced and reproduced as physical, symbolic, and socio-political formations. Based on twenty months of immersive fieldwork conducted between 2010 and 2015 in two of Nairobi's largest informal settlements, the book explores slums not as static spaces of deprivation but as dynamic, relational environments shaped by history, discourse, infrastructure, and everyday practices. Combining rich ethnographic description with conceptual clarity, the book contributes to debates in urban anthropology, African studies, and development research.

Indigenous Literatures of Australia and India

A Trans-Indigenous Perspective

Priyanka Shivadas

Series: Routledge Research in Transnational Indigenous Perspectives

Indigenous Literatures of Australia and India: A Trans-Indigenous Perspective follows the "trans-Indigenous" turn in Indigenous literary studies, which encourages connections between texts from diverse Indigenous contexts. It juxtaposes Indigenous Australian literature situated in an Anglophone, white settler-nation in the hemispheric south and Adivasi/tribal literature from India, a non-Anglophone, postcolonial nation-state in the Global South. This book is recommended on university courses which center Indigenous literatures, comparative methodologies, and decolonization of the literary canon, and it may serve as a notable reference to researchers in these areas.

Kits for Digital Methods

Doing Sociotechnical Research

Edited by Angela K. VandenBroek, Nicole Taylor Texas State University

Kits for Digital Methods: Doing Sociotechnical Research is a guide to innovating research methods for a world where digital technologies permeate everyday life and research. Drawing on the expertise of leading sociotechnical researchers, it reimagines the "kit" not as a fixed set of tools or solutions, but as a flexible, transparent, and collaborative framework for methodological experimentation. These kits are sandboxes for experimenting, playing, and reflecting on the ethics and possibilities of digital research.

Linguistic Reconstruction and Historical Ecology in the North Pacific Rim

Edited by Martine Robbeets, Martijn Knapen

Series: New Frontiers in Historical Ecology

Linguistic Reconstruction and Historical Ecology in the North Pacific Rim explores human-environmental interactions in the Northern Pacific Rim over the last 10,000 years. It introduces students and researchers to linguistic methods for reconstructing how humans have managed and modified landscapes over millennia. The chapters cover a variety of temporal and geographical ranges, including the coastal areas on both sides of the Pacific from Neolithic to medieval times. This volume is ideal for advanced students and researchers in archaeology, anthropology, genetics, ecology, and geography.

Polygamy: The Basics

Bruce Whitehouse, William Jankowiak

Series: The Basics

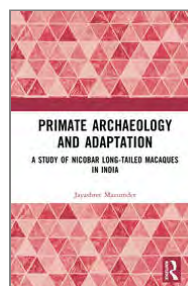

Polygamy: The Basics is an accessible and engaging introduction to the kinship structure known as plural marriage or polygamy. Tailored for general readers and non-specialists, this book distills research findings from evolutionary anthropology, history, economics, political science, and cultural anthropology to survey polygamy's place in human cultural, economic, and demographic developments from prehistory to the present. Drawing on global case studies, it endeavors to help readers aside their own cultural prisms and preconceived notions in order to examine plural marriage in its proper complexity.

Primate Archaeology and Adaptation

A Study of Nicobar Long-tailed Macaques in India

Jayashree Mazumder

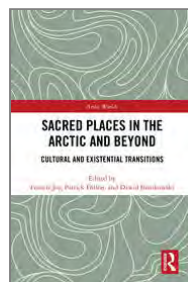

This book offers an interdisciplinary examination of Nicobar long-tailed macaques, situating their tool use, social behavior and ecological flexibility within deep evolutionary time and contemporary conservation challenges. It documents the ecology, social organization, and behavioral repertoire of long-tailed macaques, including foraging strategies, food sharing, reproductive dynamics, exploratory behavior, and diverse forms of object manipulation. It presents detailed accounts of tool-related behaviors, such as leaf "glove" use, substrate selection for pounding, and the innovative use of anthropogenic materials, while carefully distinguishing between tool use and broader object use.

Sacred Places in the Arctic and Beyond

Cultural and Existential Transitions

Edited by Francis Joy, Patrick Dillon, Dawid Bunikowski

Series: Arctic Worlds

Sacred Places in the Arctic and Beyond brings together indigenous and non-indigenous scholars, rightsholders, and practitioners to explore the status and management of sacred places, which are important as both tangible and intangible cultural heritage. They address the problem of how Western-orientated discourses and organisational structures frame legislation about, and management of, sacred places in ways which are seldom compatible with how Indigenous people understand these places and engage with them. Major themes from the case studies are integrated with ideas from cultural ecology and legal pluralism into a framework to inform future policy.

Swedish Protestant Missionaries and Social Reordering in King Leopold's Congo

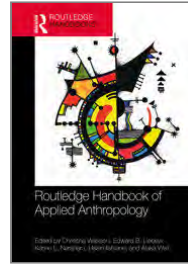

Simon Larsson

This book offers a historical anthropological study of Swedish Protestant missionaries in the Congo Free State during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. It examines how a Swedish mission society, operating under King Leopold II's brutal colonial regime, attempted to reshape Congolese society by transplanting Western Christian ideals into the local Kikongo-speaking context. The book will be relevant to scholars with an interest in anthropology, history, religious studies, and African studies.

The Routledge Handbook of Applied Anthropology

Edited by Christina Wasson, Edward B. Liebow, Karine L. Narahara, Hsain Ilahiane, Alaka Wali

Series: Routledge Anthropology Handbooks

This handbook provides a comprehensive overview of applied anthropology, offering a global portrait of key problem sets, methods, and materials that anthropologists use when working in business, government, and non-governmental organizational settings. Spanning places from Peru and Morocco to North America, the book highlights how anthropologists everywhere blend theory and practice to confront climate disruption, health inequities, cultural loss, forced migration, technological transformation, and more. Designed for students, educators, practitioners, and more, the handbook illuminates wide-ranging career pathways in nonprofits, business, government, and community-based contexts.

Testing Democracy

How Alternative for Germany Crafted a Democratic Identity

April L. Reber

Series: Anthropology of Now

This book examines Germany's political party, Alternative for Germany (AfD), particularly how they test assumptions about democracy and redefine its norms. Through extensive ethnographic research with AfD members, this book reveals three methods AfD members employed: disruption of memory politics, information and narrative control, and provocative performance strategies. Ultimately, it demonstrates how seemingly mundane techniques, like words, songs, performances, and infographics, can drastically redefine democratic norms and policy. Scholars, students, and general readers across the social sciences will find this book an invaluable resource in understanding contemporary politics

The Routledge Handbook of Forensic Anthropology

Edited by Nicholas V. Passalacqua, Marin A. Pilloud

Series: Routledge Anthropology Handbooks

The Routledge Handbook of Forensic Anthropology is the most definitive and comprehensive overview of forensic anthropology to date. It brings together scholars and practitioners from across the social sciences, life sciences, and medical and legal professions to establish emerging methods, highlight key concepts and ideas, and outline an agenda for research and practice for the next decade. This is a crucial reference for scholars, upper-level students, and practitioners in forensic anthropology and related disciplines associated across the social sciences, life sciences, health sciences, forensic sciences, and legal professions.

The Lullaby's Outline

Anthropology of a (Not Quite) Universal Practice

Stéphane Aubinet

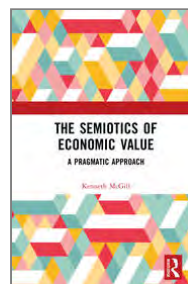

This book offers an anthropological exploration of the lullaby, a type of music found in nearly all human societies. The chapters review diverse ethnographic cases, from bedtime routines in Western societies to historical and Indigenous practices. Starting from four European traditions (the Irish suantraí, the Georgian iavnana, the Ancient Roman nenia, and the Sámi dovdna), the study delves into themes of power, spirituality, death, magic, technologies, and Indigenous ontologies, which echo across diverse cultural contexts without being quite universal. It will be of interest to scholars of anthropology, music, folklore, and beyond.

The Semiotics of Economic Value

A Pragmatic Approach

Kenneth McGill

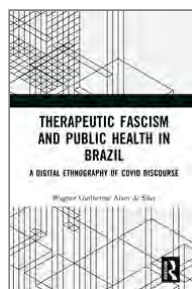

This book describes economic value as a representational phenomenon and considers what is involved when people represent value to themselves and to others. It provides an original and thorough account of value from a pragmatic and interactionist perspective. Offering some innovative tools for theorizing economic value in a new era, this volume will be of interest to anthropologists, linguists and other scholars concerned with language, semiotics, and political economy.

Therapeutic Fascism and Public Health in Brazil

A Digital Ethnography of COVID Discourse

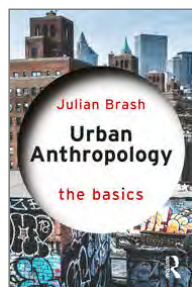

Wagner Guilherme Alves da Silva

This book examines how unproven medical treatments became central to political, moral, and social life during the COVID-19 pandemic in Brazil. It develops the concept of therapeutic moral authoritarianism to explain how health practices were mobilized as forms of agency, belonging, and political expression in contexts of crisis and uncertainty. The book will appeal to scholars and students in anthropology, political geography, science and technology studies, and public health, as well as to readers interested in misinformation, populism, and the social life of medicine in times of crisis.

Urban Anthropology: The Basics

Julian Brash

Series: The Basics

This book is a clearly and accessibly written short guide to the contemporary state of urban anthropology. It outlines what urban anthropologists study, how they do so, and what they have learned about urbanization and urbanism in the past and present in a way that makes sense to readers new to the field. Accompanying the main text are shaded boxes describing key works and key concepts related to the central points of each chapter. Each chapter ends with a bibliography. This text is essential reading for students interested in cities, urban life, the built environment, and social and political dynamics.

Why Anthropology Needs the Global South

Edited by Carla Guerrón Montero, Dan Podjed

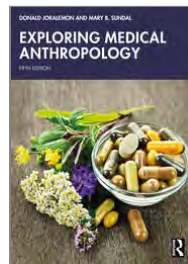

What would anthropology look like if the South were our North? This book turns the map upside down and calls for transforming anthropology from a singular to a plural perspective, which recognizes the Global South as a site of original theory and research rather than merely a source of information. The authors in this book offer fresh and accessible reflections on their anthropological journeys in the Global South, North, and the worlds in between. This is an essential read for anthropology students, professionals and teachers, as well as for anyone seeking a compass for navigating the contemporary world.

5TH EDITION

Exploring Medical Anthropology

Donald Joralemon, Mary B. Sundal

Now in its fifth edition, Exploring Medical Anthropology provides a concise and engaging introduction to medical anthropology. It presents competing theoretical perspectives in a balanced fashion, highlighting points of conflict and convergence. Concrete examples and the authors' personal research experiences are utilized to explain some of the discipline's most important insights, such as that biology and culture matter equally in the human experience of disease and that medical anthropology can help to alleviate human suffering.

Migrant Writing in Sweden

Diversifying from Within

Helena Wulff

This book offers a unique and accessible study of migrant writing in the Swedish context. Sweden used to be renowned for its welcoming migration policy. This changed abruptly with the migration crisis in 2015 when refugees arrived in big numbers. An anti-immigration atmosphere grew stronger, supported by an expanding right-wing party. Yet to some Swedes, experiences of exclusion, even racism, were nothing new. Ultimately, the book is about the impact of literature on society. It will be of particular interest to scholars and students in anthropology, sociology, comparative literature, migration studies and beyond.

America and the Birth of Global Aid

Luke Fletcher

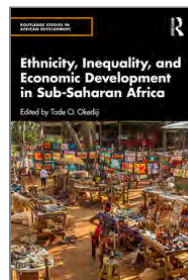

Series: Routledge Explorations in Development Studies

This book investigates the birth and early evolution of the international aid regime in the 1940s and 1950s, considering how America established a postwar economic order in which aid was balanced against the establishment of the IMF as an instrument of economic discipline. The in-depth analysis in this book will be of interest to historians and researchers of international relations, political economy, and global development, but it also has much to teach us about today's global order.

Ethnicity, Inequality, and Economic Development in Sub-Saharan Africa

Edited by Tade O. Okediji University of Minnesota Twin-Cities, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in African Development

This book uses a multidisciplinary approach to explore the links between ethnicity, inequality, and economic development in Sub-Saharan Africa. The book shows how ethnic identity influences all aspects of life in African societies, defining access to political institutions and economic resources, resulting in horizontal or structural inequalities. It assesses the economic, cultural, legal, and sociological connections among ethnicity, inequality, and economic development in Sub-Saharan Africa. A distinctive contribution to development literature, this book will interest students and scholars of Economics, Geography, Anthropology, Political Science, and Development and African Studies.

Border Heritage

Memory, Preservation, Geopolitics

Victor Konrad

Series: Routledge Borderlands Studies

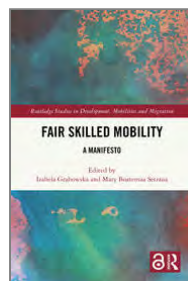

This book uncovers the rich heritage of borderlands. At the border, people exist in-between, whether they live their lives at the near boundaries, or whether they are just passing through, as travellers or tourists. The heritage of these spaces is a vast collection of remnants and reminiscences, defined by memory, preservation, and geopolitics at the margins. It is at once a heritage of borders, and the bordering of heritage. Bringing together a wide range of spatial and temporal approaches to border heritage, this book will be perfect for researchers and students of border and heritage studies, as well as professionals specialising in heritage management or tourism.

Fair Skilled Mobility

A Manifesto

Edited by Izabela Grabowska , Mary Boatemaa Setrana University of Ghana, Ghana

Series: Routledge Studies in Development, Mobilities and Migration

This book sets out a new approach to the global flow of skilled migration, based on ethical, fair, balanced and sustainable frameworks. Not focusing on human capital loss and 'brain drain', the book argues that we should look towards mutually beneficial outcomes. In a world where rapid technological advancements and evolving economic landscapes are reshaping labour markets, this book serves as a guide for 'doing' skilled migration, highlighting shared development, social inclusion, and economic resilience opportunities. It will be a breath of fresh air for researchers, practitioners, and policymakers looking for possible solutions to global migration skill flow challenges.

2ND EDITION

Epistemic Freedom in Africa

Deprovincialization and Decolonization

Sabelo J. Ndlovu-Gatsheni University of Bayreuth, Germany

Series: Rethinking Development

Epistemic Freedom in Africa is about the struggle for African people to think, theorize, interpret the world and write from where they are located, unencumbered by Eurocentrism. The imperial denial of common humanity to some human beings meant that in turn their knowledges and experiences lost their value, their epistemic virtue. The new edition of this influential book will be an important read for students and scholars across Education, History, Philosophy, Ethics, African Studies, Development Studies, Politics, International Relations, Sociology, Postcolonial Studies and Decolonial Studies.

From Rural Village to Smart Village

Digital Connectivity for Development

Heather E. Hudson

Series: Rethinking Development

This book investigates how the rise of information and communications technologies is transforming life for Indigenous communities and those living in rural and developing areas. The global reach of the internet and the proliferation of mobile phones, broadband and social media have created an interconnected global village of communicators able to access and share information almost instantaneously. Written by renowned international expert Heather E. Hudson, this book will be ideal for researchers or students of communications and development, and for practitioners and policy makers working for governments, consultancies, international organizations and development agencies.

Global Polycrisis

Root Causes and Radical Alternatives

Richard Slimbach

Series: Rethinking Development

In an age of climate disruption, economic insecurity, technological acceleration, political fracture, and intensifying great-power rivalry, crises no longer arrive one at a time. Global Polycrisis offers a clear and compelling guide to the defining condition of our century: the convergence of multiple large-scale disruptions that amplify one another and defy conventional solutions. Ideal for upper-level undergraduate and graduate courses in global studies, leadership, environmental studies, political economy, and related fields, this book also speaks to educators, practitioners, and readers seeking an accessible, ethically grounded framework for understanding a turbulent world.

Public Corruption in Sub-Saharan Africa

Legacies, Measurements, and Perceptions

Edited by Christopher Changwe Nshimbi University in Pretoria, South Africa, Sombo Muzata , Leon Mwamba Tshimpaka University of Pretoria, South Africa

Series: Routledge Corruption and Anti-Corruption Studies

This book investigates public corruption in Africa and the attempts to curb it, moving from histories and legacies through to the challenging conditions in which anti-corruption agencies operate today. At a time when corruption in many parts of the continent remains rife despite most countries having ratified the UN convention on preventing and combatting corruption, this book will be an important guide for researchers across the fields of African Studies, Political Science, and Global Development.

Race and Racism

Biology, Ethics, Politics

Michel Tibayrenc

This book provides a comprehensive overview of the latest advances in biology in the study of mankind diversity. We emphasize that it is dangerous to base anti-racism on scientific data, which are by nature provisional and fluctuating. We advocate for a mutual sanctuarization between science on one hand, and ethics and politics on the other. Ethics and politics should not interfere with the scientific process, which relies on the rational analysis of objective data. It is dangerous to declare that a scientific theory is necessarily false because it appears scandalous in light of the prevailing moral standards, which change over time and place.

Routledge Handbook of Contract Farming and Development

Edited by Caroline Hambloch , Niels Fold , Sudha Narayanan , Helena Pérez Niño , Mark Vicol

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

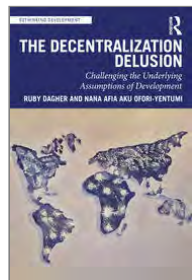

The Routledge Handbook of Contract Farming and Development assesses the main conceptual, methodological, and theoretical debates surrounding contract farming, and its implications for rural development in the Global South. Contract farming has rapidly expanded in the Global South in the wake of structural adjustment, providing an intermediate form of agricultural organization between open procurement and fully integrated plantation agriculture. The book's comprehensive coverage of contract farming will interest researchers of agricultural economics, development studies, rural sociology, and agrarian political economy, as well as policy makers and development practitioners.

The Decentralization Delusion

Challenging the Underlying Assumptions of Development

Ruby Dagher , Nana Afia Aku Ofori-Yentumi

Series: Rethinking Development

The Decentralization Delusion challenges the narrative that decentralisation leads to enhanced democratic practices and higher levels of economic and social development. Instead, it argues that decentralisation theory tends to rely on assumptions which are idealistic and mostly inappropriate to non-Western contexts. Diving into over 50 case studies from around the globe, the book extensively assesses the intended and unintended outcomes of different types and levels of decentralisation. The book's broad-ranging analysis and compelling arguments will interest students, researchers, and practitioners of development, politics, conflict, public administration, and public policy.

The Politics of Public–Private Partnerships and International Development

Insights from Ethiopia

Edited by Jon Harald Sande Lie , Paul Beaumont , Marit Tolo Østebø

Series: Routledge Explorations in Development Studies

With the launch of Agenda 2030, public-private partnerships were heralded as an important means to realise the Sustainable Development Goals and to provide more sustainable development financing in the global south. This book explores public-private partnerships from the bottom up, drawing on extensive empirical research in Ethiopia to illuminate the diversity of practices, arrangements and contradictions that the public-private partnership agenda enables, generates, and occludes. The book illuminates the unseen consequences of translating bold sustainable development goals strategies into practice, and will be of interest to researchers and practitioners of international development.

Wealth Inequality and Elites in the Global South

Perspectives from Brazil, India, and South Africa

Edited by Aroop Chatterjee , Surinder S. Jodhka
Jawaharlal Nehru University, India, Lena Lavinás , Vamsi Vakulabharanam

Series: Routledge Inequality Studies

Wealth inequality is both extreme and persistent across much of the world, yet it remains poorly understood relative to income inequality and poverty alleviation. Bringing together original research on Brazil, India, and South Africa, this volume examines the processes through which elite groups accumulate and maintain disproportionate control over assets - through historically embedded social hierarchies, institutional arrangements, and political-economic processes. It will interest scholars and advanced students in development studies, political economy, sociology, economics, law, and global studies.

A Humanities Pedagogy Approach to Modern Masculinity

Edited by Nahum N. Welang

A Humanities Pedagogy Approach to Address Modern Masculinity examines how classroom-based practices from across the humanities can counter the anti-egalitarian narratives shaping contemporary manosphere discourse. Drawing on twelve essays that traverse literature and related fields, this volume explores critical and empathetic pedagogical strategies that illuminate the socio-economic and cultural forces contributing to young men's growing alienation. This volume is essential for educators, researchers, and students in Education, Gender Studies, and the Humanities seeking effective frameworks to respond to the manosphere's expanding influence in diverse classroom contexts.

Beauty

Gendered Perspectives

Jaita Talukdar

Series: Gendered Perspectives

Beauty: Gendered Perspectives examines beauty as a social force that shapes bodies, identities, and everyday life. Taking a gendered approach, it explores how beauty norms are produced, enforced, and contested across contemporary culture. From hair and dress to thinness, cosmetic surgery, and online beauty culture, this volume traces the historical and social forces that have made particular forms of appearance desirable, necessary, and valuable. An invaluable resource for graduate and undergraduate students across philosophy, sociology, gender studies, feminist studies, media studies, and cultural studies.

Gloria Steinem

The Unlikely Development of an American Feminist Icon

Lauren E. Duncan

This book examines how one of the most prominent feminists in the United States emerged from an atypical background to become a defining voice of the Women's Liberation Movement. Drawing on psychological theories of adult attachment, generation, and feminist identity development, the book analyses Steinem's unconventional childhood, her early experiences of autonomy, and the societal expectations she resisted as a young adult. This accessible psychological biography is ideal for undergraduates and postgraduates in Psychology, Gender Studies, Politics, and the Social Sciences, as well as readers interested in feminist history and political socialization.

Learning from Queer and Trans Studies

An Introduction

Edited by D. Chase J. Catalano, Andrea N. Baldwin, Chris A. Barcelos

Learning from Queer and Trans Studies introduces readers to key topics in queer and trans studies and employs a queer and trans pedagogy through its non-linear structure that makes connections across disciplines, topics, fields of study, time, and place. Employing a thematic structure and innovatively introducing readers to trans and queer histories, language, geographies, theories, communities, bodies, and politics, the book centres queer and trans lives, and uses "queer" and "trans" as methodologies for understanding the social world.

Male Icons and Identity in 1960s Britain

Revolt into Style

Edited by Caroline Langhorst, Robert Shail

Male Icons and Identity in 1960s Britain: Revolt into Style explores the profound social and cultural transformations of the 1960s through the lens of masculinity. This book delves into how male identity, often resistant to change, serves as a barometer for the broader societal shifts of the era. Contributors from diverse academic backgrounds examine iconic figures from popular music, cinema, and television, as well as artistic polymaths. This collection is ideal for students and academics in gender studies, cultural history, and sociology, as well as readers interested in understanding a transformative decade when established norms of male identity faced unprecedented challenges.

Queer Trauma in Children's Anglophone Literature and Cinema

Corpus Navalón-Guzmán

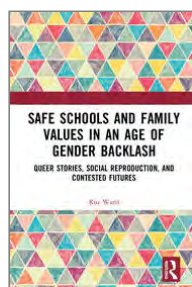

Queer Trauma in Children's Anglophone Literature and Cinema examines how contemporary English-language novels and films represent trauma in queer childhood and adolescence. Drawing on Ann Cvetkovich's concept of queer trauma, the book challenges pathologizing models that frame trauma as a private wound, instead revealing its cultural, political, and intersectional production through family expectations, social pressures, bullying, discrimination, and the policing of gender and sexuality. This book is ideal for undergraduate and graduate students, as well as researchers in gender studies, literary and cultural studies, film and media studies, and childhood studies.

The Ambiguity of Consent

Consent Puzzles in Film, Television, Public Discourse, and the Law

Edited by Michele Meek

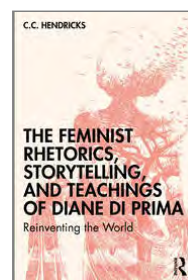

This book explores the complex, often contradictory nature of consent in contemporary society. It examines how consent is expressed and debated across media, legal systems, and public discourse, particularly in the height of "consent culture" in the 2020s. Through case studies and cultural analysis, it addresses issues such as the blurred lines between "bad sex" and assault, the instability of consent for minors, and how normative models often fail to account for structural inequalities. This book is ideal for students and researchers in Gender Studies, Media Studies, Law, and Politics, as well as anyone interested in the ethical, legal, and cultural dimensions of consent.

The Feminist Rhetorics, Storytelling, and Teachings of Diane di Prima

Reinventing the World

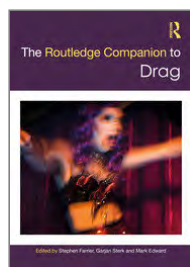

C.C. Hendricks

This book offers the first comprehensive study of the feminist rhetorics and storytelling strategies of a key woman in the Beat generation. Drawing on memoirs, poetry, archival materials, and editorial work, it examines how narratives of gender and sexual alternatives, activist networking, and critical subjectivity were mobilised to foster feminist consciousness and social change. Blending rhetorical analysis with interdisciplinary perspectives from feminist and queer studies, the book situates these strategies within Beat literature and historiography, recovering an overlooked figure and demonstrating her influence on feminist rhetoric through layered methodological approaches.

The Routledge Companion to Drag

Edited by Stephen Farrier, Garjan Sterk, Mark Edward

Series: Routledge Companions to Gender

This book offers a comprehensive academic exploration of drag as a global, historical, and cultural phenomenon. It examines drag beyond its popularised media image, tracing its diverse practices across time and geography. Chapters address key themes such as the history, herstory and thierstory of drag, its representation on television, activism, and performance traditions from the Victorian and Elizabethan stage to contemporary contexts. With contributions that extend beyond the global North, the book foregrounds intersectional perspectives on race, ethnicity, the body, class, and sexuality, while engaging with issues such as the AIDS pandemic and cultural politics.

Women, Power, and Gender in the Middle East

Edited by Shilan Fuad Hussain

Women, Power, and Gender in the Middle East examines the mechanisms through which gendered authority is both enforced and contested within evolving structures of governance, addressing a central question: how are women's rights shaped, constrained, and negotiated under conditions of political instability, authoritarian reform, and state fragmentation? This volume is an essential resource for scholars and students of gender studies and Middle East studies, as well as for policymakers and practitioners seeking rigorous, empirically grounded insight into the intersection of governance and gender in contemporary regional politics.

Writing Eastern European Queer Autoethnographies

Sex Acts, Sex Memories

Artūras Tereškinas

Writing Eastern European Queer Autoethnographies challenges the prevailing erotophobia in Eastern European queer studies by exploring post-Soviet sexuality and new queer imaginaries that emerge through sexual experiences. Blending personal sexual experience with cultural critique and sociological inquiry, this book provides an intimate glimpse into queer men's sexual experiences within the broader context of Eastern Europe's institutional, political, social, and interpersonal power dynamics. This book will resonate with researchers in LGBTQ+ studies, cultural studies, anthropology, and sociology, as well as activists and practitioners of LGBTQ+ rights and advocacy.

AI and the Disruption of the Social

Challenges for Social Work Education and Practice

Edited by Goetz Ottmann, Carolyn Noble

Series: Routledge Advances in Social Work

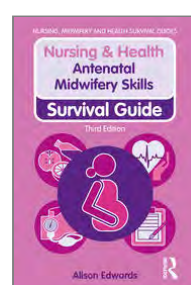

The impact of Artificial Intelligence (AI) on society is still unsettled; its future is yet to be fully determined. However, what is getting increasingly clear is that given its current, business-defined trajectory, AI has the potential to significantly re-shape political economies, global and domestic hierarchies of power, and knowledge production. As Raya-Diez (2023) notes, AI can contribute ethically if placed at the service of people and grounded in professional values, but this requires vigilance, reflexivity, expert input and collaboration and institutional accountability.

Children's Rights in Social Work Practice

Theory, Protection, Participation, and Provision

Edited by Paul McCafferty, Esther Mercado García, Davy Hayes, Gerry Marshall

I was a child when I first noticed how society made children feel small. Not in size, but in significance. Where I grew up, turning 11 meant sitting the 11+ exam—a test that split children into two tracks: Those who passed went to grammar schools, and the rest went to secondary schools. Because every child matters. Every voice counts. And every right must be upheld. Let us begin, together, and let us begin now. Because the future of children's rights does not lie in tomorrow's promises, but in today's decisions.

Community Social Labs and Social Work

Bridging Gaps Between Universities and Communities to Solve Social Problems

Edited by Janestic Mwende Twikirize, Ann Christin E. NilsenSeries: Routledge Advances in Social Work

Community Social Labs (CSL) is an innovative approach in social work education, tailored to enhance co-creation, indigenization and sustainability in the field of social work. For universities to retrieve their role as sustainable spaces for the common good, rather than copies without an original, we believe that a good starting point is exactly the creation of alternative curricula, such as the CSL approach. We believe that this approach is relevant beyond East Africa.

Connecting Social Work Theory and Practice

Power, Communication and Change

Stephen J. Mordue

Series: Student Social Work

In his book Absolute Beginners, Colin Macinness (2011, pg. 81) has the narrator tell us that "...everything you learnt, you hadn't learnt until you'd really dug it; i.e. made it part of your own experience." You can remember that empowerment will create friction. When people recognise their own power, systems respond. That is forward movement. You can act as if social work is political. Because it is.

Critical Perspectives on Disability Representation and Inclusion in Media

Edited by Michael S. Jeffress

Series: Interdisciplinary Disability Studies

When Sesame Street premiered in 1969, children with Down syndrome or other disabilities were rarely seen on television (Haller, 2019). At the time, doctors routinely counseled parents to institutionalize children with Down syndrome, believing they would not walk, talk, learn, or lead fulfilling lives (Davis, 2009). As post-narrative prosthesis works, these works deliver the voices of individuals with disabilities, advocate for their rights, and contribute to social inclusion.

Delegation in Healthcare

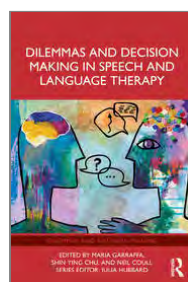

Edited by Lucy Stainer, Rowena Slope

This book will clearly define and explain delegation as a concept in health care practice, equipping readers to successfully deliver, manage and lead increasingly complex patient care. Delegation is a core health care activity where healthcare practitioners supervise and support other members of the multidisciplinary team to deliver patient care. It is a core leadership skill that involves risk assessment and management, impacts patient satisfaction and quality of care, and has a substantial financial impact if undertaken incorrectly. This guide supports all health professionals, employers and organisations to master the essential skill of delegation.

Disability and the Making of Place

Edited by Claire Edwards , Edward Hall , Andrew Power , Robert Wilton

Series: Interdisciplinary Disability Studies

This book explores the myriad ways that disabled people encounter, occupy, move through, and shape place. It foregrounds place and place-making as an everyday relational practice, encompassing the diverse ways that people navigate, feel, perform and make sense of space through negotiations, narratives, and tactics that emerge in encounters between disabled people and wider publics, material sites and institutions. The task is for the 'disability present' to be reimagined as a disability futurity in which, to paraphrase Kafer (2013), alternative spatialities do not cast disabled people out of space.

Homelessness and Housing Stress

Acts of Homefullness

Edited by Neal Haslem, Marcus Knutagård, Keely Macarow

Series: Routledge Advances in Health and Social Policy

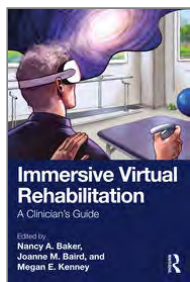

Welcome to this collection of written and visual texts, brought together under the concept of Homefullness, which demonstrate a range of practices and projects confronting the inequities of global housing from many different disciplinary perspectives and orientations. How simple this could be: homes in a homeland with a thriving populace which is not constantly occupied by neighboring armies, bombarded by weapons manufactured in distant lands, or impacted by heatwaves and catastrophic disasters. What joy there would be if people could live for and with Homefullness.

Post-Separation Violence and Abuse in the Lives of Women and Children

'It's Never Over'

Ravi K. Thiara, Christine Harrison, Donna Chung

Series: Routledge Advances in Health and Social Policy

Violence against women and girls (VAWG), particularly domestic violence and abuse (DVA), is a common experience for between 1 in 3 and 1 in 4 women and girls across the globe (FRA et al., 2024; World Health Organisation, 2021). I realised in that moment that he no longer had control over me and that I was in control of my life and that was the strongest I had felt and I continue to feel that way. I felt like I had come back – that I was fierce! (Kelly et al., 2014, p.i).

Qualitative Research Methods for Medicine and Health Sciences

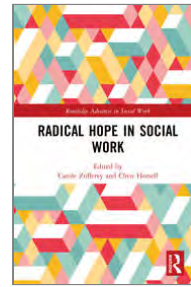

Kirsti Malterud Research Unit for General Practice, Norway

Qualitative research methods are crucial for addressing central questions arising from clinical and organisational practice. This book develops a coherent methodological framework in which these dimensions are treated as integral to knowledge development, not as residual or secondary concerns. Written primarily for students and researchers new to qualitative methods at bachelor's, master's and doctoral levels in medicine and healthcare, the text also invites more experienced scholars to reflect critically on established methodological practices.

Research Evidence Use and the Process of Improvement in Child Welfare

An Introductory Guide

Lily T. Alpert

All human service organizations are engaged in the process of improvement in one way or another. Put very simply, it is an ongoing effort to achieve better and better for the people we serve, characterized by a basic set of questions: How effective are we? To maintain an unwavering focus on child and family outcomes. To use evidence to support decisions about how to improve those outcomes. And to keep learning.

Social Work Practice in Health

An Introduction to Contexts, Theories and Skills

Edited by Melissa Petrakis

Health and health services practice now operate in a context of unprecedented complexity. Across Australia and comparable health systems, multimorbidity and long-term conditions have become the norm rather than the exception, with many people living with intersecting physical illness, mental distress, disability, trauma, and social adversity over extended periods. What might need to be considered when planning with Mr Johnson for his discharge? What additional information would need to be considered if the temperature is 39 degrees Celsius, with a high bush fire danger in his area?

Social Work Practice in Mental Health

An Introduction

Robert Bland , Gabrielle Drake , John Drayton , Ann Tullgren

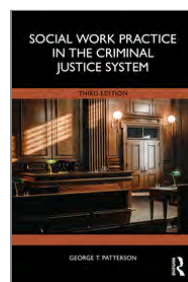

Knowledge about mental health and the skills to work effectively with people who have mental health problems are basic to contemporary social work practice. Social workers have been employed in mental health settings for many years now, and mental health has been a traditional field of specialist social work practice. 4. Being part of a good team is a protective factor against work stress for mental health social workers. How would you describe a good team? What characteristics are important? 5. What are some of the things you do/don't do to keep well in practice?

Social Work Practice in the Criminal Justice System

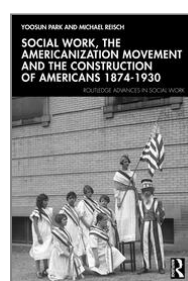

George T. Patterson

The criminal justice system is comprised of complex organizations that interact with offenders, former offenders and victims. However, the criminal justice system addresses much more than crime. It affects the daily life of citizens in many ways. Summarize the lessons learned from international models that can inform the future of social work practice in the criminal justice system. Are the lessons learned from these models applicable to the U.S. criminal justice system? Why or why not?

Social Work, the Americanization Movement and the Construction of Americans 1874–1930

Yoosun Park , Michael Reisch

Series: Routledge Advances in Social Work

A December 2021 New York Times article entitled "First they fought about masks. Then over the soul of the city" (Tavernise, 12/26/2021), describes a contentious town meeting which took place in the heat of the summer in the small Oklahoma city of Enid. Constructive critique and disagreement cannot occur when "ideology" is deployed as a weapon against ideas one does not agree with while one's own beliefs and ideals are accorded the status of unimpeachable truth or an unassailable moral stance.

Southern African Perspectives for Inclusive Welfare

Redefining the Social Policy Discourse for a Sustainable Future

Edited by Emmanuel Ndhlovu , Clement Chipenda

Series: Social Welfare Around the World

This chapter introduces the book Southern African Perspectives for Inclusive Welfare: Redefining the Social Policy Discourse for a Sustainable Future. It posits that social policy has never been a neutral technical enterprise. For Southern Africa, with its deep histories of dispossession and its extraordinary traditions of liberation struggle and solidarity, social policy offers pathways toward realising aspirations of dignity, equality, and shared prosperity that have animated its peoples across centuries of colonial and post-colonial contestation. This book is offered in that spirit and toward those futures.

The Neurodivergent Social Worker

A Neuroinclusive Guide for Managers, Supervisors, and Assessors

Florence Smith, Jenni Guthrie

Across contemporary social work, new conversations are emerging about difference, inclusion and belonging. One of the most significant of these is neurodiversity, a term that has moved from activist circles into mainstream professional dialogue. We are practitioners, we are managers and we are leaders. And we make a difference. The work does not end here. This conclusion is not a closing, but an invitation. An invitation to reflect, to question, and to act.

The Routledge International Handbook of Radical Ethical Social Work

Edited by Jeanette Schmid, Marina Morgenshtern

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

We begin this volume by situating ourselves in relation to the lands on which we live and work. Jeanette is a settler and guest on the unceded territories of the Snuneymuxw people on Vancouver Island, Canada. Radical, ethical social work is a kaleidoscope of creating new interpretations and indeed new spaces by shifting existing arrangements to identify new conversations, new relationships and thus new possibilities.

The Weaponisation of Sexual Violence in Conflict

Edited by Atlas Torbati

Series: Routledge Advances in Health and Social Policy

Sexual violence has long been treated as an unfortunate by-product of conflict tragic, episodic, and peripheral to the "real" work of war. Such a framing obscures the extent to which sexual violence is woven into the logics, strategies, and infrastructures of power that sustain armed violence and political repression. That is the task this volume sets for future research, legal thought, feminist politics, and projects of justice and the ethical imperative that runs through every chapter: to refuse silence, expose the structures that weaponise bodies, and insist that the wars inscribed on those bodies remain central to how we understand conflict, governance, and peace.

Understanding Child to Parent Abuse

Recovery through Solution-Focused Brief Therapy

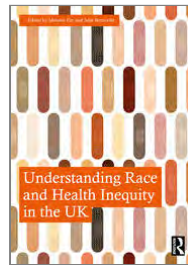

Ayşe Adil, Joseph Lettieri

Child to parent abuse (CPA) remains a complex and often misunderstood form of family harm, frequently hidden within wider narratives of behaviour, safeguarding and domestic abuse. Practitioners are often left navigating high levels of risk, fear and uncertainty, with limited guidance on how to respond in ways that are both safe and constructive. Written for professionals across social care, mental health, education, youth justice and family support services, this book offers a thoughtful, practice-based contribution to the field and a grounded framework for supporting recovery, reconnection and change in families affected by CPA.

Aging, Migration, and Digital Technologies

Welfare, Inclusion, and Transnational Lives in the Nordics and Japan

Edited by Ksenia Golovina, Anna Pechurina Karlstad University, Sweden, Satu Heikkinen, Tara Mehrabi

Series: Social Perspectives on Ageing and Later Life

This book explores how processes of migration and aging are entangled with digital practices in the contexts of the Nordic countries (Sweden and Finland) and Japan. Leading the digitalization of welfare services, these regions provide a compelling lens through which to view experiences of aging, migration, and transnational families. The book underscores the need to further advance the migration–aging–technology triad as a robust framework for understanding these phenomena. It will therefore appeal to scholars, researchers, and students of the sociology of migration, aging, digitalization, and welfare, as well as policymakers and practitioners in social services and integration.

American Antiracism

Examining the Fields of Contemporary Racism

Edited by Philip Ewell, Joe Feagin

Series: New Critical Viewpoints on Society

American Antiracism: Examining the Fields of Contemporary Racism details how, from its founding, antiracism has been axiomatic for the United States. This centuries-long process of delegitimization has racially segregated lives to a much larger extent than is generally acknowledged. This book provides a compelling window into how antiracism is embedded, reproduced, and challenged in specific U.S. organizations and institutions—including educational systems, sports leagues, STEM fields, and healthcare institutions. It foregrounds how many generations of Black activists and scholars have aggressively countered these racially discriminatory traditions.

Anti-Science

Shortcuts to a Big Idea

Dariusz Jemielniak

Series: Shortcuts

Tackling the critical issue of the growing skepticism towards science, this volume explores the complex forces driving the anti-science movement. It dissects the phenomenon of increasing anti-science advocates using academic research boosted by lived experiences fighting online disinformation. This volume is not just an analysis of the current state of skepticism toward science; it is a call to action, encouraging a recommitment to the values of scientific inquiry and evidence-based decision-making in an age marked by doubt. Both theoretically informed and accessibly written, the book will appeal to students, academics, and general readers, alike.

Automation in the Age of Artificial Intelligence

The Social Construction of the Future of Work

Larry Liu

Series: Routledge Studies in the Sociology of Work, Professions and Organisations

Automation in the Age of Artificial Intelligence draws on historical and contemporary debates to examine the future of work in the age of artificial intelligence. This book offers conceptual framework for scholars in sociology, political economy, and science and technology studies, as well as for policymakers and labor advocates seeking to navigate automation's social impacts. In doing so, it moves beyond deterministic narratives of job loss to uncover the deeper cultural meanings attached to technological change and the uncertain future of work.

Benefit Morale

Social Attitudes to the Welfare State in Poland

Łukasz Jurek , Krystyna Gilga , Stanisław Kamiński , Joanna Szczepaniak-Sienniak , Paweł Żuk

This book examines the complex relationship between citizens and welfare systems through the innovative concept of "benefit morale." This pioneering study analyses how social attitudes influence the effectiveness of welfare programs, exploring both welfare abuse and non-take-up of benefits within the Polish context while developing a theoretical framework applicable to welfare states globally. Providing a foundation for international comparative research on benefit morale, this volume serves multiple audiences including policymakers seeking to improve social program effectiveness, researchers in sociology and social policy, and students studying welfare systems.

Coloniality and Structural Othering in European Thought

A Racialized Canon

Maurizio Meloni

This book provides a historical and conceptual analysis of patterns of racialized otherness in European thought, traversing primary sources, historical periods, and national archives, to show that the longue durée of structural othering is essential to making sense of epistemic violence and structural coloniality in the European canon. Through analysis of published texts and personal letters, the book reveals racializing tropes and patterns of othering in four canonical European authors. It will appeal to scholars, researchers and students with interests in social theory, sociology, political theory, cultural studies, history, history of science, and postcolonial and ethnic studies.

Darwin and the Monsters

The Long History of Cryptozoology

Brian Regal Kean University, USA

Regal tells the story of the engagement of philosophers, naturalists and scientists in what we now call cryptozoology—the study of mysterious, unrecognized creatures—, a much longer history than most appreciate. Offering a groundbreaking examination of the long and complex history of cryptozoology, Regal situates it within broader debates about biology, evolution, and the limits of scientific knowledge. A fascinating read for students and scholars of cryptozoology, the history of biology and zoology, and science technology and society studies.

Death, Dying, and Bereavement in a Changing World

Alan R. Kemp

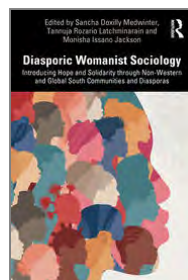

In this introductory text on thanatology, Alan Kemp takes on the central question of mortality: the ubiquitous presence of death despite the very human propensity to deny its relevance to oneself, personally. It provides a multidisciplinary and multidimensional introduction to the study of death, dying, and bereavement. Written to be an accessible and expansive overview of our changing encounters with death, dying, and bereavement, the third edition remains a reflective and deeply insightful book for students across specialized fields in psychology, sociology, human services, social work, counselling, and theology.

Doing Research with Documents of Life

Accountable Storytelling and the Diamond Method

Derek Wesley Morris

Series: Literary Methods in the Social Sciences

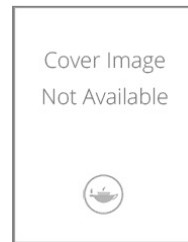

This book presents Documents of Life (DoLs) as a research framework, offering both scholarly insight and practical guidance for conducting this kind of work. DoLs are everyday materials that illuminate the organisation of ordinary lives and their social worlds. Addressing key methodological questions in autoethnography, it brings together critical socio-cultural autoethnography (CSA) and DoLs through the innovative use of facet methodology (FM). The book will interest students seeking guidance on conducting autoethnographic research, and scholars in sociology, anthropology, philosophy, politics, gender and masculinity studies, memory studies, and the social sciences more broadly.

Emotions and Power

Habitus and Change in Late Modernity

Jonathan Heaney Queens University Belfast, UK

Series: Classical and Contemporary Social Theory

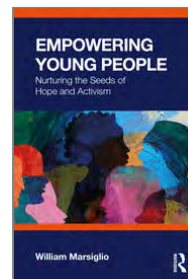

This book draws on insights from a range of disciplines to explore the relationship between emotions and social change in late or 'liquid' modernity. Using the Republic of Ireland as an illustrative case, the author develops a distinctive theoretical framework to engage with the concept of habitus and to argue that three concepts – emotion, power and habitus – are central to understanding the constitution of, and effect of 'social change' upon, people's emotional lives. Engaging with the thought of Bauman, Bourdieu, Whitehead and others, the book shows how emotions have become valorised and pathologised (or re-pathologised) in late modernity, thus offering a critical analysis of emotion and power and the ambiguous effects of emotionalisation for contemporary life and politics.

Empowering Young People

Nurturing the Seeds of Hope and Activism

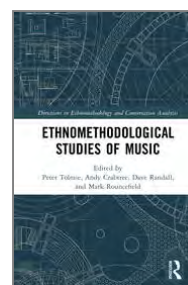

William Marsiglio

Grounded in progressive values and social justice perspectives, Empowering Young People takes stock of the pressing challenges we face as a society and also highlights the ways in which youth activists can help us envision a more collaborative, equitable, and inclusive future. Illuminated by the voices and stories of these young activists and the groups supporting them, and finding inspiration in their approaches to empathy, leadership, civic engagement, and social activism, the book outlines diverse and specific initiatives for building supportive institutions and opportunities that can empower them while fostering the social change they seek.

Ethnomethodological Studies of Music

Edited by Peter Tolmie University of Siegen, Germany,
Dave Randall University of Siegen, Germany, Mark Rouncefield Lancaster University, UK, Andy Crabtree University of Nottingham, UK

Series: Directions in Ethnomethodology and Conversation Analysis

This book brings together studies that provide ethnomethodological accounts of musically-related phenomena, describing in detail how they are accomplished and how they contribute to our understanding of the local production of order. A rich and detailed depiction of how people actually go about producing and consuming music in ordinary settings, and the ways that this is woven into ordinary everyday life and common sense reasoning, Ethnomethodological Studies of Music will appeal to social scientists and musicologists with interests in ethnomethodology and research methods.

Exploring Contemporary Challenges to Equality in Academia

Gendered Higher Education and Research Under Pressure

Edited by Rodrigo Rosa

This book offers a comprehensive and global examination of the persistent gender-related challenges universities face in their pursuit of equality, diversity, and inclusion across teaching, research, management, and leadership. The book delves into key issues such as gendered divisions of academic labor, work-life conflict, sexual harassment, institutional change, and the inequalities perpetuated by neoliberal demands. It also highlights innovative approaches, including feminist perspectives on care, and transnational analyses, while featuring testimonials on groundbreaking gender equality initiatives and a critical review of work-life balance in academia.

Failure Irrationality

Obsession, Engendering and Sound in Contemporary Policymaking

Adriana Mica University of Warsaw, Poland, Mikołaj Pawlak University of Warsaw, Poland, Paweł Kubicki SGH Warsaw School of Economics, Poland

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

This book is about irrationality and policy failures. It is the first book that combines failure curiosity in social sciences with literature and films that explore human absurdity, existentialism and quietism. Examining policy failure and success, this book sheds light on the social, political, and emotional consequences of the process of not achieving an outcome in policymaking. It will be of interest to scholars and students of sociology, anthropology, policy studies, political science, emotion/affect studies, and failure studies.

Family and Educational Inequality in China

Evidence from the China Family Panel Studies

Edited by Xiaogang Wu NYU Shanghai, China

This book offers an in-depth examination of how family background shapes inequalities in children's academic performance and cognitive skill development in China. It further identifies key mediating mechanisms—including living arrangements, family investments, parenting practices, and private tutoring—that help explain how these disparities emerge and persist. The essays in this volume draw exclusively on CFPS data and collectively examine how families shape children's educational attainment, highlighting a range of intervening pathways.

Football, Migration and Racism

Global Perspectives

Edited by Marco Martiniello, John Solomos University of Warwick, UK

Series: Ethnic and Racial Studies

The collection features empirical studies from West Africa, Czechia, Sweden, Costa Rica, England, and Italy, offering diverse theoretical and methodological approaches to understanding racialisation processes in football. It addresses critical gaps in sports sociology by explicitly connecting football to broader patterns of racial and ethnic relations. Contributors explore racialised stereotypes of African players, media representations, grassroots anti-racism initiatives, and the colonial legacies that continue to shape contemporary football cultures.

2ND EDITION

Freedom

Shortcuts to a Big Idea

Nick Stevenson University of Nottingham, UK

Series: Shortcuts

The second edition of Freedom recovers the concept as a fundamental aspect of modern Western ideas and explores its history and how controversial its meaning can be. To what extent does freedom have a 'social' component, and how is it being reshaped by our dominant consumer society? Drawing upon a range of critical thinkers and perspectives, this book represents a wake-up call to all those who thought our basic ideas of freedom were settled.

Heritage, Power, and Liminality

Culture and the Crisis of Authoritarian Transitions in Myanmar

Alicia Stevens

Series: Contemporary Liminality

This book delivers a fresh approach to understanding cultural heritage amid an under-explored yet dynamic global force: the uncertainty of political transition. The book makes a unique contribution by theorising a modality of 'liminal heritage', cultural expression that takes on qualities of its transitional-liminal context, such as absurdity, ambiguity, imitation, violence, and inversion, particularly potent in authoritarian contexts. It will appeal to scholars and researchers with interests in sociology, political anthropology, heritage studies, museum studies, and Asian studies.

Illuminating Max Weber's Sociology of Law and Methodological Writings

Collected Essays

Hubert Treiber

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

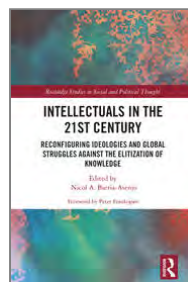

This volume of collected essays by Hubert Treiber, one of Weber's leading interpreters and an authoritative expert on Weber's sociology of law, brings a number of translated works to English-speaking readers, offering the opportunity to gain a fuller and a more accurate understanding of Max Weber's legal thinking. Throughout the collection, the chapters are united by the thread of Treiber's consistent attempts to provide historical contexts and to clarify Weber's legal concepts and definitions. As such, it brings together and makes accessible a new and important body of knowledge concerning Max Weber's sociology of law and will appeal to scholars and researchers in social theory.

Intellectuals in the 21st Century

Reconfiguring Ideologies and Global Struggles Against the Elitization of Knowledge

Edited by Nicol A. Barria-Asenjo

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

This book sees international academics from across five continents come together to critique the role of the present-day intellectual. Arguing that the elitization of the social sciences and humanities has reached a climax in the 21st century, due to the commercialisation of knowledge and the capitalist model, it asks how intellectuals can free themselves of the ideological labyrinth, and reshape the contributions of the social sciences and humanities for the needs of our time. It will appeal to scholars, intellectuals, and postgraduate students with interests in social and political theory and philosophy, epistemology, social class, neoliberalism, and academia.

Intersectionality and Environmental Movements

British Activism in Global Context

Lydia Ayame Hiraide

Series: Social Movements in the 21st Century: New Paradigms

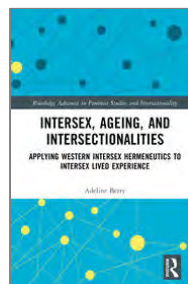

In view of recent criticisms of the environmentalist movement for centring middle-class whiteness, this book examines the discourses, strategies, and theories of environmentalism in modern Britain through the Black feminist lens of intersectionality. The author proposes a framework of 'intersectional absences and presences' to argue that how environmentalists understand—or ignore—intersectionality shapes their social movements in important ways. It affects how they build and communicate their political demands as environmentalists, as well as the literal spaces in which they organize.

2ND EDITION

Introduction to Media Sociology

All Media Are Social

Andrew M. Lindner Skidmore College, USA, Stephen R. Barnard

Series: Sociology Re-Wired

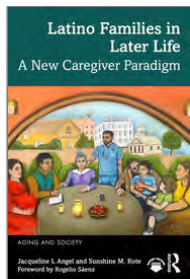

From streaming platforms to smartphone apps to the good old-fashioned newspaper, media are nearly omnipresent in contemporary life and act as a powerful social institution. In this new edition of Introduction to Media Sociology, Lindner and Barnard encourage readers to think critically about the power of big media companies, state-media relations, politics and journalism, representations of race, class, gender, and sexuality in media, and what social media may or may not be doing to our brains, among other topics. The second edition reflects the evolving power of Big Tech firms, the proliferation of misinformation, and voices from outside the mainstream.

Latino Families in Later Life

A New Caregiver Paradigm

Jacqueline L. Angel, Sunshine M. Rote

Series: Aging and Society

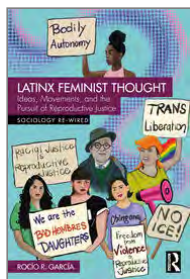

Latino Families in Later Life is a comprehensive look at the issues, dilemmas, and conditions faced by older Latinos and their caregivers, with salient consideration given to key changes shaping the need for assistance and the availability of support. Jacqueline L. Angel and Sunshine Rote address a nascent caregiving crisis at a time when an aging population is set to outnumber younger adults in the United States. With important revelations about the dual experiences of older adults and those who care for them, Latino Families in Later Life is insightful reading for students, scholars, and advocates interested in aging, health, family support, and care work.

Latinx Feminist Thought

Ideas, Movements, and the Pursuit of Reproductive Justice

Rocío R. García

Series: Sociology Re-Wired

Drawing on the influence of Collins' Black Feminist Thought, this book explores how Latinx feminists create theories about intersecting inequalities via their social movement practice—particularly as these relate to reproductive justice. An essential read for students, scholars, and practitioners in post-colonial studies, gender and sexuality studies, reproductive health care, and Latin American studies, Latinx Feminist Thought invites us all to recognize the centrality of Latinx feminist knowledge to lean into the messiness of being human and make new worlds invested in reproductive justice for all.

Letters to the Resistance

A Guide to Social Action and Taking Power for Good

Charles Derber

Series: Universalizing Resistance

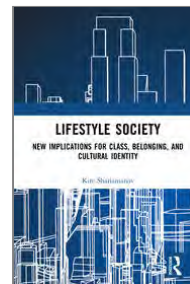

Letters to the Resistance draws on Derber's experience in the Civil Rights movement and mobilization against the war in Vietnam to offer lessons that help protesters sustain resistance. Each letter imparts essential lessons of resistance learned by previous generations, highlighting the necessity of building resistance networks, confronting capitalism, and the use of populism and electoralism – emphasizing that true democracy cannot be created by returning to life before Trump.

Lifestyle Society

New Implications for Class, Belonging, and Cultural Identity

Kire Sharlamanov International Balkan University, North Macedonia

Lifestyle Society offers a compelling exploration of how lifestyles have become the central organizing principle of contemporary social life, reshaping traditional understandings of class, identity, and social differentiation. Moving beyond rigid class structures, the book argues that lifestyles function as dynamic forms of symbolic stratification, expressed through consumption, cultural preferences, and everyday practices. Accessible yet theoretically rigorous, it is essential reading for students and scholars in sociology, cultural studies, media studies, and consumer research, offering a framework for understanding social organization in an increasingly individualized world.

Marx versus Big Tech

Alienated Labour in the Digital Age

Stéphanie Roza

Series: Critiques and Alternatives to Capitalism

This book asks whether Marx's concepts can still be useful to those seeking emancipation in the time of platform capitalism. Offering a pointed discussion of what emancipation in the workplace would mean, it explores the potential of Humanist Marxism to address this possibility. Drawing on the contributions and debates within Humanist Marxism, this book offers a clear and philosophically rich reading of our world that can provide a serious basis for a theory of liberation relevant to our times. It will be vital reading to researchers and post-graduate students with interests in Marxism, social and political thought, alternatives to capitalism and political philosophy.

Mass Public Shootings in Neoliberal America

Killing for Recognition

Luigi Esposito , Fernando M. Perez

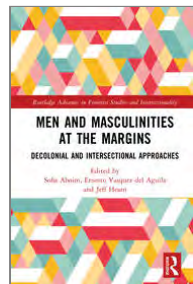

Why have mass public shootings in the U.S. become more frequent and lethal over the last two decades? This question cannot be answered by looking exclusively at the biographies, personalities, or mental health problems of individual shooters. Instead, to paraphrase C. Wright Mills, human behavior is never self-contained and must be understood at the intersection between the personal and social realms. This book will be an appropriate and useful supplementary text for various types of courses within sociology, criminology, and other social sciences that look at the social dimension of violence.

Mobilizing during COVID-19

Social Movements in Times of Crisis

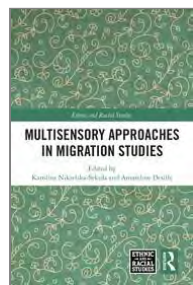

Edited by Cristina Flesher Fominaya , Priska Daphi , Eduardo Romanos

Through a rich analysis of social movement dynamics, the book offers insights into COVID-specific protests and explores how global crises can reshape mobilization at local, national, and transnational levels. The collected articles examine three key dimensions of mobilization during the pandemic: anti-lockdown protests, the legacies and innovations of solidarity activism, and the challenges and opportunities faced by existing movements. Drawing on case studies from four continents—Europe, America, Asia, and Australia—the book employs diverse methodologies and spans ideological orientations from far-right to progressive movements.

Multisensory Approaches in Migration Studies

Edited by Karolina Nikielska-Sekula , Amandine Desille

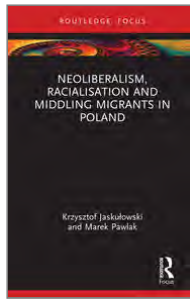

Series: Ethnic and Racial Studies

Multisensory Approaches in Migration Studies rethinks how we understand human mobility by placing the sensing, feeling body at the centre of migration research. Challenging decades of scholarship dominated by textual and state-centred perspectives, this volume reveals how people's multisensory experiences, including smell, touch, sound, and taste, shape migrants' journeys and lives as profoundly as borders, policies, and places do.

Neoliberalism, Racialisation and Middling Migrants in Poland

Krzysztof Jaskułowski, Marek Pawlak Jagiellonian University, Poland

Series: Studies in Migration and Diaspora

This book analyses the complex relations between racism and neoliberalism in the lives of middling migrants in Poland. Based on qualitative research among migrants from Western Europe, South Asia, North Africa, the Middle East, and the post-Soviet area, the authors argue that middling migrants – a heterogeneous category of migrants who are neither a highly-paid elite, nor low-paid or low-skilled workers – perpetuate the neoliberal hierarchy of desirable and undesirable migrants. It will appeal to scholars of sociology, anthropology and politics with interests in migration and diaspora, and race, racism and ethnicity.

Photographic Collections as Visual Method

Innovation and Creativity in Asia

Edited by Terence HENG University of Liverpool, UK,
Soon-Hwa OH Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in Research Methods

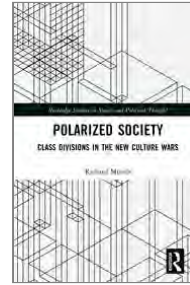

This book explores photographic collections as way of doing and/or inspiring research in the humanities and social sciences. It explores the various ways in which photographic collections exceed their archetypal role as records of the past, to become not only a unit of analysis, but also the starting point for creative and critical work across disciplines. A wealth of data, stories, and inspiration, this book will appeal to scholars, students and practice-based researchers in the areas of visual and creative methods, methods for visual sociology and visual anthropology, photographic studies, museum studies, and area studies with a particular focus on Southeast and East Asia.

Polarized Society

Class Divisions in the New Culture Wars

Richard Münch

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

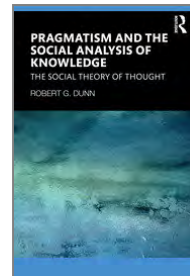

Polarized Society examines the profound divisions characterizing contemporary Western societies, where modern mass-affluent middle-class societies have transformed into postmodern class societies fractured along multiple lines of tradition, identity and participation in wealth and power. This innovative and timely work is addressed to academics and advanced students in the social sciences, economics, legal studies, history, and humanities, as well as policymakers, journalists, and the broader public interested in understanding contemporary political and social conflicts and in the debates around polarization dominating Western politics and media.

This book moves toward the development of more inclusive practices in the handling, management, and debate of Jewish cultural heritage in Europe. The volume presents dynamic explorations of current Jewish subjects across a range of positionalities. It uses diverse methodologies such as ethnographic and sociological fieldwork, research creation, and artistic response. The book will appeal to scholars and students of Queer Studies, Critical Heritage Studies, and Jewish Studies, as well as to researchers in the fields of Ethnomusicology, Artistic Research/Research Creation, and Museum Studies.

Racial Reconciliation and the Third Reconstruction

A New Racial Justice Model

Rachel F. Gómez, Julio Cammarota University of Arizona, USA

The dialogue described above involves a teacher chastising a second-generation Latina (Nicaraguan) sixth grader for speaking Spanish. As we look to the path forward, we must affirm this conviction: there can be no reconciliation without truth, and no truth without the power of collective, grassroots action.

RAGEism

Racism, Ageism and the Quest for Liberation Democracy

Maya Rockey Moore Cummings

Series: Aging and Society

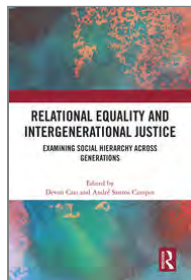

In RAGEism, Dr. Maya Rockey Moore Cummings reveals the hidden architecture of systemic injustice that has shaped American policy for generations. Coining the term "Rageism" to describe how racism and ageism intersect, she exposes the deliberate policy choices that disadvantage African Americans, Latinos, Native Americans, and marginalized Asian communities throughout their entire lives. Drawing on her experience as a Congressional staffer, policy strategist, and advocate, she weaves compelling case studies with personal insights to show why these aren't just "other people's problems" – they threaten the foundations of American democracy itself.

Relational Equality and Intergenerational Justice

Examining Social Hierarchy Across Generations

Edited by Devon Cass, André Santos Campos

Relational egalitarianism – the view that justice requires eliminating certain forms of social hierarchy and realising certain kinds of equal social relationships – may appear particularly problematic in this regard, focused as it is on the quality of social relations. The chapters in this volume examine and take up this issue, with some authors developing and characterising the challenge, showing more precisely what is at stake, whilst others chart possible ways of resisting the challenge. Contributors explore temporal non-overlap arguments, institutional status frameworks, social categories, and power relations across generations.

Rethinking the Migration State

Edited by Fiona B Adamson, Erin Aeran Chung, James F. Hollifield

Series: Research in Ethnic and Migration Studies

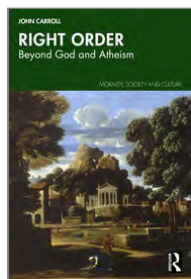

This book advances a new research agenda in migration studies by rethinking the 'migration state' as a core feature of modern governance. Since Hollifield introduced the concept in 2004, the migration state framework has offered a powerful lens for understanding how states reconcile competing objectives of economic openness, political control, and sovereignty in an era of global mobility. This volume widens that lens, moving beyond Western Europe and the United States to situate migration governance within longer imperial, postcolonial, and international political-economic trajectories.

Right Order

Beyond God and Atheism

John Carroll La Trobe University, Australia

Series: Morality, Society and Culture

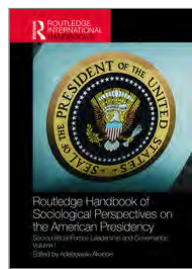

This book confronts issues of meaning in a disenchanted, 'godless' world marked by the decline of organised religion. It proposes that right order emerges as the hidden structure of meaning that underpins the human condition, and the force that shapes existence. Carroll argues that right order is both prior, and to be made. Rooted in sociological traditions derived from Max Weber's work, this outstandingly original work represents the culmination of the author's distinguished, fifty-year-long intellectual career. Of appeal to both scholars and students of cultural sociology and social theory with interests in morality, popular culture, and metaphysical sociology.

Routledge Handbook of Sociological Perspectives on the American Presidency

Sociopolitical Forces, Leadership, and Governance Volume I

Edited by Adebowale Akande

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

This handbook, designed for sociologists, political scientists and historians, offers a compelling examination of the American presidency through the framework of sociological theory. Detailing key themes that include authoritarianism, nativist-populism, ethnonationalism, and social psychology, this book provides a fresh perspective on political leadership and sparks discussions about the complexities of the presidential role in a changing society, serving as an essential academic tool in understanding the intersection of politics and society.

Routledge Handbook on the Sociology and History of Cinema and Television in Latin America

Edited by Paula Halperin

The Routledge Handbook on the Sociology and History of Cinema and Television in Latin America explores the historical and sociological dimensions of Latin American cinema and television from the 1960s and 1970s onward. The political and experimental energy that animated it has not vanished; instead, it reemerges across diverse objects, periods, and media forms, sometimes directly, sometimes obliquely. In this sense, the political is located not only in audiovisual texts but also in the interpretive frameworks scholars in the region bring to their analysis, revealing the enduring impact of that radical movement throughout the following decades.

Routledge International Handbook of Contemporary Communities of Resistance

Edited by Emiliana Mangone University of Salerno, Italy,
Michele Sorice Sapienza University of Rome, Italy,
Estrella Gualda University of Huelva, Spain

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

In an era defined by social upheaval and rapid digital transformation, this Handbook offers a compelling exploration of how communities are reshaping the cultural, economic, and political fabric of contemporary life. It argues that today's social and digital spaces have evolved into a new kind of public "agora"—not simply arenas for critique, but dynamic sites where citizens collectively reinvent the foundations of democratic life. It will appeal to students and scholars in the social sciences, particularly to those interested in community, the digital transformation of society, social movements, and political resistance.

Routledge International Handbook of the COVID-19 Pandemic in China

Edited by Yida Zhai Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, The University of Tsukuba, Cary Wu

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The COVID-19 pandemic originated in China, yet the global community remains largely unaware of the challenges and experiences faced by its citizens during this unprecedented period. This limited understanding stems from various factors, including the complexities surrounding information dissemination. Zhai, Wu, and the contributors offer valuable insights that review, reflect, document, and analyse the pandemic's impact. The Handbook provides a thorough record and analysis of the COVID-19 pandemic in China, exploring it through six critical dimensions: health, family, economic life, society, media, and politics.

Social Construction as a Complex Attractor

The Multiple Dimensions of Entanglement, Innovation and Recurrence

John A. Smith , Anna Wilson University of Glasgow, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

This book examines the dominance of social construction within sociology while shedding light on what social construction looks like in practice beyond the realm of sociological thought. Exploring questions of power, stratification, solidarity and freedom, it is an essential read for those actively seeking to understand why these are recurring patterns in human society, what kinds of alternatives might be possible, and what futures are open to us. As such it will appeal to scholars and students interested in complex approaches across a wide range of fields, in particular to those working within sociology, social theory, philosophy, anthropology and geography.

Social Problems and Ideologies

The Impact of Federalism, Capitalism, Neoliberalism, Libertarianism, and Populism on American Social Problems

Karen E. Rosenblum, Toni-Michelle C. Travis

Social Problems and Ideologies: The Impact of Federalism, Capitalism, Neoliberalism, Libertarianism, and Populism on American Social Problems takes a structural approach to American social problems by examining the foundational ideologies that create, maintain, and make it difficult to resolve those problems. This book will be an important foundational text for use in social problems, political sociology, and sociology of culture courses, as well as in courses in American political studies, and contemporary American culture and history.

5TH EDITION

Social Stratification

Edited by Michelle Jackson, Nima Dahir, Claire Daviss,
David B Grusky

In this all-new fifth edition of Social Stratification, the burgeoning field of inequality is crystallized into 250 core pieces, each presented in readable, distilled form. With rising inequality now being understood as a core cause of the ongoing social upheaval, it's no longer a dusty scholarly topic addressed by just a few disciplines but an active, contentious, interdisciplinary field that simply can't be mastered without broad study in economics, sociology, psychology, data science, and many other fields. This volume meets the challenge by selecting and distilling the contributions that have shaped the field and define our opportunities to take on rising inequality.

Stigma, Political Power, and the Right to Belong

Everyday Disenfranchisement

Ariana A. Andriichuk

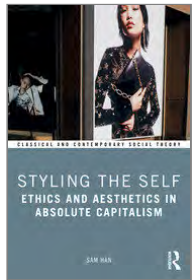

Stigma, Political Power, and the Right to Belong details the modes of exclusion that limit political participation and establishes the theoretical foundation for ruling stigma, the process by which states leverage a series of mechanisms to justify inequality. With a focus on how governments' implementation of stigma is perpetuated by ordinary, everyday people, this book outlines how democracy is actively undermined by stigma and how a focus on the quality of care and interaction between all citizens can overcome discrimination.

The 2024 U.S. Presidential Election

Racism, Racialization, Response and Resistance

Edited by Enid Logan

This book examines the 2024 U.S. presidential election, providing a critical analysis of how race shaped one of America's most consequential political moments. In a society as racialised as the United States, presidential elections are inherently racialised affairs, and this collection addresses urgent questions arising from Trump's return to power. Contributors analyse, variously, how racial ideologies and constructions of racial selfhood are stratified by liberal or conservative political identification, the connections between emotions, politics, and race, and how gendered and racial projects intersect in contemporary political discourse.

The Antinomies of Black Marxism

Critique of the Racial Capitalism Paradigm

Edited by Salvador Rangel, William I. Robinson

Cedric Robinson's widely acclaimed study on Marxism and race has enjoyed a celebratory renaissance in recent years, becoming commonplace across the disciplines and beyond to activist and left circles. This volume contests its now enormous influence, bringing together leading scholars of Marxism to reassess the decisive question of race and Marxist thought and practice.

The Attention Gap in College Sports

Gender, Race, and the Popularity of College Athletes on Social Media

Joshua Woods

In The Attention Gap in College Sports, Joshua Woods delves deeply into data on social media activity amongst college teams and college athletes and critically examines the ways attention, and attempts to gain it, are reconfiguring power and profit in college sports. Grounded by its command of social media data and its discerning view, The Attention Gap in College Sports is a valuable look at consequential issues happening within college sports. Its important discoveries about social media use in this competitive landscape contribute meaningfully to conversations about sport and society, sports media, and sports business and management.

The Black Papers

A Policy Agenda for Black Liberation in the 21st Century

Edited by David J. Johns

Series: Sociology Re-Wired

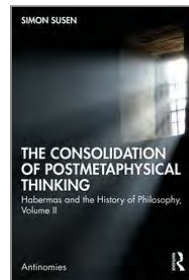

Born from the State of the People movement, a national call to action rallying, restoring, and reimagining what's possible for Black communities, The Black Papers stands in the lineage of the 1905 Niagara Movement, the 1972 Gary Political Convention, and decades of Black political organizing to address what previous efforts left incomplete: sustained infrastructure for collective liberation. Through 26 rigorously researched policy briefs, the volume covers economic justice, education reform, health equity, democratic governance, criminal justice transformation, environmental justice, reparations, and specialized policy domains.

The Daily Routine of Intergroup Relations in a Multicultural World

A Symbolic Interactionist Perspective

Theodor M. Manley Jr.

This book harnesses symbolic interaction theory to understand the daily routine of intergroup relations. Intergroup relations encompass class, race and ethnicity, gender, sexuality, age, religion, and disability. These relations, the book argues, are formed through daily routine and are central to individual and social formation. This book will be a unique and salient resource for students, instructors, and readers in sociology, social theory, cultural studies, race and ethnicity studies, political sociology, and social psychology.

The Death and Life of Southern Soviet Cities

Urban Futures and their Afterlives

David Leupold

What does it mean, three decades after the demise of the USSR, to inhabit cities built for a future that has never arrived? In pursuit of the question – what is left of the socialist city? – the aim of this book project is not only to trace the material and mnemonic remains of the socialist city but to show how the Soviet discourse of the city would at times engender radical ideas that challenged the narrow confines of state socialism itself. As such, this will be an important resource for students, instructors, and researchers in understanding and thinking through socialism, post-socialist transformation and histories of the USSR.

The Future of Race, Ethnicity, and Culture in Social Work

Challenges and Opportunities

Edited by Mo Yee Lee Ohio State University, Jerome H Schiele, Michael S. Spencer (Kānaka Maoli)

This book explores how social work can navigate and shape the rapidly evolving dynamics of race, ethnicity, and culture. At a time when national debates and global changes are intensifying, this book provides a much-needed intellectual space to critically examine the current landscape and envision a future that aligns with social work's core values of justice, equity, and inclusion. Each chapter offers a reflective and critical appraisal of the present while proposing creative, preventive, and innovative solutions to promote racial and social justice.

The History and Afterlife of the 1979 Greensboro Massacre

The Dirt Is Still Bloody

Tiffany G.B. Packer

On November 3rd, 1979, in Greensboro, North Carolina, the Communist Workers Party (CWP) planned a "Death to the Klan" march in the predominately black, working class, public housing community of Morningside Homes. Nazis and Klansmen drove through and unloaded gunfire killing five CWP members. This work sets apart the story of Morningside Homes residents in this tragedy. This book will be of interest to scholars in civil rights/black power history and urban history, specifically those studying the ways in which notions of community politics in the urban south worked to dismantle racial residential segregation.

The Moral Economy of Plant-Based Futures

Johan Fischer Roskilde University, Denmark

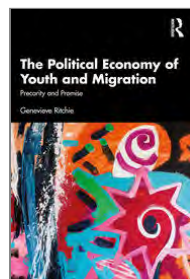

The Moral Economy of Plant-Based Futures explores the complex interplay between plant-based social movements and the evolving global economy, offering a timely exploration of how these movements respond to and shape calls for reduced meat and dairy production. An examination of the interaction of moral issues with economic arrangements, which combines a social movements perspective with a moral economy approach, the book offers a compelling lens for exploring how movements make markets. It will therefore appeal to scholars and students of sociology, anthropology, geography, development, movements and globalization with interests in food, the environment and the moral economy.

Jeremy J. Holland

Series: Routledge Studies in Political Sociology

This book explores the political worldviews of progressive American social movements and how they play an increasingly important role in defining social problems, setting the national political agenda, and offering viable policy solutions. Arguing that the liberal consensus that historically held the United States together politically has broken down, this book demonstrates how new forms of authoritarian and democratic populisms are being offered as alternatives to a rigged capitalist system by an unaccountable oligarchy. As such, it offers an important reference for both academics and activists in the fields of sociology, political science, and policy analysis.

The Politics of Antiracism

Theories, Movements and Global Perspectives

Edited by John Solomos University of Warwick, UK

Drawing on case studies from Britain, France, Brazil, the Dominican Republic, and Australia, the volume addresses key theoretical perspectives on antiracism, traces how antiracist movements and ideas have evolved in different national contexts and analyses their influence on policy and politics. The essays explore pressing issues including white gatekeeping in antiracist spaces, the commodification of antiracism, the invisibility of African diaspora experiences, anti-Asian racism, and the tensions between antiracist activism and state power. It provides critical insights into the paradoxes, possibilities, and limitations of antiracist politics in an era of global racial reckoning.

The Politics of Deception

Youth Political Participation in an Age of Global Crises

Judith Bessant, Rob Watts

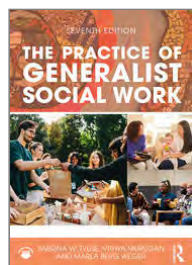

In a time of global crises, governments, international agencies and various experts claim to promote political participation that is inclusive of children and young people. This book details how these claims tend to be deceptive. Judith Bessant and Rob Watts illustrate how youth participation, as it is commonly practised, is deeply political, deceptive, highly contested and too often informed by outdated and harmful representations of young people.

The Road to Medicare for All

A Call to Action

Nancy J. Altman

Series: Aging and Society

With the question of healthcare at a pivotal juncture, this book provides a roadmap towards making healthcare a right, not a privilege. It inoculates readers against the arguments and tactics used by the monied interests to defeat a single-payer system. The Road to Medicare for All explains that the nation was heading in the right direction until the monied interests drove the nation onto the road we are now on. The book details how the nation can get back on track and finally reach the destination of universal, single-payer health insurance.

The Routledge International Handbook of the Histories of Sociology

Edited by Andrea Ploder University of Innsbruck, Austria,
Nicole Holzhauser Technische Universität
Braunschweig, Germany, Stephan Moebius University of Graz, Austria

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The Routledge International Handbook on the Histories of Sociology starts from a simple but powerful conviction: there is not one history of sociology, but a multitude of histories written in different parts of the world, from diverse standpoints, and through different theoretical and methodological lenses. Framed by a shift "from canon to connection," the volume reimagines disciplinary history as a relational and pedagogical resource rather than a fixed archive of classics. Designed for researchers, instructors, and both undergraduate and graduate students, it encourages readers to approach the histories of sociology as an open, contested, and collective endeavour.

The Routledge International Handbook on Raymond Aron

Edited by Christopher Adair-Toteff University of South Florida, USA

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

This handbook is the most comprehensive volume devoted to Raymond Aron's manifold interests. Providing the most up to date scholarship on Aron's work - from his earliest to his last writings - it reveals him to be more than a philosopher and a sociologist; he was also a first-rate political thinker, an expert on international relations, and an insightful cultural critic. As such, it will appeal to scholars with interests in the history of philosophy, the history of sociology, social theory and political sociology.

The Routledge International Handbook on Zygmunt Bauman

Edited by Michael Hviid Jacobsen Aalborg University, Denmark, Dariusz Brzeziński Polish Academy of Sciences, Poland, Mark Davis, Jack Palmer University of Leeds, UK

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The Routledge International Handbook on Zygmunt Bauman is a major, state of the art collection dedicated to the work and ideas of one of the most renowned intellectuals of the 20th and the 21st centuries. This important new volume will appeal to a new generation of readers who might find in Bauman a means of orienting themselves in the urgencies of the present conjuncture: climate change, digital society, economic crisis, intensification of migration flows, and more. It will therefore appeal to a wide international readership, including scholars and students of sociology, philosophy, and cultural studies, as well as historians, and literary and art scholars, and contemporary humanities.

4TH EDITION

The Social Dynamics of Family Violence

Angela J. Hattery University of Delaware, USA, Earl Smith University of Delaware, USA

This book explores family violence through the life course, from child abuse and neglect to intimate partner violence and elder abuse. A new chapter in this edition focuses closely on the public health dimensions of family violence and discusses the different theoretical frames and prevention and intervention approaches emanating from this perspective. With these newer discussions complementing the text's foundation in theory and methods and its notable coverage of violence within different families and intimate relationships, the fourth edition of The Social Dynamics of Family Violence is an essential reference for any course examining the sociology of family violence.

The Time of Infection

Biomedicine and the Problem of Restlessness

Marsha Rosengarten Goldsmith's University, UK

This book contributes to the exploration of the concept of time in the social sciences and philosophy, by reflecting on the ontological presuppositions of the logic of medical science and what this means for the response to communicable infection. The book will appeal to scholars in sociology, social theory, philosophy, and medical science interested in temporality, conceptions of power, and speculative thought.

8TH EDITION

They and We

Racial and Ethnic Relations in the United States and Beyond

Peter I. Rose

The first edition of They and We was published shortly after the March on Washington in August, 1963, where Martin Luther King, Jr. gave his memorable "I Have a Dream" speech and just before the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was passed by Congress. This book has been updated seven times since then and continues to provide grounding in the sociological study of the dilemmas of diversity in America, focusing on prejudice, discrimination, marginality, pluralism and other core concepts and ideologies in straightforward, jargon-free prose, and comes with access to an online Teaching Guide which provides instructors with a to the main themes of the book and to classroom discussions.

Towards Sound Athletic Talent Development

The Danish Dual Career Model

Jesper Stilling Olesen, Lotte Stausgaard, Skrubbeltrang, David Karen Bryn Mawr College, USA, Jens Christian Nielsen

This book offers important lessons for how policy can better balance athletics with schooling. To avoid a sheltered life of "only sport," some countries have introduced dual career programs that combine schooling with elite athletic development. This book empirically examines—using documents, survey data, interviews, ethnography, and official records—the implementation of Denmark's successful foray into dual career programs. Denmark's programs, while not without flaws, provide important lessons for the world as they encourage the creation of "whole sportspersons," and revelations from which offer valuable insights to scholars interested in the social aspects of sport and education.

Trust, Mistrust, Distrust, and Trust-building in the Nuclear Sector

Historical and Comparative Experience from Europe

Edited by Markku Lehtonen, Ana Prades, Josep Espluga-Trenc, Stathis Arapostathis

As nuclear energy experiences renewed global interest amid climate concerns and energy security challenges, understanding the social foundations of nuclear governance becomes increasingly critical for policymakers, industry leaders, and civil society organisations. This book explores the complex dynamics of trust, mistrust, and distrust in European nuclear energy and radioactive waste management through rigorous transnational, comparative, and historical analysis drawing on empirical cases from eight European countries—Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Russia, Spain, Sweden, and the UK.

Understanding Christian Nationalism

Perspectives on the Political Religion of Trump's America

Edited by Mark Silk, Rhys H. Williams

Offering the first comprehensive, interdisciplinary account of what Christian nationalism in America is and isn't, and how it became the political religion of Donald Trump's MAGA movement, the essays in this book describe the way Christian nationalism has embedded itself in American politics. Featuring essays that use historical methods, media analysis, survey data, interview and ethnographic observations, this book is essential to students, instructors, and readers in sociology, social theory, sociology of religion, cultural sociology, US history, and politics to understand the Christian nationalism integral to Trump's appeal and electoral success.

Understanding Social Changes in China

Contributions of the Chinese General Social Survey (CGSS)

Edited by Xiaogang Wu NYU Shanghai, China, Weidong Wang, Jia Miao, Angran Li

Drawing on two decades of data from the Chinese General Social Survey (CGSS), this collection examines fundamental social transformations in contemporary China across gender, marriage, living arrangements, and subjective well-being from 2003 to 2021. The contributions utilise longitudinal CGSS data to analyse key dimensions of social change including women's labour force participation patterns, evolving school-to-work transitions, changing residential independence amongst young adults, intermarriage trends across hukou boundaries, and the complex relationships between personal achievement, marriage, and happiness.

Unsettling Integration

Decolonial Acts of Belonging

Edited by Fiona Murphy Queen's University, Belfast, UK, Ulrike M. Vieten University of Belfast, UK

Series: Ethnic and Racial Studies

This book critically examines the concept of refugee integration, challenging its colonial underpinnings and structural asymmetries while exploring alternative possibilities for inclusion. Through grounded case studies in Ireland, the Netherlands, Germany, Turkey, and Kenya, it delves into how education, labor, and social participation can foster more just and inclusive political arrangements. By centering the lived experiences of refugees navigating hostile environments and restrictive policies, the volume highlights spaces of agency, dignity, and relation.

Village Transformation and New-Type Urbanization in China

Trends and Prospects

Lin Juren

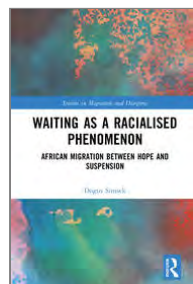

Despite decades of rural-to-urban transformation in China, much of the literature still treats villages and cities as distinct entities. This book reframes rural-urban transformation as an integrated process, examining administrative practices, implementation challenges, and the evolution of new-type urban communities. The book clarifies the institutional and everyday challenges of China's rapid rural transformation, offering timely insights for scholars of Chinese studies and global researchers and practitioners facing accelerated social and spatial restructuring.

Waiting as a Racialised Phenomenon

African Migration Between Hope and Suspension

Doğu Şimşek

Series: Studies in Migration and Diaspora

Waiting as a Racialised Phenomenon offers a powerful and original account of the lives of migrants from East, West, North, and Sub-Saharan Africa in Türkiye, grounded in rich ethnographic research. Challenging dominant understandings of waiting as a neutral or purely temporal condition, the book argues that waiting is a deeply racialised process shaped by migration governance, labour regimes, and spatial marginalisation. This innovative and timely will appeal to academics and post-graduate students with interests in migration and borders, race and racism, temporality and the politics of time, anthropology, and international development.

Why Should We Still Read Max Weber?

Michael Symonds

Series: Classical and Contemporary Social Theory

This fresh study of Max Weber demonstrates the ongoing strength and importance of Weber's understanding of our social existence. Original in its interpretation, Why Should We Still Read Max Weber? serves as a clear, accessible introduction to the social theory of one of the towering intellects of our age. Undergraduate students in sociology, social theory and philosophy will find this book directly useful in their studies, but it also serves as an entry point into Weber's theory for any reader with an interest in what intellectual reason has to offer on the social world around them.

Wired for Authoritarianism

American Oligarchies and How to Re-Wire America for the People

Charles Derber

Series: Universalizing Resistance

Connecting the social and political culture of the elite to the ideas of state and societal capture, as well as novel concepts of covert and overt wiring of power, Wired for Authoritarianism argues that the Trump era has moved America from a long-standing, mainly covert authoritarian structure toward a more dominant and overt authoritarianism – from a position in which oligarchs exercise power from outside of official government positions, to one in which corporate oligarchs are directly in top government positions.

Young Migrant Narratives

Ontological Security, Identity, and Belonging in Scotland

Marcus Nicolson

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

This book explores how young adult migrants in Scotland navigate everyday life through processes of ontological security-seeking, revealing how identity is negotiated in relation to experiences of uncertainty, perceived difference, and political narrative. This book will be of interest to scholars and students of international relations, human geography, nationalism studies, and critical migration research. It will also appeal to those engaged in debates on belonging, minority rights, and the politics of everyday life in contemporary Europe.
